RAMBLING AROUND

as I ramble around, folks tell me of this one or that one, that are over 90 years, so I guess this is a good place for longevity and in the near future I would like to run an item on that subject, so please give me the names of all those over 90 that you know about. So, far I have: Rausey Mathews, 93; Flora Derr, 92; Myrt Huntington,91; Charles Nickles, 94, and Rose Shriner, 90+

Charles and Ann Krow of 3 Arborvitae have been in the park since 1964, but go back to Montauk, L.I. (way out on the point) for 6 months each year as they have son, daughter and 6 grandchildren (some in college) to see and enjoy. They have a huge garden, all organic, no chemical spray used. Charles said, and when asked how they get such a fine garden that they can't feed all the neighbors, Ann said it is a lot of hand work and you can't let it get ahead of you

George and Belva Dean of 8 Broad St. are just back from 4 months up in Harrisburg, Pa. where they were in the midst of that 3 Mile Island Power Plant scare. Other than that, they had a very enjoyable summer, as they have 3 daughters, and 6 grandchildren nearby, also George was busy working in a small town meat market as a hobby, while Belva painted a mountain scene mural. Then, they added to their square dancing fun by a trip to Andy's Trout Farm in Northern Georgia, where square dancers from all over the nation congregate.

Roy and Gladys Donaldson, now at 19 Kumquat, after spending 3 winters on Lil Bit Ln. They spend about 6 months in Burlington, Iowa they have 2 sons, a daughter and 8 grandchildren. They have a house in the suburbs, where they can look right across the Mississippi to their farm land in Illinois. There was a bumper crop of corn and soy beans this year, but the sandy soil of their farm requires a lot of expensive irrigation. When asked what they did in the summer, Gladys said a lot of R & R getting ready for an active winter here, as Roy is a surf fisherman and Gladys is interested in all kinds of hobbies.

Joe and Lillian Fulford are new folks at 19 SW 7th. Ave. They came down here in September, but Lillian had to go into hospital for treatment, so they have just come back now from Bloomington, Ind. where they have some property on the White river, so Joe can do some fishing. He was with University of Indiana Power Plant for 33 years, while Lillian did her domestic engineering at home. She has a mom and dad living as well as 4 sisters and Joe has 3 sisters and a brother, so they will soon have plenty of visitors. Both said this is the friendliest place ever.

TEAMWORK was upheld by these young football stars who were busy washing cars in an attempt to raise money for the upcoming Jensen Beach Youth Football Festival on Sunday, Nov. 18th, to be held at Langford Park.

Seniors indignant over Iran

There was no question what the seniors were talking about last week: it was IRAN of course.

But, as you are no doubt 'fed-up,' I will not dwell on it. However, just a mention of the senior point of view might be of interest to see if it differs much from the general public's.

The first few days there was lots of talk but not much concern, then about Friday, there was venomous indignation that we had gotten into such a helpless situation, of having a bunch of street hoodlums, thumb their nose at USA. Next, came the suggestions: sit it out, be calm, don't jeopardize the lives of the hostages; hold up shipments of spare military parts and food; slip the Shah into Mexico or Egypt; send all Iranian students home; put all Iranians in concentration camp for their own safety(?); hold Iranian officials hostages until USA citizens are released; and even one very angry gal wanted to drop 'the bomb' on the hole d-- bunch of them. Who wants to be president of USA, it's not easy?

This is a very hazardous time of the year, as it is dusk, (when most accidents occur) when the go-home traffic is at a maximum. So, here are some hints to help you keep your insurance record unblemished. Remember to blame or not, all accidents go against your record, resulting in increased premiums.

Intersections are the most dangerous spots, never assume because you have the right of way, that the other guy will stop, often he won't. Also, use the left, right, left rule, of first looking to the left, where a car can be the nearest to you, then look to the right, for that car that has the right of way and if all clear look back to left again, to make sure a fast car has not come up on you. Then, if all is clear, proceed with caution.

Another point of trouble, is parked cars pulling out or swinging open a door, so it is a good idea, that as you go down a row of parked cars, keep your eye on the drivers seat, if filled, be ready for the unexpected. Good luck for now, watch out: more hints next week.

Seniors are being discovered and it's about time. Business, large and small according weekly publication are now gearing their products and services to folks over 60, and offering discounts, like Greyhound Bus that now gives 15 percent. The article, points out that there are now over 24.1 million over 65, and increasing 20 percent every 10 years. Maybe soon, there will be senior size meals at senior prices, goods packaged for families of 1 or 2 and have some of the products on TV and ads in papers will be modeled by senior citizens instead by youngsters.

Then, at the state level, Chuck Nergard, who meets all seniors 9 to 11 a.m. Fridays at J.B. C of C, says surveys are being taken to study the senior problems and they find Florida has the highest percentage of seniors in the country with 38 percent right now, that is projected to have 50 percent by 1990, so it is no wonder, politicians and big business are discovering the seniors.

Now, on the local level there is a switch, the schools will make their facilities available for senior activities, whenever they are not in school use (previously, there were exorbitant maintenance and custodial fees). They say the schools are for the young kids as well as the old. They probably realize if they want to get their projects approved they will have to have senior support, as with senior's better voter turn-out and near majority of population (if they are so minded) they could swing any election. So, public is becoming aware of seniors.

The HCCC (Health Cost Containment Committee) is still alive and ticking, as shown by increased attendance at meeting, Tues. Nov. 6, when a survey report from White House was discussed. The survey showed income levels for all family sizes at for most large cities and shows a retired family of two in Orlando would be considered below poverty level with incomes of $6100 (fig. correct for inflation), therefore it was felt that many seniors of Martin County would need health cost assistance. Then, to find out just how many, it was proposed to send out a very simple questionnaire, that would only ask: Have you had a health cost payment problem recently; do you have health insurance; and the number in your family. It was hoped AARP members would assist with the project at booths in shopping centers.

CHAPTER EVENTS

There was a quoum of the board and a good turnout of chairmen at the ExCom meeting of Thur. Nov. 8, when many chapter problems were discussed and the following are of general interest.

A "Martin County Senior Center Association" is to be set-up and incorporated as a non-profit organization to handle the 'building-fund' that has been accumulated. By-laws are to be drawn-up regards to the use of the money, so the funds might be used to generate fund raising drives and to solicit large amounts for the undertaking.

Roger Nickles, of County Commissioner's office reports that one row of logs were put in place last week (Log Cabin project) then the equipment failed. However, it is expected that soon the logs will be assembled to the eves, when additional funding will be required, and at the Commission meeting, Tues. Nov. 13, the front money for this funding will be approved. In the meantime, some of the equipment has been delivered and stored for later use, such as: table and chairs, TV set, refrigerator, etc. These two steps should assure local seniors that before too long they will have a center of their own like the other areas of the country.

A booth at the County Fair was authorized for 1980, as it has been a worth while project for the past few years. It gives the general public and all seniors a chance to see what AARP is doing for the community. One of the ways, the chapter lives up to the AARP motto of, "To serve and not to be servered." Senior Center building blocks will be available, there will be a Raffle of many handy craft items, etc. Committee to work it out.

A sad note, the WMCF spot announcement project was too successful, and resulted in too many telephone calls to be handled by volunteers. It will have to go into 'hiatus' until a better answering arrangement is worked out, the two years that Ernie C. and Boyd Smith were handling it, each at times would handle over 250 calls per month, so no doubt it is as problem. The equally successful Senior Information Centers in the shopping plazas have been in 'hiatus' for a year or more, but if volunteers can be obtained, it will be reinstated. Info. 283-7639.

The Bulletin, again has a problem. Associate Editor Betty Taylor was pressed into service as chapter recording secretary and resigned her bulletin position. Therefore, Boyd is in need of a new assistant. Anyone interested, with or without editorial experience, please get in touch with Boyd at 334-2244.

General Meeting, Thursday, Nov. 15, 1:30 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church will have a program and refreshments by the First Federal S & L Assoc. The new rule, of all members wearing membership cards for admission will be enforced for the first time. There were all sorts of complaints about it being difficult to do, so there was a suggestion, that the cards could be gaily worn on a bright ribbon around the neck (men too?). Call girls will be greeters so the members can become better acquainted with their own gal.

Also, the discount program was 'chewed over.' Discounts are a way of life for seniors in many parts of the country, and although many businesses do give the discounts, there is no organized list. MCCA gave it a try, and so did AARP a few years ago, but it petered out. Anyone interested in giving it a real good try this time call 283-7639.

Canadians returning

Many of our Canadian neighbors have returned to Venture during the past two weeks. A few of them found damage from "David" but most of them said they were just happy to be back in South Florida.

Chris and Scotty Fair have returned from Nova Scovia. Val Calahan and her son, David, got in this week for a brief stay. Evelyn and Seymour Diener who lost their complete trailer in the hurricane moved into their new home this week. We hope they are happy with their new facilities.

We hope all of you will take the opportunity soon to stop by and become acquainted with our new Venture III Secretary, Dorothy Bohnert. Dorothy lives in South Stuart. Drop by and let her begin to put faces and names together.

About 80 people attended Bingo last Wednesday night. Remember it starts at 8 p.m. so mark your calendars.

Try to attend the meetings of the recreational committee. All input will be helpful in getting the social season started.

Venture Three

We are all proud of eight year-old' Bobbi Wilson, daughter of Marilyn and Bob Wilson, lot 881, who won a blue ribbon Sunday for first place in the 50-yard freestyle at the Southern Florida AAU swimmi g meet in Boca Raton.

She has now won a total of six ribbons in her last two meets. We are especially proud since she learned to swim right here in our own Venture III pool at the age of three under the direction of Yvonne Wisnecke. She now swims for the Martin County Swimming Team.

Sluggish MI shuts down Tigers, 14-0

BY DONNIE WILKIE

Walter Battle and Jeff Wickersham scored touchdowns, and the Merritt Island defense shut down the Martin County offensive attack, as the Mustangs recorded their 28rd consecutive high school football victory — a 14-0 decision over the Tigers.

Battle's touchdown gave the Mustangs, who set a school record with the victory for their longest-ever winning streak, a quick 7-0 lead with 7:19 remaining in the first quarter, and they never were headed. Wickersham later capped an eight play, 77-yard drive with a nine-yard option run. The Mustangs' final touchdown march also included a 48-yard pass from Wickersham to Carl Armstrong.

Defense was the theme for Merritt Island, already the District 10-AAAA champions and the state's number one ranked football squad. The Mustangs held Martin County to just 113 yards in total offense, while quarterback David McCaughey tried to crack it with an ultra-conservative game plan. The Tigers' Port Salerno-raised signal-caller put the ball in the air only five times, completing only one — to Tony Harris — for five yards.

The Mustangs raised their record to 9-0 with the victory, while the Tigers (who, in their defense have lost just once when favored to win, against vero) slipped to 6-4.

"They really only completed one long pass on us and had a few good runs," observed Tiger Head Coach Fred Chase after the game. "We just made a couple of mistakes, and it cost us. If you don't play smart football, you don't win."

"They are probably the best coached team in the state," complimented Chase. "A lot of people second-guess Gerald Odom (the Head Coach), but they probably do the best job of preparing a football team for a game that I've ever seen a coach do. There's no one glaring weakness — nothing to pick on. You just have to play better football."

Martin County didn't.

"We were hoping to get a break and cash it in," explained Chase. "We did recover that fumble, but we didn't take advantage of it."

The Tigers, trailing 14-0 at halftime, got their best chance to score on the second play of the fourth quarter, then recovering a fumble at the Mustang 40-yard line. For the Tigers, that opportunity should have been a coveted one — they visited only as far

Gene Hall (42) is trying to block out Cowling, but the attempt was unsuccessful. The Mustangs ran their record to 9-0 with a 14-0 win. "Bum" Evans, Saints win MCJFL Upper title

BY DONNIE WILKIE

To those at last Saturday night's Port St. Lucie-Port Salerno Upper Division Martin County Junior Football League game, he must have looked like a lost rider from an old Wild, Wild West flick— to those from Port St. Lucie, he looked like Jim Evans, the coach of the National Conference champion Saints.

That's just who he was, though many might have mistaken him for the Houston Oilers' Bum Phillips, with his pointed boots and the get-up-and-go cowboy hat perched clamly at the top of his head.

Evans could only stand and watch — there was virtually nothing he could do — as his Saints, who by Saturday night needed little, if any coaching, crushed, trampled and rejected the already-heavy underdogs, the Port Salerno Panthers, in the 1979 championship game, 39-6.

"What can I say?" asked Evans, who guided the Saints to Port St. Lucie's first-ever MCJFL championship in any division. "It's really great when you have a team that makes it fun to coach. They (the kids) were really great all year."

His ending the rodeo (the season) with a championship, the cowboy (Evans) spoiled the hoe-down (the victory celebration) across the prairie (the field), where the more Eastern-oriented Johnny Dotson was plotting an upset of the league's strongest team.

Dotson claims he won't be back when the herd comes in again next fall, though not everyone believes him. Citing the various disciplinary problems and the large amount of time needed for such a role in the Port Salerno football program (he is also the town's football representative), Dotson "was hoping for one last victory.

"This year, I'll have to settle for the American Conference championship and retire," said Dotson after his team was thoroughly outplayed by the bigger, stronger Saints. "This was a rough year, you know. I may stay as CHAMPIONS ALL!—When these girls grow older and move into Martin County High School, there is a good chance that you'll see some of them — historically, perhaps as many as half — on the Tiger football field and basketball court. They are the Jensen Beach junior football cheerleaders, and in the five years of the Martin County Junior Football League cheerleading competition, they have made a shambles of the rest of the field. Last year's competition marked the first time in the event's history that neither of the two squads (Upper and Lower Divisions) Con their division, but in last week's competition, held at Palm City Field, the localers came back strong. Both teams — the Upper Division Razorbacks (left) and the Lower Division Barracudas (right) captured the County championship, a clean sweep for Jensen Beach. Members of the Razorback squad (left) are: (from left to right), Back Row standing — Lauryn Sweeney, Lisa Williams, Kim Reilly, Nicole Matlack and Janet Holder. Front Row kneeling — Susan Tonnacliff, Cindy Rowell, Nacy Raisch, Stacy Gill and Jackie Wilson. The Razorbacks are coached by Sandy Gill (not pictured). Members of the Barracuda squad (right) are: (from left to right), Back Row standing — Isabel Monticello, Kerri Lord, Beth Hunecke and Mary Bevis. Front Row kneeling — Ellen Feeley, Linda Mang and Kiki O'Connor. Absent at the time of the picture were Lauren Thrulow and Lisa Halverson. Barracudas are coached by Patsy Lord. Both squads will be participating in this weekend's Youth Football Festival at Langford Park.

Wesley, Hornets run over Panthers for championship

Sam Wesley put together a spectacular show for those gathered at Palm City Field Saturday night.

The Port Salerno Panthers, however, paid a steep price for the 'privilege' of witnessing the running wizardry exhibited by the Stuart Hornets' quarterback— the Junior Football League Lower Division championship as the undefeated Hornets smashed Port Salerno, 38-6.

Wesley, who did his share of smashing during the Hornets' clean sweep of the Lower Division schedule, exploded for 144 yards rushing, including five touchdowns, leading an easy victory despite the often uninspired play of his teammates.

Upset efforts by the Panthers were quite frequent in the first half, while the Hornets staggered through their state of hypnosis, but Wesley's 43-yard quarterback sneak on the last play of the half gave Stuart their second touchdown and a 13-6 halftime edge.

The Panthers (4-3 during the regular season) dominated much of the early play, moving the ball easily against Stuart's usually stone walled defense. After the Hornets broke the ice early in the second period with Wesley's first score, a 19-yard burst around the left end, the Panthers wasted little time in striking back. Herbert Mouton broke away on the first play, galloping to Stuart's 17-yard line after the Panthers had taken control at their own 31, a 32-yard gain.

It took the underdogs six plays to reach paydirt, but quarterback Julius Graham hit Germaine Patterson with a perfect pass in the end zone for the tying points.

Port Salerno appeared to have things going their way, especially after Wesley fumbled at his own 31, just two plays later. James Clark covered the loose ball, but the Panthers couldn't capitalize, returning the favor when Graham coughed up the ball on fourth down at the 37. There remained just seconds in the first half, but Wesley, lining his team up without a huddle or a play called, took the snap on first down and sprinted straight through the middle of the defense untouched for 43 yards.

When the Horn is snapped out of their dreams in the second half, scoring in only two plays on their first possession, the Panthers were in trouble. Kevin Howard, who gained 51 yards on eight attempts for the Hornets, erupted for 33 of them on the second play of the third quarter, converting a simple off tackle play into a two-touchdown lead for Stuart, 20-6.

Later in the period, Graham fumbled a snap from center and Corzell Wiley recovered for Stuart, at the Panther 35. On the next play, Wesley darted easily into the Port Salerno secondary, where Clark's diving attempt to stop him netted the Panther a face full of dirt. The Hornet roadrunner, meanwhile, was in the end zone.

Moments later, Mouton fumbled at his own ten, and Wesley scooped it up and ran into the end zone, making it 32-6. The Stuart scoring machine added its final touchdown on the game's final play, when Wesley broke loose on an end sweep and danced 55 yards, into the end zone.

Fessel, Santagata triumph in tourney

Ed Fessel continuing the consistant pace he set for the first 36 holes of the Sandpiper Bay Member-Member Golf tournament, racked up a string of pars on the front side of the Sinner's championship course to lead the team of Sandy Santagata and Fessel to the coveted title as the F & S combo posted a 33-under par tally of 183 in the 54-hole major event.

Robinson stars in college openers

Former Fort Pierce Central guard Arthur Robinson made his college debut at Bryan College, in Dayton, Tennessee last week, and drew nothing but praise from his new coach, Wayne Dixon.

Robinson, playing the backup point guard position, scored 10 points in the team's first game, a loss, but he outdid that in game two, when the Mirror "Lucky Seven" member from 1978-79 scored 12 points in Bryan's first win.

The scrappy, hustling Robinson contributed a basket and two free throws in the last minute to send the game into overtime, where Bryan took command. The tournament was played at Olivet Nazarene College (Illinois).

Dixon said he was "most pleasantly surprised" at the play of robinson in the first two games.

PSL basketball registration Saturday

Registration for basketball in Port St. Lucie will be Saturday afternoon, November 17, according to Basketball Chairman and Coordinator Jack Clanton.

The league is being operated by the Port St. Lucie Athletic Association, which was formed in June, and will include divisions for all youngsters, boys and girls, aged 10-16.

The registration is at Sportsman's Park, from 12 noon to 4 p.m. Saturday. There will be a fee for various expenses incurred by the league of $10 per player. Each youngster must bring a parent or guardian, as well as a birth certificate.

Pro's win, lead softball league

Despite some uninspired hitting early in the game, Professional Drapery Service (PDS, or the Professionals) came charging back to defeat Foster Wright Construction, 9-4 in the featured game Sunday night in the Port St. Lucie Slo-Pitch Softball League.

Pete Jaugenheimer's run-scoring single in the sixth inning broke a 2-2 tie, and the Pro's never again trailed. John Sisson added a solo home run in the ninth inning, when the Professionals (9-3) scored their final five runs.

In other action, the Florida Home Finders downed the Civitan club, 16-15, as Mike Greed ripped a three-run, bases-loaded triple in the bottom of the ninth inning.

Citizen's Federal pulled the surprise of the night, when they stopped Gold Shield, 19-8. Starting pitcher Tony Alfino picked up the victory, and handed Gold Shield their sixth loss in 12 outings, leaving them in third place, but a full three games behind the Professionals.

A check of the current standings shows the Professionals ahead of the field, as they have won their last eight consecutive games since suffering a 1-3 start. Their 9-3 record places them a half-game (but a full game in the loss column) ahead of the Home Finders (9-4).

Western Seniors tourney underway

About 600 persons, representing nearly every state in the nation, have converged on Sandpiper Bay Resort in Port St. Lucie for a Western Seniors Golf Association tournament.

The tourney began Tuesday, Nov. 13, and runs through Thursday, Nov. 15.

A total of 265 men are competing in a men's tourney, and 175 women are competing in a women's event.

Fifth-grade football at JBE

The fifth-graders, both girls and boys, at Jensen Beach Elementary School will play in seven-on-seven flag football games next Wednesday, November 21 at the school site in Jensen Beach.

With 14 girls on each team (seven on the field at once), the action will get underway at 9:30 a.m. when the two teams of girls (picked by Physical Education teacher Marty Figuri) will square off. Later, at 1:30 p.m., the boys, with essentially the same rules, will take the field. Again, seven will play at a time, with 14 on each team, all composed of fifth graders.

While all this is going on, the rest of the student body, which will be impatiently awaiting Thanksgiving vacation, will be allowed out of classes to witness the games.

Saints smash Panthers to win Upper Division

the representative, but I'm not going to coach again.

"This was a good group of kids, though."

Dotson found it especially rough, as did Evans and the Saints, when the lights at Palm City Field were accidentally shut off, leaving the teams without a place to play for about 25 minutes, while the lights cooled down enough to be turned on again (in the middle of the first half).

The Panthers, trailing only 6-0 at the time, lost control of the proceedings soon afterward, when Cleve Brooks muffed a punt at his own one-yard line, and Scott Bartz recovered for the Saints. Curtis Wilson, who scored four touchdowns in the game, scored on the first play from the one, and Port St. Lucie was on their way to a 33-0 halftime advantage.

Brooks, who represented most of the Port Salerno offense throughout the 1979 season, was shut down by the bone-crushing PSL defense, gaining only 55 yards on eight attempts, with 35 of them coming on a break-away effort in the last three minutes of the game, leading to the Panthers' only touchdown. Brooks did the honors with 2:47 remaining on a two-yard plunge.

But while Brooks was struggling for occasional big-gainers, Wilson and Jerry Roberts, Port St. Lucie's dynamic backfield duo, were running circles around the exhausted Panther defense. Dotson, with only 13 players suited up, had to use most of his troops both ways. Evans (excuse us, the cowboy) was able to rest his cattle more often, and substituted freely in the second half, when most of first stringers grazed on the splinters near the Port St. Lucie side of the prairie.

Roberts galloped for 100 yards on 16 carries, while Wilson romped for 99 yards in 19 tries. The two even hooked up on the same play once, when Wilson tossed a 33-yard TD pass out of the shotgun formation to Roberts, making it 26-0 at the time.

"I think we had about a hundred missed tackles," reflected Dotson after the game. "We had them in the backfield but let go. That's bad tackling. If we had made the tackles, I think it would have been a different game. Don't get me wrong, though. I respect their backs tremendously. They are very good power runners."

Evans, though, was positive that Port Salerno could never beat his current team.

"I told you after the Indiantown game (the first game of the season and their only loss) that we were going to go undefeated the rest of the way and win the whole thing. We had seen the toughest team in the league when we played Indiantown."

Fort Salerno only managed three relatively successful offensive plays all night — a 24-yard run by Greg armstrong on their first play of the game, as well as Brooks' runs of 22 and 35 yards on the final drive. The Panthers could only produce 75 yards and three first downs, while the Saints' offense cranked out 261 yards and 12 first downs.

The Saints finished the season with a 7-1 record, while the Panthers were 5-3, the losses coming against Port St. Lucie (twice) and Indiantown.

'igers' offense unsteady against MI, hopes for rebound Friday

the MI 49 throughout the rest of the ne but after two runs and an omplete pass netted just five yards. Tigers were forced to give up ession of the ball, despite a fake t on fourth down.

Battle, who rambled through Fort Pierce Central defenders at will two weeks earlier, could only manage 49 yards against the recently solid Tiger defense, in 16 attempts. In fact, after their two early touchdowns (in their first three possessions), the Mustangs never mounted a serious offensive threat. Only at the end of the first half did they come close, when they moved close enough for a 38 yard field goal attempt with 29 seconds left, which sailed wide to the left.

The Tigers, then, will carry a mighty defensive reputation into Friday's Homecoming outing against Twin Lakes, at Tiger Stadium. The Rams are just 3-6, and Chase, as well as just about everyone else in Tigerland, is confident of a win, and the winning season that would go with it.

"If we play well and stick to our own game (which is run, run, run), we should beat Twin Lakes," summed up the coach.

Game time is 8 p.m., and a Homecoming Queen will also be crowned, at halftime. In addition, the annual Martin County High School Homecoming parade will march through Stuart Friday afternoon, at 2 p.m.

The public is invited to attend the afternoon program which will be a fund raising auction to benefit H.M.O. (Hadassah Medical Organization). For information, call auctioneer Dorothea Bereck (878 1371) or President Ann Schoenbrun (283 5850).

Air Force Sgts. meet

The Treasure Coast Air Force Sergeants Association, Chapters 564 and A 564, will have an executive council and general meeting tonight at the Mr. K. Shoes Inc. in the Publix Shopping Center in Stuart.

The executive council meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m., with the general meeting to follow at 8 o'clock. A buffet and open bar will be provided at no charge. It will be a joint meeting with the women's auxiliary, and wives are welcome.

Arsenic and Old Lace opens

Barn Theatre's production of "Arsenic and Old Lace" opens Friday at 8:30 p.m. at the theatre on East Ocean Blvd.,

Audiences will be treated to a beautiful set, designed by Ray Hilton and special costumes designed for the two main characters, the Brewster sisters, by Bernie Donato.

The story of murder and mayhem caused by two sweet old ladies is one of true humor. The why and how they dispense their elderberry wine (liberally laced with more than a little arsenic) will have you smiling a warm inner smile. A cellar with the Panama Canal and a window seat with cadavers will keep the viewers happily amused. This is a very funny show; a welcome relief from the trials of day to day living. A PUBLIX THANKSGIVING.

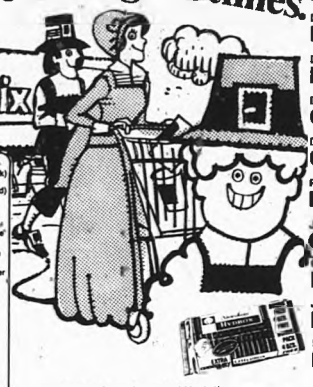
Good food for good times.



CRANBERRY-ORANGE TEA BREAD

½ Cup Walnuts, Coarsely Chopped
2½ Cups All-Purpose Flour
1 Tablespoon Double-Acting Baking Powder
¼ Teaspoon Baking Soda
¼ Teaspoon Salt
2 Cups Cranberries, Chopped
4 Teaspoons Grated Orange Peel
8 Tablespoons (1 Stick) Softened Butter (Preferably Unsalted)
¼ Cup Sugar
¼ Cup Honey
2 Large Eggs
½ Cup Fresh Orange Juice

A Recipe of Cook's Kitchen, Inc.

1. Toast the chopped walnuts in a baking pan in a 300 F. oven for 15 minutes. Allow them to cool.
2. Sift the flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt together into a bowl. In a small bowl, combine the cranberries, the orange peel and the nuts.
3. In the bowl of an electric mixer, cream the butter until it is light; add the sugar and honey gradually, beating the mixture until it is very light. Add the eggs, one at a time. Add the flour mixture (reserving ¼ cup) at lowest speed, alternating it with the orange juice.
4. Toss the berry mixture with the reserved flour, and fold it into the batter.
5. Preheat the oven to 350 F.
6. Turn the batter into a buttered and floured loaf pan, approximately 9-by-5-by-3 inches. Bake it in the center of the oven for 1 hour and 15 minutes.
7. Cool the loaf for 10 minutes in the pan; unmold the bread on a rack to cool it completely. Wrap it in plastic wrap and keep it a day before serving.

IRCC pre-registration for Spring semester

Indian River Community College is now accepting pre-registration for Spring Semester (January, 1980).

Classes fill up quickly so register now to be sure and get the courses you want. Roschman, Mueller, and Main Campus sites are open from 8:00 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. and the Okeechobee site is open from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Register at any site - the earlier the better!!

USE YOUR MIRROR for paper mache after you read it

COVER ARTIST, A. E. "Beanie" Backus, with Dr. Kathy Kirry Wockley and Henry Christen of Jensen Beach, discuss the cookbook soon to be available at Indian River Community College.

Indian River cookbooks to arrive at college shortly

The "Indian River Cuisine" will be off the presses shortly and is scheduled to arrive at Indian River Community College the latter part of this month, ready in time for Christmas gift giving.

Sponsored by the Indian River Community College Foundation, Inc., as a special fund raising project, the proceeds from the sales will be used for furthering the goals of the Foundation by providing academic scholarships, programs, and services for Indian River Community College and its students.

This book, which is certain to be a collector's item, contains 528 pages of remarkable recipes encompassing every aspect of cooking from appetizers through desserts, including sections on beverages and breads. International, as well as area recipes are included. Color photographs highlighting our four-county area combine with the recipes and diverse cooking hints to complement the volume. The cover, designed by A. E. "Beanie" Backus, is an artistic view of the Indian River.

A reception will be held at the College's Open House on Sunday, December 9, from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. at which time Mr. Backus will personally autograph the cookbooks. The reception will take place in the upper level of the St. Lucie Room in the Koblegard Student Center and is open to the public.

It is still possible to purchase "Indian River Cuisine" at pre publication cost which gives you the advantages of insuring your volume(s) in time for holiday gift giving, and avoiding the post publication price increase to $12.95. This price increase goes into effect December 1, so if you wish to order "Indian River Cuisine" at its pre publication cost of $8.95 ($9.31 with Florida sales tax, $10.81 with tax and shipping and handling), we must receive your order before that date.

For further information, please telephone the Development Office at Indian River Community College, 464-2000 in Fort Pierce, 567-7132 in Vero Beach, 287-2006 in Stuart, or 763-6227 in Okeechobee, extension 212. Orders may be mailed to the attention of the Development Office at Indian River Community College, 3209 Virginia Avenue, Fort Pierce, Florida 33450.

Sweet Adelines meet on Monday

The Treasure Coast Chapter of Sweet Adelines, Inc., under the direction of Louis L. Maser, took time out recently to celebrate the birthday of evelyn "Lynn" Sprentzer.

Cake and punch, with a halloween theme, was served. "Happy Birthday" was sung, barbershop style.

Lynn was born and raised in Long Island, New York, and came to Port St. Lucie in 1973. She is employed by Sears, is the mother of six children and has been singing lead with the chorus for three and a half years.

The chorus is happy to welcome the following new members: Alberta "Bertie" Pettengill, tenor; Elsie Shpetz, lead; Grace Riley, baritone; and Barbara Strangeland in the bass section.

The Treasure Coast Chapter needs about a dozen women with good voices to help fill their chorus. The next rehearsal will be Monday, Nov. 19, at 7:30 p.m. at Indian River Community College, Room R 135 on the east end of the campus. For more information you may call 878 9027, or 334 6558, or 464 3691. All visitors are welcome.

IRCC offers great Western books course

Open up a new world with IRCC's literary series entitled, "Great Books of the Western World."

Come and romance with Shakespeare, realize with Steinbeck, rhyme with Poe and much more! Class starts Thursday, Nov. 15, from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. and runs for six weeks.

For further information call the Continuing Education Department at 464-2000, ext. 217 or the Port St. Lucie Community Center at 878-1390.

Registration will take place at the first meeting, Nov. 15.

Martin authorizes $ 5 million in bonds for water system

BY BOB FRYER

Martin County commissioners voted Tuesday to authorize issuance of $5 million in revenue bonds to buy the Southern Gulf Utilities system, to develop a north county wellfield, and to build a water treatment plant which will be booked up to the SGU system by 1984.

The action was taken at a special county commission meeting and means that unless commissioners back out at the last minute, they'll soon be in the water business.

Included in the action taken was an agreement to buy the SGU water system, which now serves Sewall's Point and Hutchinson Island. The purchase price is $905,500.

Although the $5 million in bonds are now being prepared for sale, county staff members are also working on an alternative, cheaper means of financing the jump into the water business."

It should take 60 to 90 days before the bonds will be ready to sell. During that time, commissioners hope to learn whether the county can qualify for a combination loan and grant from the federal Farmers Home Administration. If that's the case, more than $3 million of the needed $5 million may come from that source.

Provided the Farmers Home loan application falls through, the county will have the option in 60 to 90 days to go ahead and sell the bonds, to obtain short-term financing in the hope that the bond market will be more favorable later on, or to back out of the entire deal. It is not expected that the county will back out, however, and once financing is settled, the purchase contract with SGU is to be signed. That must take place within six months of Tuesday's vote.

The revenue from the operation of the water system is what will be pledged for the bonds, thereby eliminating the need to use property taxes for the water system.

Regardless of what method of financing is selected, the plan for how to spend the money will remain the same. That is, to buy the present SGU system at $905,500, then to dig a number of wells off Commercial Street west of the proposed Pinecrest Lakes development, to build a water treatment plant at the wellfield site, to install water lines to the SGU plant to Sewall's Point, and to run a line across the Jensen Causeway that will hook up to a SGU water line that now serves Indian River Point on the causeway.

Phase one plans call for digging six wells at the wellfield site and for the water treatment plant to be capable of supplying 2.4 millions gallons per day.

As the SGU contract to obtain water from the City of Stuart expires in 1984, and as it is expected to take two years to build the planned facilities and install the water lines, commissioners are shooting for a construction start by Jan. 1, 1982.

Though Commissioner Frank Wacha and commission Chairwoman Maggy Hurchalla said the exact routes for water lines from the new treatment plant to the existing SGU facilities are not set, a sketch in a feasibility report shows lines running down Commercial Street to Indian River Drive, then south to hook up with an existing SGU line. Also, to complete the loop, the sketch shows a line would run north from the Commercial St.-Indian River Drive intersection to the causeway, then across the causeway to an SGU line. Commissioner Wacha indicated that the line running south toward Sewall's Point may go along Savanna Road, then over to SR 707 near Beacon 21 rather than down Indian River Dr. He added that there will be no mandatory hook ups.

Commissioners authorized Wacha to establish a hook-up policy and to negotiate hook-ups with developers.

JIM WEISBECKER had to tote a grandchild on his back to get her to his home on Hyline Drive last week. His was one of seven homes on the street that were flooded with water after two days of heavy rains. He had to move out for awhile, but he praised county officials for quick action in relieving the problem.

Wacha looks for permanent solutions to drain problems

Although a number of Jensen Beach residents are hoping to get word today that a county Health Department directive to boil drinking water can be lifted, it may be quite awhile before permanent drainage solutions can be found.

Russell Miller, director of the Environmental Health Section of the county Health Department, said that results of tests on 35 to 40 wells in the Jensen Beach area should be in today (Wednesday, Nov. 21). And, if the results are as Russel expects, those residents can stop boiling drinking water and return to normal use of their wells.

Torrential rains on Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 12 and 13, caused widespread flooding in the Jensen Beach area. Drainage ditches and creeks overflowed and a number of roads were under water.

Within a couple of days, the water receded in most areas. However, there were several low-lying areas where the water remained. A pond behind Eckerd's Drugs in Jensen overflowed and flooded portions of Landa Drive and Sunview Road, and another pond behind Hyline Drive overflowed so severly that water seeped into seven houses and was about two feet deep in the road. Still other areas flooded and remain flooded include the Baker Road area, an area near radio station WSTU, an area near Jensen Trailer Sales off SR 707, and portions off North Savanna Road.

In all areas where water covered the tops of wells, the county Health Department instructed residents to boil their water before drinking it. Miller said the measure was to protect against possible contamination from flooded septic tanks, but he said he felt the actual chances of contamination were remote. "We expect the tests will show the wells are ok to use," he said, adding that anyone who had a well covered by water who has not had a well water sample taken should call the Health Department for a test.

In some of the worst flooded areas, the Jensen Beach and Rio Fire Departments, as well as a crew from Stuart's Farm Service of Indiantown, pumps were used to get rid of the standing water. Pumping operations by Stuart's Farm Service began last Thursday and were operating on Monday.

Clifford Stuart said he was pumping out the Hyline Drive area as a free service to the county. "I've been wanting to demonstrate to the county what our pumps could do, and this is a good opportunity to show them what sort of product we can build. Who knows, maybe someday they'll want to buy some of our pumps? Even if they don't, we saw they needed help, we were helping," he said.

Jim Weisbecker, whose home was one of seven on Hyline to have water come inside, said Monday that the water was out of the road and contained in drainage swales. "A couple of more days of pumping should put a good dent in it," he said, adding that he wanted to "congratulate Frank Wacha on the job he and county officials did. They deserve a lot of credit for relieving the flooded condition."

Weisbecker said he had to move out of his home a few days, as did several other residents on his street. And, he said as of Monday, he was still limiting use of his septic system.

County Commissioner Wacha said that the worst of the immediate problems from the flooding have been solved, but said it may be awhile before permanent solutions to the drainage problems are solved.

"I'm making a permanent solution to the problems my number one priority," he said. Wacha added that while Cliff Raulerson of the county Road Department and Leif Scherer of the Environmental Services office have worked closely in relieving immediate problems, it will take work from the Engineering Department to come up with long range solutions.

"We have to find permanent solutions, and that's what we'll be looking for," he said, then commented, "If anyone has any words of wisdom for us, we'd appreciate them."

Wacha said that without "a lot of civic pride" and hard work by a number of persons the football festival at Langford Park over the weekend would not have been possible.

Wacha said he could not remember flooding as bad as last week's since 1957 or 1959. "I don't remember which year it was, but we had severe flooding then."

Jensenites on IRS Refund list

Five accounts listed as those of Jensen Beach residents are among taxpayers on a million plus dollar refund list accrued by the Internal Revenue Service, according to Charles O DeWitt, district director for Florida.

The checks range from one to several thousand dollars, with the average being $278, DeWitt says. The checks were returned to IRS undeliverable to the addresses indicated on the tax returns.

Those in this area include Craig H Bendl, James B Evetts, Kenneth Heavlin, David K and Lynn Lehman and Stafford A Short Jr.

The checks are not available through local offices, DeWitt emphasized in the telephone directory.

A MASSIVE PUDDLE of water in the Hyline Drive area was no obstacle for these four young ladies. They simply removed their shoes, rolled up their pants, and walked right through. They are, from the left: Kerry Lukas, Rummo, Shelly Bowdish, and Theresa Schieling.

Neese setback problem solved with purchase

The problem over the misplaced air conditioner located on the side of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Neese has been rectified by what Neese's attorney calls a boundry line adjustment.

Approximately fifteen feet of property adjacent to the area in question was purchased from their neighbor, Dr. Philip Mendell.

Although the Neeses do not agree with the reasons for the zoning ordinance, they nevertheless agreed to comply with regulations. Mrs. Neese is known professionally as Trudy Kennedy in the Real Estate field.

The issue of Sewall's Point Road flooding is still under discussion. A suggestion was offered to the board which would prohibit building on the Indian River side of the road until a solution was found. Another idea was to temporarily stopping any land filling. However, after discussion, the commissioners asked the town attorney and town engineer to work together and present alternatives to the complex problem.

A presentation was made of the proposed gourmet shops slated for the west end of Harbor Bay Plaza. The conceptual drawings showed approximately 7,000 sq. ft. of space to be utilized in the project. The Toronto developer has guaranteed that no fast food stores of any kind would be allowed.

Legislators field questions on I-95

Members of the Florida legislature gathered Tuesday morning in an attempt to get some input from the public over the problem of the 45 uncompleted miles of I-95.

Sen. Don Childers, Rep. Tom Lewis, Rep. Chuck Nergard, and Rep. William "Doc" Myers all made themselves available for comments from the audience. However, as Rep. Myers put it "Did you ever hear of four politicians not talking?"

The problem seems to be the lack of funds available to complete the project many feel should and would have been already finished had it not been for the State Department of Transportation (DOT).

By employing a task force to offer solutions, politicians are hoping to get enough support to "get the public's feet on DOT's hands," as Rep. Myers puts it.

Although many alternatives to earn additional revenue have been presented, the two most seemingly favorable solutions are:

1. An additional four percent gas tax.
2. 1¢ sales tax.

All representatives are in agreement that both the problems of transportation and education will not be met without some financial sacrifice by the public, and urged those in attendance not to sit back and expect the state to absorb the drain.

Presently, there is a $427 million surplus in what Tallahassee calls its "Rainy Day Fund." However, legislators said they expect the public to approve a referendum in March to allow a $25,000 homestead exemption on school taxes.

The state's Rainy Day money may have to be earmarked to make up for the expected $230 million in county school tax revenues that will be lost if the referendum is approved.

Senator Childers stated that although there is still additional money in Tallahassee, the question of how to spend it must be answered. A $30 or $40 dollar rebate to Floridians could be issued. However he felt the public would rather see it used towards needed roads and schools. Even with this surplus, he cautioned that further state revenue would be needed.

There were those in the audience who felt the public was being gouged for a project that should have been completed long ago, while others resigned themselves to the fact of having to be taxed to pay for completion. One individual stated that he thought DOT's head should be stepped on rather than its hands.

Rep Lewis noted that three portions of the missing I-95 line, from SR 70 to the south St. Lucie County line, are ready for construction bids to go out as soon as federal funds are released. He also said that within six months, it is hoped that another 3.8 mile stretch of the road, from the south St. Lucie County line to SR 714, could go out to bid.

He recognized that ending I-95 at SR 714 may create traffic problems, but said "sometimes you have to create a problem to get a larger problem solved."

In addition to the discussion over I-95, Rep. Nergard spoke about the needed change in property assessments, feeling that Martin County and others have been overcharging people due to the inconsistency of the "fair value" base. He stated that the state average is 70% and upheld that a uniform average be maintained to alleviate the inequity in school taxes paid because of different assessments from county to county.

Dr. Dennis King named dean of students

The appointment of Dr. Dennis F. King to the position of Dean of Students for the Jensen Beach Florida Institute of Technology campus was announced by Ernest E. Tealey, executive director.

King, who has already assumed his duties at the campus, will be responsible for admissions, student personnel and registrar's office, campus housing, athletics and food service.

Dr. King received his B.A. degree from Rutgers University, earned his Masters at Jacksonville University and his Doctorate from the University of Florida. For the past six years, King has been associated with Jacksonville University, first as a counselor and director of student activities, then a assistant dean of students.

Dr. King is a great believer in physical fitness and athletics. Since arriving at the Jensen Beach campus he has founded the F.I.T. Runner's Club and has undertaken the task of revamping F.I.T.'s Intramural Athletic Program. King has also taught at the college level and has participated in the Southern College Personnel Association and the Southern Modern Language Association.

Delvin Schisler fined on TV charges

Delvin Lee Schisler, part owner of the D&R Television shop in Commercial Plaza, Jensen Beach, was fined $500 and court costs Friday, after being convicted of selling a device designed to "pilfer" home box office programs for customers of cable TV.

Schisler was found guilty on Thursday by a six man jury of connecting the device — or causing it to be connected, to a TV set to illegally utilize the home box office service. Customers are required to pay a special premium to channel the HBO into their homes or offices.

Schisler was arrested on the charges of selling the device and of profiting from the transaction. The jury acquitted him on the charge of benefitting from the deal.

The lawyer of the TV dealer argued that the matter was a civil one and not a concern for the criminal courts. "If it was in Schisler's house and he was using it, that would be a different matter," argued Russ Ferraro, Schisler's attorney.

The sentence, handed down Friday by the judge, called for a fine of $500 and costs, or ten days in jail, plus two years of non reporting probation.

Puppet show

A puppet show entitled "Fireface and the Indians" will be presented Wednesday, Nov. 28 at 4:30 p.m. at the Martin County Public Library.

The program is open to all elementary school children.

F.I.T. economics class offered

The Graduate Department of Management Science at Florida Institute of Technology, Jensen Beach, has announced that due to the increased concern with inflation and the general economy, the Thursday, Nov. 29 meeting of the M.B.A. course "Economic Environment of Management II — Macroeconomics" on the topic of Inflation and Financial Survival Plans will be open to the public.

For this session of his course, Professor John Luke of the Adjuct Faculty in Management Science has invited leading representatives of the investment community to address the class and respond to questions of vital interest.

The class will meet in the Auditorium on the Jensen Beach Campus at 7 p.m. on Thursday, November 29, 1979. A fee of $5.00 will be charge for each person not formally registered in the course and can be paid at the door.

Letter to the editor

Those of us associated with Goodwill Industries find ourselves rich with many friends this traditional Thanksgiving week.

To you and everyone in the area, we extend our hearty "THANKS-FOR-GIVING" during the past year.

Thanks to your news staff for giving us space to inform readers about our work. Needless to say, without an informed public our programs of rehabilitation would grind to a halt.

And thanks to our friends in the community for providing support, for donating clothing and household articles, and for shopping in our stores.

These contributions have helped to improve the quality of life for people who are handicapped by providing evaluation, training, and work opportunities at Goodwill.

"THANKS-FOR-GIVING" again in 1979.

To the Editor:

Port St. Lucie is looking for a City Manager. Why not hire General Development Utilities to do the job! They do an excellent job of taking the people over. Believe Me!!! My water bill is $5.25 but $13.00 for Mini-Sewer. What Mini-Sewer!!! When it rains, don't wash your clothes, don't use the dishwasher, and be very careful if you should flush the toilet. I had my bathroom flooded, and the carpeting took days to dry out. General Development Utilities came out and looked, and said we'll be back tomorrow. Forget it. It's still the same way. I can not even drink the water from my kitchen tap. Somedays it smells like a SKUNK. I was washing my contact lenses in the water from my sink, and I wondered why my eye burned and was all red. It was the water. Too Much Chlorine. I have to buy drinking water, which costs $10.00 per month, in order for me to drink, and cleanse my contact lenses. Being a widow, and on social security, it's hard to have to pay about $30.00 per month for water.

I say somethingshold be done about General Development Utilities.

PEOPLE. Let's all get together about this outrageous Mini-Sewer charge.

CITY COUNCIL. Let's hire someone for City Manager that has GUTS!

Congress can't say

BY CONGRESSMAN SKIP BAFALIS

If you look back fondly at 1969, convinced you were better off financially then, you're probably right.

Unless your salary has more than doubled – and a lot more than doubled, you're probably worse off now than you were just 10 years ago.

In 1969, the median income for a family with one wage earner was $9,277. If the family had two children, the federal government that year deducted $1,320 in taxes – $956 in income taxes and $374 in Social Security taxes.

This year, the median income is $18,467, just about double the decade ago figure. But the income tax too has almost doubled, to $1,789, and Social Security taxes have almost quadrupled, to $1,132.

That leaves the family of four with one wage earner with $15,546, which, on the surface, seems like an improvement.

Unfortunately, today's $15,546 will buy only what $7,800 would buy 10 years ago – leaving our average family with a $147 loss of purchasing power.

And the picture worsens if you compare today's median family income with that reported just seven years ago. In 1972, the family of four earning the median income had an after federal taxes salary of $9,699, with a purchasing power of $8,500 in 1969 dollars, some $700 more than Today's family.

That's right. Even though before tax incomes are up 60 per cent from 1972 and after-tax incomes are up 62 per cent, the price of those things you need – food, housing, automobiles, etc. – has gone up 75 per cent.

The end result has been an 8 per cent drop in your purchasing power.

Now, part of the blame for that decline, of course, lies with the OPEC nations. Their decision to raise the price of a barrel of crude oil from $3 to $21 has sent everyone's cost of living skyrocketing.

But, the OPEC countries can't be handed all the blame. The Congress must take a great deal of the responsibility itself.

In 1971, the Congress raised the permanent debt ceiling to $400 billion, saying that was going to be the limit of this nation's indebtedness. And, that was enough since it amounted to $2,000 for every man, women and child in this country.

But, just a few months later, the Congress decided to tack on a $50 billion temporary debt ceiling on top of the $400 billion permanent ceiling.

And, in 1973, the temporary ceiling was jumped to $65 billion, then $75.7 billion. In 1975, it was increased to $95 billion, then $131 billion.

In 1976, it went up even more. As it did again in 1977 and 1978, until early this year when the temporary debt ceiling became higher than the permanent debt ceiling.

Then, just a few weeks ago, the Congress decided even the $430 billion temporary ceiling, piled on top of the $400 billion permanent ceiling wasn't enough.

And, so the current debt ceiling is $879 billion – $400 billion permanent and $479 temporary.

Unfortunately, however, that debt ceiling is good only through May 31, by which time it will probably have to be increased again.

All because the Congress has yet to learn to say no.

No matter what the project, no matter how big the giveaway, no matter which special interest group demands attention, the big spender majority in the Congress is always willing to say 'yes.'

Even if it has to borrow the money to do it.

Dredging to benefit Martin

Dredging now in progress in the Okeechobee Waterway near the St. Lucie Inlet in Martin County is the initial step in a sequence of events that will benefit Martin County in several ways.

The dredging will result in rebuilding the beaches on Jupiter Island's state park, finishing the inlet project that area residents have been clamoring for for decades, and providing fill for Sailfish Point, a 532 acre luxury oceanfront development on the southernmost tip of Hutchinson Island.

The Essex, a 200 foot dredge under contract to the Army Corps of Engineers, is presently pumping thousands of cubic yards of material each day onto Sailfish Point for use as fill for Mobil Land Development Corporation's multi-million dollar golf and marina community.

The developer, in turn, has signed over ownership of 350,000 cubic yards of beach-quality sand to be dredged from upland and submerged property at the inlet and used to replenish eroded beaches at the park on Jupiter Island's north end.

The Inlet Improvement Project will be a major boon to all area residents. For years, large sailboats have avoided navigating the inlet's dangerous waters; commercial fishermen from the Port Salerno area have had to deal with a major threat to their livelihood; sport fishermen have risked damage to their vessels; and recreational boaters have pleaded with authorities to take action.

Doran T. Seaquist, president of Sailfish Point, Inc., said, "Construction of the sales center has already begun, and one of the condominium buildings will be started shortly after the end of the year. We expect sales to commence in early January."

The Essex, under the command of Captain Archie Evans, will play a key role in the timely completion of the entire project. "We'll remove 756,000 cubic yards of fill for Sailfish Point," said deck crew chief Howard Hagan. "At our present rate, we should be finished sometime after the first of the year. Don't forget, the Essex is some ship — she's new and she's extremely powerful."

Hagan went on to explain the importance of his craft's mission to the ultimate completion of the inlet project. "Before they can start to dredge the inlet, they have to construct the jetties. Rocks for the jetties are in the process of being transported by rail to Indiantown. From there, they'll be barged through here, but they can't start that until we finish dredging the O.W.W. (Okeechobee Waterway)," he said.

When completed, the inlet will be 300 feet wide and 18 feet deep, tapering to a width of 150 feet and a depth of 10 feet. The channel to the Intracoastal Water, which the Essex will begin dredging immediately after its work in the O.W.W. is completed, will be 100 feet wide and seven feet deep. The target date for completion of the inlet project is October, 1980.

Congress axed senior bills

Congress was not senior-minded last week; they batted down some bills of vital interest to the elderly. It seems they pay more attention to the on-the-spot Lobbies than they do letter from constituents and the seniors were plenty aggrevated. It went somewhat like this.

Al D., a wide awake 80 year old, [illegible] knows [illegible], "What is the idea of Congress tying the hands of the Federal Trade Commission so they can't improve Nursing Homes". A nursing home fire is sure death for many elderly and there is a lot of lax treatment or worse in many."

Then, Jim S. who was taking this all in, piped up, "Here's the worst on of all that d— Congress squashed the mandatory Hospital Cost Containment bill, saying the hospitals were doing a good job on their own. Of course it looks that way to them, they have a free hospital; sure hope the National Health Insurance don't get passed before some kind of containment is set up. WOW! would the medical industry climb on that gravy train, probably even worse than they did on Medicare".

Well, perhaps all isn't lost, for just this week Senator Stone sent a note saying, he found the clippings sent him recently very interesting, as he does want to know what "Florida Senior Citizens" are saying. So, all you irritated folks, talk away and more clippings will be sent.

There were new nurses, Cynthia Roderick and Jean Charles at the Martin County Health Dept. Blood Pressure Clinic, Fri. Nov. 16, when practical winter time attendance was noted. Here is an interesting item and food for thought.

Overhearded as a man walked away from having his pressure checked, "next month I won't listen to the TV news until after I get my pressure checked, as it is always, 'there's bad news this morning' and I'm sure I get exasperated and angry enough to sent my pressure up for hours".

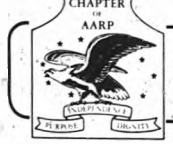
CHAPTER EVENTS

The general AARP meeting, Thur. Nov. 15, at the 1st Presbyterian Church was a great one. Pres "CMac" got it off on time and moved it along quickly and smoothly to a 3 p.m. adjournment for the refreshments



BY ERNIE CURWEN
Tel.334-0756

furnished by 1st Federal S&L off Ft Pierce. It went like this:

Ethel Tucker gave the invocation and Frank Edwardson led the Pledge, after all had sung America the Beautiful with Leta Keith at organ. Then, the members sang happy birthday to Constance Schmidt, on her 84th.

Next, Minutes, Treas Report and Audit report were accepted. Then, one vote was cast for the 1980 slate of officials and a new nominating committee was appointed, (for details see Dec Bulletin).

There will be a Diabetes movie at the Dec 6 Picnic, 9:30 a.m. at Langford Field. Also, don't forget your free flu shots (65 and over) at the Martin County Health Dept. E. Ocean Blvd. 1 to 4 p.m. Mon-Fri.

Al Tucker, reported membership back to 701, soon will be again over 800. Remember, subscription to the Mirror and family mambership to the Chapter for the price of Mirror alone ($8.50). Send check to Treas. Doris Cass, PO Box 1336, Stuart, Fla. 33494. The Mirror will follow you back home next summer, keeping you up to date on all senior activities.

The next event was very pleasing, when most of the Call Girls, came forward and were introduced, then the folks they call were asked to stand, so they all got a chance to connect face and voice together. This is one very satisfactory, successful and rewarding project, a few more Call Gals are needed, if interested, call Lucy Prohaska, 334-0966.

Joe Fosberg called the members attention to the MCCA (Martin County Council on Aging) drive for $40,000.00 to be used as front money for their expanded programs for the local seniors. One of our most worthwhile organizations.

The chapter has been reminded that all members must have their Nat Nbr on record, or officers are subject to reprimand. See Al Tucker if in doubt.

Finally it was time for the drawings (forgotten last month). First Carrie Lou Arnold's number was drawn for last month's "Buy-A-Block" prize, and then her name was drawn for last month's Door Prize, looks like Carrie's lucky day. Next, John Mann's Block number was called and Louise Gilbert's name was drawn for this month's prizes ($10.00 gift certificates in all cases).

The program was put on by 1St Federal S&L of Ft. Pierce with Kitty Read, V.P. of Ft. Pierce doing the talking and Ethel Unail, V.P. of Monterey Branch and Don Hughes, V.P. of Cedat Point Branch distributing the brochers.

Kitty explained how their SOS (Special Organizational Services) program help seniors and new widows get their records and financial affairs organized, so that the best money management arragements can be determind. Wills, Stocks, household furnishings, credit cards, insurance and in fact everything that is needed for living in this modern world was discussed in brief and suggestions made as how to handle some of the items. It was shown how all this vital information could be listed in one easy to use record book. Kitty Read, said that all this information could be obtained at a personal conference at any of their branch banks and they are glad to do it. It sounds just like what some of us need.

FIRE CLAIMED the home of Sarah Tramble and her three sons in Stuart recently, and when the Forty and Eight organization of the American Legion heard the boys were in need of clothing, they were quick to lend a helping hand. It was a week of weather

Folks in other parts of the country often say, "if you don't like our weather, wait a few minutes and it'll be different". Now, we can proudly (?) say the same, for last week we had 7 to 11 inches of rain one day, next 10 to 25 mile winds, then a regular balmy day, to be followed by some of that norther stuff, bitter 49 degrees.

However, my records show, this does not happen very often. I am a great one for records (Professional Engineer for years) and one I have kept quite awhile, is "percent Florida Days". A Florida day is designated as a day when outdoor activities in shirt-sleeves are enjoyable. Well, alrt average since 1965 is 85 percent, but since September this year it has only been 58 percent. So, you folks that think it was different this year are right, but even so, folks are coming south as usual and the following, "blew-in" this week.

Lester and Minnie Warnes, Ken and Lee Tobin, Larry and Winona Moore, Geo. and Wilma Diedrick, Ernest and Maxine Mortenson, Al and Mary West, George and Tillie Gerber, Dora Scheitberg, Harry and Kathleen Farmer, Clarence and Velma Pysher, Pearl Stiegman, Frank and Dorothy Glazier, Cyril and Jessie Mathy, Mollie Mollison, Lester and Shirley Howard.

Bruce and Mildred Price, Frank and Virginia Unterberger; Raymond and Nellie Sutton; Cecile Gietzel, Libby and Herbert Leuffgen, Ralph and Beth Ortt, Gordon and Myrtle Hawkins, L.M. and Ruth Roberts, Wm and Beth Eiler; Milton and Mary Fullerton, Walter and Eliz Osgood; Laura Fowler, Vera Thomas, Catherine Shonnon, Dorothy Randlett.

PARK EVENTS

CAMERA CLUB was "off" to an auspicious season with the return of the pre-meeting musical interlude as Ed Pettit, beautifully played the organ that his cousine, Bill Strong, Sr. of Jensen Motel donated to the park. The vigorous applause of the 77 members indicated he should do often. Maybe, it will be a regular feature".

Nina Ziegelhofer (president) welcomed the members and briefly told of coming events, then turned the meeting over to program chairman, Dot Bech, who in turn, introduced Jim and Jean McClain, the exhibitors. They took the members on a trip form Greece to Russia, back to Turkey and Romania by ship. Very interesting slides and lively commentary made it quite evident the Iron Curtain Country can't compare with good ol' USA. Next week, Thanksgiving, so no meeting, but the following week, Nov. 28, at 7 p.m. in the Clubhouse. Dot Beck will have an all New England show. Remember, all OBPers are invited.

SHUFFLERS got the season underway with league games last wednesday. Central League went to Port St. Lucie and the Port St. Lucie Indian River team came here the scores were: Indian River 5 and 5, Central league, 2 and 2, the park events, Buckaroos, Mon. 9 a.m., Petticoaters, Tues. 9 a.m.; Pot Luck, Fri. at 6 p.m. and Round Robin, Sat. 1:30 p.m. were all off and running, with Ralph Bailets and Clyde Redinger at 3 all leading the Buckaroos.

The annual Turkey Shoot and Country Store is on again, 1 p.m. Dec. 21, with all OBPers invited for an afternoon of fun and good fellowship. As usual, Ted Witmer will present turkeys and chickens to the winners. "Three shoot" for 25 cents. The country store, no charge, to be run by Irma Fair, as usual. Everyone present will receive a number, the lucky numbers will get the goodies.

All may help by donating cans of fruit, vegtables, etc. or even cash. Beginning Dec. 5, there will be a box in the card room at Clement Hall, or the items can be left at Fair's: 36 SW 5th Ave. Remember the date.

RAMBLING AROUND

Percy and Lilybell Beebe, 35 S.W. 7th. Ave. were enticed here by their friends, Martin and Frances Anderson of SW 5th Ave., as they have a home on the same bay at Spring Lake, Mich. Up there Percy takes care of a 3 acre garden while Lilybell puts up the results. They are busy, also with a family of 2 daughters, 1 son, 13 grandchildren and 1 great, so no doubt they will soon have plenty of visitors. Previously they spent their winter over Clearwater way, but found it to congested. Bet they will like it better here, and the friendly OPBers will help them do so.

John and Kathryn Teal of Center St are just back form 6 months up at Averill Park, N.Y. where they have a home on Burden Lake. They had a busy summer, fishing for Bass, tending a garden, canning cases and cases of vegtables, even to picking raspberries on Nov. 4th.

They did take time off for a trip to Gloucester, Mass. and stayed in Cape Ann Trailer Park, where Dot and, Henry Beck used to summer. Liked it up there, but Kathryn said it was terribly hot, probably John didn't notice as he was out deep sea fishing for cod. They have a family of 5 children and 15 grandchildren, so they too may have visitors over some of the holidays. But, that won't interfere with John's snook fishing or Kathryn's Art and leather classes.

Edward and Rhoda Pettit, 4 Lil'Bit Ln. are here for their second year, so they too must like this friendly place. They go north in the summer to Lanoka Harbor, N.J. (60 miles north of Atlantic City) where they live in a so-called "Pettit Compound" with the rest of the family. There they have a huge bird seed garden for the area in a bird sanctuary. They have quite a family, 4 children, 6 grandchildren, scattered all over USA and Canada. Edward was a Boy Scout Executive for 25 years, but now he is busy teaching the almost lost art of making leaded, stained glass windows, and organ playing.

Floyd and Charlotte Meahl of 12 SE Pepper Dr. had some visitors the other day. Their son and wife, Floyd Jacob Meahl and Nancy, stopped by Fri. Nov. 9, with a brand new grandson, 3 week old, Floyd Jacob Meahl, who was born Oct. 15. Then, baby and all went off camping at Fish Eating Creek, up Palmdale way. Next they may be off to Tennessee to show baby Floyd to other relatives. Floyd and Charlotte have almost 11 grandchildren and almost 3 "greats", so they'll soon have visitors, starting with Don and Valerie St. John around Christmas time.

Earl Ehrmann, 7 Kumquat had a surprise last week, when Helen and Bob McCall, of Key Lime, brought over a huge 8 candle birthday cake. It was so hugh that Joe and Jessie Robertson were invited over to help eat it up, after Earl with a great big puff blew out all 8 candles, representing his 80th birthday. Congratulation, Earl, best wishes for many more.

Ray Stiles, of 5 NE 5th Ave is the proud great-grand-daddy of Brian Robert Stiles. The also proud parents Ray's grandson and wife, Robert William and Jo Ann of Morris, Pa. sent along a day old picture of the baby, and one can truthfully say, "Oh What a Beautiful Baby". Believe it or not, Ray will be delighted to show you the picture, and it is not often a wee brand new baby takes such a great picture.

Sertoma seeks input for service award

The Sertoma Club is planning to honor someone in the community for service to mankind, and is seeking suggestions for the recipient of that award.

Each year the club presents a "Service to Mankind" award to a local citizen to recognize and reward the man or woman for humanitarian, heroic or civic service to the community. Last year's winner was Louise Carnivalie.

Anyone who would like to nominate someone for the award should send the name, address and phone number of the nominee, along with a brief statement of their accomplishments, to Sertoma, P.O. Box 1858, Stuart, Fla. 33494. The club would like nominations to be in by Dec. 10.

10-week course in pine needle craft

Residents and visitors who are senior citizens have a rare opportunity to learn pine needle weaving in a 10 week course to be offered at the Environmental Studies Center begining Tuesday, Nov. 27.

The class will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. Tuesdays through Dec. 19 and again from Jan. 8 through Feb. 12.

The class will offer expert instruction in the creation of utilitarian objects such as trays, table mats and baskets as well as all types of jewelry—necklaces, pendants, earrings and bracelets.

The instructor, Mrs. Dorothy Elliott, is a winter resident active in local art circles. A native of Surrey, England, she learned the craft from an elderly woman who "passed the technique along so it wouldn't be lost" she states.

The course is offered through the Jensen Beach Community Education Center for those 55 or over for a nominal $2 registration fee payable on the first meeting of the class. Registration is limited. Further information may be obtained by calling Jay Jarrett at 334-1263 afternoons.

Tigers end season with 30-0 Homecoming rout of Twin Lakes Rams

"You've made ...my finest year ever as a coach. ...n win-loss record, but in the way ...ve came back from adversity. You ...have quit. Other teams got down ...tayed down, but you came back. ...appreciate that."

...as been rumored recently that ..., who concluded his second year as coach at the school, will not return next fall. Many of his post-game remarks did little to discourage those rumors.

"I would like to thank all of the Martin County fans for the pennies they threw at me during the season," he said. "I have a jar of about 200 of them at home. But they should have thrown silver. I've got two kids, and I can't send them to school on copper."

If Friday was Chase's Final Stand, it could not have been better timed. The Tiger offense, virtually silent all season, came to life on the legs of the lightning-quick Harris, whose runs of 58 and 80 yards staked the localers to a 12-0 lead and sent them on their way.

For much of the first half, though, the game belonged to the Rams, who at 3-6 were hardly of concern to the Tigers. Led by quarterback Bob Wright and tailback Darrell Preston, who gained 62 yards, the Rams marched up and down the field at will, before the Tiger offense got untracked and the defense tightened.

"We moved the football, but we just didn't find the end zone," commented Twin Lakes Head Coach Bruce Perry later. "Finally, it just came down to the fact that they were just much bigger up front (on the line) than we were. We played a decent first half, but got tired in the second."

The Rams chalked up ten first downs rushing in the first 24 minutes, but yet trailed 6-0 when Harris broke free on Martin County's first possession of the second quarter, scooting 58 yards for a touchdown.

"They were just running a crossbuck, a misdirection play," explained Perry. "Our linebackers just didn't pick it up in time. We also missed some tackles on a couple of those runs."

It was that one play, called a "12-reverse" in Tigerland, that continually put the Ram defense at the mercy of Harris (see article elsewhere) and led directly to the Tigers' sixth victory.

"That's the difference between Merritt Island and them (Twin Lakes)," said Chase. "If we had done that against Merritt Island, their defense would have been yelling out the play before we ever ran it. But not tonight. Harris would have had 400 yards if we had wanted to get it."

Still, the small, but quick-cutting Harris had only carried eight times in the first half, for 131 yards. But when the tigers received the kickoff in the second half, Chase called "12-reverse" immediately, and the first offensive play became 80-yard TD run by Harris. After that, it was Harris, Harris and more Harris.

Soon after Chris Cherry intercepted a pass at his own seven, Harris and the Tigers did it again. This time, it took almost six minutes, but after the 11-play, 93-yard drive, the verdict no longer was in doubt. Harris' 41-yard effort chewed up the middle of the field, and his other 29 yards on eight carries during the march did away with the ends of the gridiron.

The result-- an easily digested Twin Lakes defense, as well as an 18-0 lead on Harris' two-yard, fourth down plunge with 3:08 remaining in the third period.

From then on, the only real interest in the game seemed to center around Harris' rushing yardage. After the late-third, quarter drive, the Stuart product had 261, and the Tigers' next surge, which stalled at the Ram 18, left him at 292. Then, with nearly eight minutes still left, McCaughey handed to Harris, who ripped through the middle of the line for 22 more, clearing the 300-mark.

Three more attempts, in succession, capped by a one-yard burst, gave MCHS its fourth touchdown and a 24-0 edge. Later, with 3:58 left, Glenn Giles scored on a tight end-reverse to add the final points.

If the game sounds like nothing more than an offensive show by Harris, it was. His 334 yards rushing, added to his 17 on a pass reception, accounted for 351 of the Tigers' 400 total yards. The offense marched for 19 first downs, their most in any game this year, and did not commit a single turnover. Only ten yards in penalties were assessed against Martin County, and the defense held Twin Lakes to 124 yards, sacking Wright four times and intercepting two passes.

Harris turns Homecoming into a one-man track meet

BY DONNIE WILKIE

Was it "fast?" Or was it "quick?" Or was it "blazing?"

The Twin Lakes Rams spent most of Friday night trying to answer those questions about Martin County's senior running back Tony Harris. But while they tried to figure out just what it was that would adequately describe the 145-pound back Harris sped past them, rushing for 334 yards (a new MCHS record) and four touchdowns in the Tigers' 30-0 Homecoming victory.

In fact, most of the Tiger faithful gathered to witness the Homecoming festivities and the season football finale, saw a track meet Friday night--a one-man track meet.

All of this from a player who had just 53 yards rushing after five games, and 217 after nine? All of this from a back who spent hours and hours being sandwiched in practice between Martin County's All-Everything defensive tackles, Mike Vaccarella and Greg Wright?

Indeed. It seemed far-fetched. But Friday night, Tony Harris' long hours of work paid their dividends.

"He came out for the team last spring," said his coach, Martin County mantor Fred Chase. "Usually, I'm not too thrilled about a senior out for the first time. But he never missed a practice. He took a physical beating against our defense," Chase continued. "But he never quit."

Still, Harris only saw spot duty, even after the entire Tiger backfield, except quarterback David McCaughey, was injured. Finally, though, his moment came.

"I took him aside and told him that I admired him for the effort he had made," revealed the coach. "I told him that I'd be giving him the ball more in the last few games."

Wow! Thirty carries for 334 yards against an admittedly porous Twin Lakes defense, but still-- Wow!

"Our game plan was just to go out and play heads-up football because it was Homecoming," said Harris after his record-shattering effort.

The Tiger offense snapped out of its recent trance, though Harris and the linemen that blocked for him were mostly responsible. Martin County did not commit a single turnover, and was penalized only twice, for ten yards.

Still, it was one play, referred to at Martin County as a "12 reverse," that did almost all the damage. And, according to Harris, the fact that he was the man with the ball was more or less a stroke of good luck.

"When I broke it the first time," he explained, "we decided to use it over and over again, until they (Twin Lakes) could stop it. If any other of our backs had done that, they would have had the same opportunity."

Harris gained 11 yards on the Tigers' first offensive play, but was kept away from the ball by the Twin Lakes offense for most of the first quarter, thanks to the Rams' speedy Darrell Preston, who led a successful ground attack-- at least early in the game.

Then, with 9:32 remaining in the half, Harris exploded past the Ram defense for a 58-yard touchdown, that first of the season, and a 6-0 Tiger lead. On the first play of the second half, the same play worked for an 80-yard score, and Harris was off to the races.

"It's worked against everybody we've played, even Merritt Island," observed Harris. "It just never worked as much as it did tonight. Tonight, we were a team with more consistency. Against other teams, we've broken it a few times, but we weren't consistent. But tonight we were.

...It was like a perfect play."

Perfect to the tune of three-three-four.

"It really was our most complete ball game," added Chase.

Harris is one who blames an open week, and the Tigers' complacency early in the season for the team's fatal start, during which they were eliminated from the District 10-AAAA race before the year was half over.

"That open week left us with nothing to look forward to on Friday," he pointed out, "and we let up a little. Then, after the Lake Worth game (a 20-0 Tiger loss), we took Vero too lightly. They surprised a lot of people (including Martin County, 26-6)."

But the Tigers regrouped, winning five of their last seven games and four of their last five, for a respectable 6-4 record.

..."We figured we had to make a name for ourselves since we couldn't go to the playoffs, and the only way to do that was to have the best possible record," Harris emphasized.

..."That's one thing about this team. We play as a team, win or lose. That's the way it's supposed to be. We play together. That's what I like so much about playing with these guys."

Many in the crowd seemed to think Harris was a junior, or even a sophomore, and were drooling over the possibilities of a Harris-led backfield in 1980. But he is a senior.

..."That's what I admire about him," expounded Chase. "I don't admire him because he gained 300 yards. I admire him for his attitude-- the way he kept in there until he got his chance to play and do well."

Harris claims his interest is in the service, not in college though some small schools have contacted him. Surely, he will hear from others when the scouts notice the line that reads: "Martin County 30, Twin Lakes 0, Harris gained 334 yards rushing."

..."I'll probably go in the service," he said. "But if I did get any offers, I'd seriously consider them."

Another man considering offers may be Chase. The Martin County coach is rumored to be leaving the school, though he says he has not made up his mind.

"I haven't got to that point yet. I'll sit down and let the football get out of my mind. I haven't decided either way yet."

If he left the school, Chase said he "would probably leave coaching."

"He's a swell guy-- as fair as any coach can be, complimented Harris. "I think they should stick to his system here, even if he does leave, because it's a very successful one."

Say, Tony, that wasn't a bad one that you had going Friday night...

FIT offers course in outboard repair

A widespread need for certified outboard motor mechanics has sparked the cooperation of Florida Institute of Technology, government and industry in creation of an innovative training program.

The recently-started program at Jensen Beach, site of F.I.T.'s School of Applied Technology, is expected to grow quickly.

Up to 24 fulltime students will be accepted in a 14-week program that begins in January, according to Kevin Jones, admissions director for the campus. That number of students allows a pair of instructors optimum training time with individuals.

A pilot training cycle in the program began in September. A building on the Jensen Beach campus was constructed and outfitted to match an ambitious training schedule.

"The consensus of outboard motor manufacturers is that our facility is as good as the factories," instructor Robert Chester said of the new facility.

"The program allows a student to go out of here with a well-rounded background in all aspects of outboard repair," Chester explained. "The students will be well qualified."

Outboard technicians emerging from the program will help alleviate an "extreme shortage" in qualified mechanics, Chester said.

Chester said during a recent visit to a South Florida community, "I could have placed 30 to 40 graduates if I had them. The jobs are available." U.S. Department of Labor figures indicate an experienced outboard mechanic will earn $8.50 per hour or more.

Students receive 560 hours of instruction in all facets of outboard motor machanics, ranging from maintenance to accurate diagnosis of problems and reliable repairs. Areas of concentration include electrical systems, fuel systems, power flow components, drive system overhauls and steering systems.

The course was developed by a curriculum advisory committee made up of industry representatives. The committee insures continual improvement in both the quality of instruction and training equipment.

Tuition for the program is $1,550, and successful students are awarded a Certificate of Competency in Outboard Machanics. If for some reason a student does not successfully complete the course of study, a certificate of training is issued detailing the amount of instruction received.

"We have the basic design of each type of engine represented," Chester said of the training area.

OMC donated 31 Johnson and Evinrude motors, and 13 other engines were purchased to compliment the well-equipped training facility.

The program was made possible by a cooperate effort that included $68,000 in funding from the Florida Sea Grant program of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Within two months of the grant award, "We had more than double that in matching fund donations," Chester said of industry support and aid from private foundations.

Additional information about the new outboard program is available from the F.I.T. Admissions Office, 1707 N.E. Indian River Dirve, Jensen Beach, Florida 33457, telephone (305) 334-4200.

Greenwoods celebrate two successful years

When Alan and Adrianne Greenwood took over the Discount Swimming Pool Center in Fort Pierce, it was a small foundering business.

The date was Dec. 9, 1977. Now, in just under two short years, the Greenwoods have turned that business into a busy, successful one.

When they took it over, it was strictly a retail operation, with a limited stock. But it has grown to four employees in addition to the Greenwoods, and they offer extensive outside pool servicing and maintenance agreements.

The store's inventory has increased considerably, and now they offer a full line of parts for most popular pumps, filters, and automatic pool cleaners.

Discount Swimming Pool Center is the authorized dealer for Arneson Pool Sweep, Polaris Vac Sweep, Pool Tender, and other automatic pool cleaners.

The store is located in the Indian Hills Plaza on U.S. 1 in Fort Pierce, just south of Virginia Avenue. For their second year anniversary as owners, the Greenwoods are offering a number of discounts in early December.

MMH Ball Receipts earmarked for needed equipment

The wheels of the annual Martin Memorial Hospital Ball are getting under motion this year well in advance of the event, for two reasons, according to the chairman and co-chairman, Dr. and Mrs. Fred Carter and Dr. and Mrs. Duane Stemple.

Not only will it give everyone an ample opportunity to make plans for attending the social spectacular – it will enable those wishing to buy their tickets or make donations before the end of the year to write it off this year's income taxes.

The Ball, it was announced at a planning meeting held Thursday at the office of Frank Wolf, is set for March 15 with the Vaughn Monroe Orchestra under direction of Lou Feldman to provide danceable music for all ages. The scene will again be the Sandpiper Ballroom, which last year became a veritable fairyland for the event.

For the first time in the 15-year history of the ball, the entire proceeds will be already earmarked for specific needs at the hospital. In past years, the money has gone into the General Fund of Martin Memorial, with the use of it designated by the board.

But this year, Dr. Carter explained, a medical committee pinpointed the areas of greatest need in equipment, and the board has agreed that the money should be used for these purposes.

The cost of the equipment comes to slightly over $100,000, so the goal this year has been set at that figure. Last year, the goal was $85,000, and the actual receipts totaled $89,000.

Dr. Carter, who is the newly installed president of the Martin County Medical Association, explained the needed equipment. It includes:

1) An oscilloscope with a bright display and memory, which documents without interruption, and pinpoints more clearly the justification of treatment or operation, at a cost of $8,000;

2) Two Dynamap blood pressure monitors with printouts, used especially in cardiogenic shock when levophed or dopamine is used, for use in the operating room by the anesthesiologist to monitor patients during surgery, at a total of $8,000;

3) Two emergency room monitors, to augment the two already at Martin Memorial. "ER visits are averaging 1,900 to 2,000 per month, with a corresponding increase in cardiac patients and trauma cases which require monitoring," he said. "We need at least two more monitors to guarantee a safe level of care for the patients." These will cost $12,000.

4) A portable monitor-defibrillator run on batteries, which can be used for transferring unstable cardiacs from the emergency room to intensive care. This can also be used as an additional monitor in the emergency room if the need arises. Cost: $6,500.

5) Portable telemetary units which can allow the patient to walk around, sit up to eat and use the bathroom, all the while being under the constant observation of the monitor to determine what effects the activity is having on the body. It also monitors the effects of medication, whether adverse or favorable, making it possible for the physician to do a more accurate job of treating the patient. Cost: $50,000.

6) An arthroscope, an instrument used to look into a joint, particularly the knee, to determine whether or not surgery is needed. Cost: $65,0

7) Recovery room monitors. The hospital, Dr. Carter said, now has only two monitored beds, and a hospital the size of MMH needs at least four. Cost of the monitors is $6,900.

The Hospital Ball itself will cost $175 per couple, but the price is tax deductible, as are all gifts to the hospital. The committee is hoping that even those who don't feel they can afford the cost of the ball itself will be inspired enough by the quantity and quality of the pending improvements to make donations they can afford.

"We'll take $5 or $500," Mrs. Carter said.

"This isn't just the Hospital Ball committee," Mrs. Stemple said. "It is the hospital fund drive – the only one held throughout the year."

DR. GLENN H. JONES Chiropractic Physician

No profession has made greater and more rapid strides in recent years than that of the Chiropractic Physician. The efforts and results are being recognized by more and more people each day as is best evidenced by the steadily increasing number of people who are turning to Chiropractic as means of treatment.

The Chiropractor is scientifically trained and educated to know and understand the nerve flow of the human body. The spine may be said to be the life line of the body, and as long as that nerve flow moves and functions normally, you enjoy good, if not excellent health. Many disorders of the body are caused by nerve flow blockages located somewhere in the spinal column. These blockages cut off life energy to some part of your body, causing pain and other disorders to that particular part of your body.

The Chiropractic method is to locate the place in the spine where nerve pressure exists and by proper adjustment, restore vertebra to their normal position. Correct adjustment releases the pressure on nerves and thereby removes the real cause of disease in the body.

Dr. Glenn H. Jones, located at 504 S. Indian River Dr. in Ft. Pierce, phone 464-3831, offers you a complete Chiropractic health service daily with weekend and evening appointments available, too!

Mirror Magic Menu

by Lee Hicks of Lucieland

Organic chemistry work for Eastman Kodak in Tennessee proved interesting work, but now Frankie & Zug enjoy the informality of Florida patio living!

"Mystery Cookies" were given to me by my Tennessee neighbor many years ago," states Frances Zugschwerdt, "and everyone thinks they are so good!" Frankie is sharing this great recipe with our Mirror readers, but she states you must make sure they are completely cooled. Then when rolled in powdered sugar, these are sure to please the crowd.

Frankie's MYSTERY COOKIES

2 Cups brown sugar—firmly packed	1 cup melted butter
1¼ cups flour	Dash salt
1 teaspoon baking powder	1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs—well beaten	1 cup chopped pecans

Mix sugar, flour, baking powder, and salt. Pour into eggs to which vanilla has been added. Mix well. Add melted butter and stir until smooth then add nuts. Turn into greased and floured pan—size 7¼ x 12 inches (I use pyrex) and bake at 300° for 45 minutes. Cookies fall flat when done. Remove pan from oven when cookies are baked, but do not cut nor remove until completely cooled. When cool cut into squares and roll in powdered sugar. Makes about 32 or 34.

The size of pan and allowing cookies to cool before touching in any way is the secret of success with these cookies.

Happy baking.

Frances & Werner (Zug) Zugschwerdt love the relaxed attitude of Port St. Lucie resort type living, and along with bridge and golf, their new swimming pool with "highly recommended" solar heat is just right for this great couple's style of living. Frankie believes the pool therapy is instrumental in helping with her arthritis treatment.

Son, David, is an attorney in Alexandria, Virginia. His wife Suzanne and Michelle, 6, and Lisa, 3, look forward to family vacation time in our warm climate!

MMH: a product of full community cooperation

Martin Memorial Hospital, now in the midst of a fund drive which will climax with the 15th annual Hospital Ball on March 15, is a physical monument to the rich fullness of community cooperation which becomes increasingly evident throughout Martin County over the years.

Like all hospitals, it was born of need, and thanks to community support it has grown from a small facility with an average daily census of 8.3 patients to the present magnificent five-story edifice with a licensed bed capacity of 260.

A report on the history of Martin Memorial tells the story of the hospital's growth to serve the needs of the area.

Born in 1939, the original hospital and nurses' home was made possible by the generosity of Mr. and Mrs. William Slocum Barstow. When it was completed, the furnishings and equipment were donated by Mrs. Verner Z. Reed and Joseph M. Reed.

It started out with only ten employes. Dr. Julian D. Parker, Dr. William Burns, and Dr. Walter F. Davey were then the only physicians in the Stuart area.

Ten years later, the employe roster increased to 18, in 1969 to 40, and in 1989 to 156. There are now 647 employes, and the average daily patient census is 180, with the highest exceeding 224 adults and newborn babies.

The first giant step forward came in March of 1963, when after nearly five years of planning, fund-raising and construction, the hospital blossomed out into new and expanded facilities with 78 beds, and the valuation jumped from $193,000 in 1960 to $1,175,000 in '63.

In 1969, a contract was awarded for yet another audition, and the new wing went into service in October of 1970, raising the value to an excess of 3 million.

But as fast as the hospital grew, the needs grew bigger. The board next undertook the monumental task of a multi-phase major building program. Phase I was completed at a cost of $7,600,000, approximately doubling the size and capacity. Then came a renovation and expansion of ancillary services, a new medical intensive care unit, substantial improvements to obstetrics, pediatrics, and the Third South general patient units, at a cost of $1,500,000.

The latest milestone was the completion of the new fifth floor, which houses 50 new medical and surgical patient beds. Extensive renovation of other ancillery services is now under contract, at a cost of an additional $1,750,000, is nearing completion.

The non-profit facility is owned and operated by a board of directors consisting of up to 15 members. The president of the medical staff and the president of the hospital auxiliary are ex-officio members.

The board and the community are proud of the fact that MMH is highly accredited. It first achieved the highest standard of patient care as reflected by the approval of the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals in 1965. The next inspection is due in January, and the hospital anticipates again receiving a full two-year approval by the Commission.

The medical staff now numbers 101, with 79 active, six associate and nine consulting physicians, most of them specialists. Seven Floridl licensed physicians provide constant professional coverage of the hospital's emergency room.

The co-chairmen for the Hospital Ball this year, Dr. and Mrs. Fred Carter and Dr. and Mrs. Kuane Sternle, have pointed out that this year, for the first time, the full proceeds will go toward specifically-needed equipment, which will allow the hospital to give even better and more scientifically refined patient care. They are hoping that people who can't attend the March 15 social function for reasons financial or otherwise will make donations of any amount they can afford.

They point out that, if given before the first of the year, it can be used as an income tax write-off. That is also true of ball tickets purchased before Jan. 1.

The ball again will be an elaborate event, with dancing to the music of Lou Feldman and the Vaughn Monroe orchestra, and a midnight breakfast. Theme for this year's event will remain a secret until after the first of the year.

Contributions may be mailed to Martin Memorial Hospital Fund Drive, P.O. Box 627, Stuart, Fla., 33494.

THEN—The doors of the first small hospital and nurses' quarters opens in 1939, with a daily capacity of less than 10 patients

AND NOW—Martin Memorial Hospital today rises five stories in the air on the banks of the St. Lucie River, giving health services to the ever-growing area

DORM LIFE-- FIT students have made an interesting transition from dorm life to the more luxurious life at the Quality Inn. The students have been staying at the Stuart motel since Hurricane David demolished their Jensen Beach dorms back in September. The students will have to be out by December 8th, when FIT's contract with the Quality Inn expires.

FIT students prepare to leave luxury, return to refurbished dormitories

BY MICHELLE NASPINSKI

Some 335 Florida Institute of Technology students have been living — with mixed results — at the Quality Inn of Stuart since Hurricane David severely damaged the FIT dormitories on Labor Day.

Despite the larger rooms, easily accessible pool and outdoor bar opened nightly, life at the Quality Inn has not been trouble-free for either the students or the motel management.

The rooms, which are somewhat larger than what some students affectionately term their "closet" dorms back at the college, have been forced to house three students rather than the usual two in order to accommodate everyone. The students did say, however, that they will miss the luxury of private baths.

"Three to a room is pretty cramped," commented sophomore Jason Goode, "but it's nice to have your own bathroom, even though you do have to keep it clean."

The major obstacle, which has apparently prevented life at the Quality Inn from being the Nirvana students had hoped for, is the reported malfunctioning of the shuttle bus system that brings the students to and from the Jensen Beach campus every day.

The buses were supposed to run every half hour, then the class president decided to make them run every hour," explained fourth-year student Sean Sullivan, "now they're either late or they break down and you never get to class on time."

Many students said that they must give themselves an extra hour to make up for bus delays.

The moving back into the FIT dorms, which must be completed by December 8 when the contract with Quality Inn expires, is also expected to be a giant undertaking.

When students first came to the motel, telephones, televisons and beds were removed from the rooms. The college brought in 335 single beds for the students, which will now have to be transported back to FIT.

The students will have to move their belongings before Christmas break, and the semi-reconstructed dorms will not be ready for occupancy. Dorm advisor Jackie Burns expects that the students will have to put their things in storage until they return in January.

In addition to the problems of transportation and relocation, dealings with the motel management have not always been easy.

"They've been pretty strict with us," commented freshman Patty Santoro, "they don't want any trouble with the town."

Regulations, according to the students, include no more than four to a room at night, and that girls must be out of boys' rooms by 9 p.m.

Furthermore, students are prohibited from entering the motel's main lobby, which makes it difficult if a student forgets his key and needs a pass key. The rule was allegedly created to keep separate the students and the motel customers who occupy the ten rooms Quality Inn has left.

"At the dorms you could get a lot wilder than you can around here," reminisced Goode, "they hassle you over parties."

Dorm director Burns agreed that regulations have been tightened up. However, she added that even this does not prevent some problems created by the less-restrained environment at the motel.

The pool is closed at 9 p.m. and overnight visitors are not allowed.

"There is a much more open environment here," commented Burns, "it is not as well-controlled as life at the dorms would be."

Burns revealed that she and her husband John have done everything they could to prevent problems with the management of the Quality Inn.

"My husband and I have collected skateboards and roller skates from people upstairs," said Burns.

"There are some delightful students here," she added. "On Halloween morning the students had draped toilet paper everywhere. Some people got angry about it but we just thought it was funny."

Motel manager Tony Matthews agreed that the problems with the students have been much less than was expected.

"My biggest complaint is ground maintenance," said Matthews, "they are awfully sloppy." Matthews mentioned that trash in general is the worst problem.

"Anything they don't want in their room they throw out the door."

As for regulations, Matthews said that the students are free to use anything they want, although he confirmed "there are supposed to be quiet hours, which they ignore."

He commented that the students "have it pretty good here, whether they know it or not. I think most of them do."

The outdoor bar is open from 4 p.m. to 11 p.m. nightly, and generally stays open on Saturdays until "Saturday Night Live" watched around the bar, is over.

Although Matthews admitted he will shed no tears when Quality Inn returns to normal, he stressed that he has gotten along well with most of the students. "When I tell them to do something they always agree," he concluded.

FIT students also seem to be about ready to forfeit the nearby pool and open bar for a closer proximity to the Jensen campus.

"At school you can get up at five minutes to eight for an 8 o'clock class," said Sullivan.

That one convenience may be reason enough for FIT students to gladly forego their life of luxury at the Quality Inn; that blessed extra hour of sleep.

Detour to be lifted

If things go according to schedule, motorists will not have to use the detour to get to Savanna Road from Commercial Street after this Saturday.

County Commissioner Frank Wachs said that by Saturday, Dec. 1, all roadwork on the Savanna-Commercial project should be finished.

That does not mean that there will be a finished coat of asphalt to drive on, Wachs explained, but said it should mean the detour will no longer be necessary.

For the last month or so, about half a mile of Savanna Road, from its intersection with Commercial Street southward, has been closed to all but local traffic. This has resulted in a detour through the Timberwick development on Rosetree Road.

When the detour is removed, the road surface on Savanna will still be rough, and there may be times when only one lane is open, but Wachs said by the end of December, the entire project, including sidewalks, a "travel coat" and paint striping, should be finished.

"They've still got some shoulder work to do, and they're working on the sidewalks now. When everything else is done, then they'll go over all of the road area with a travel coat of asphalt," said Wachs. He explained that the "travel coat" is a very smooth, finish coat.

When asked about apparent deterioration of Rosewood Road through Timberwick during the period it has served as a detour road, Wachs said he feels the crumbling shoulders are a result of heavy roadwork trucks travelling over it. He said he feels damage to the roads "is a responsibility of that (the Savanna-Commercial) project," and he said he intends to "go after" the contractor, Dickerson, Inc., to get the firm to repair the damage.

The Martin County commission awarded a $314,640 contract to Dickerson for the job on April 3. When the contract was awarded, the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce expressed hope the job could be finished during the slack, summer season. But not much work was done on the project until early in August, and by then Chamber officials were voicing fears that the project would create traffic headaches during the Christmas shopping season, when area merchants depend heavily on revenue to get them through the leaner months of the year.

While there can be no question that the detour has delayed the flow of traffic, it is not known how much the roadwork has affected business. Sales have been brisk in recent weeks, as more and more seasonal visitors return from northern states and as residents are beginning their Christmas shopping. It's hard to say how much better business might have been with the job finished in the summer, but no merchants seem to feel the work has had the disastrous effect on business that was once feared. Perhaps one reason is that the Commercial Street portion of the job, up to the point of being ready for a travel coat, was done first.

When the entire project is finished, the improvement on Savanna Road will run from Silver Maple Road through the Commercial Street intersection to a point near the back of the Jensen Beach Plaza shopping center. The Commercial Street improvement extends from a point about 560 feet west of the intersection to one about 600 feet east of the intersection.

Lions Pancake Day is this Sunday

Lovers of pancakes and sausage should hold their appetites this weekend, to make room for the Lions' Pancake Day breakfast Sunday at Langford Park.

The semi-annual event, which has attracted growing hundreds over the past few years, will again be held at Langford Park field house, with serving from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. The menu includes juice, a "stack of wheats," sausage and coffee. Members of the Jensen Beach club and their auxiliary will be preparing and serving the food.

Chairman for this event is Virgil Wilson, who has recruited nearly every active Lion in the club for preparations on Saturday and for doing the cooking and dishing up on Sunday.

Since its inception 18 years ago, at the suggestion of the current president George Mack, Pancake Days have financed thousands of dollars worth of care and treatment of deaf and blind children and adults.

Tickets this year are $2. All the net proceeds go toward the Lions' many civic and welfare projects.

Condo Assn. set Dec. 7

The Treasure Coast Condominiums Association will have its annual legislative meeting Dec. 7, at 10 a.m. at the Vista Pines clubhouse at 2600 S.E. Ocean Blvd., Stuart.

L.J. Aubrecht will be chairman. Invited guests will include Sen. Don Childers, Sen. Harry Johnston, Sen. Phil Lewis, Rep. William Myers, Rep. Chuck Nergard and Rep. Dale Patchatt.

The legislators will be fresh from the special legislative session, and will be prepared to discuss amendments to Chapter 718—Condominium Act, passed during the last regular session of the legislature.

Santa faces too rumpled to go on display again

Unless individual merchants do it, there will be no Christmas decorations in downtown Jensen Beach this year. However, that won't keep Santa away.

Over the last several years, the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce did its part to add color for the holiday season by erecting two large Santa Claus faces on utility poles along Commercial Street. It wasn't much decoration, but at least it showed the holiday was not being ignored by the Chamber.

This year, the Chamber is not deliberately ignoring Christmas. It's just that the Santa faces have become too haggard-looking to bother putting on display.

Outgoing Chamber President Jon Chicky was asked if the organization planned to put up any decorations, and he replied, "I don't think so. Every year there's a squabble with the (utility) pole people over us using their poles to mount the Santa faces. A truck hit one of the faces last year, and they just don't look very good."

Chamber secretary Helen Richardson agreed with Chicky's assessment of the faces, saying she would be ashamed to see them posted again.

Just because there won't be Santa faces hanging from poles, that doesn't mean Santa won't come to Jensen. Chamber director Fred Meaker will don a pillow, red suit and fake beard on Saturday, Dec. 8, and ride through the downtown area on a fire truck, posing as the jolly old fellow whose belly shakes like a bowl full of jelly. Details of his visit to Jensen will be published in next week's Mirror.

In the river it's 'trout trout and more trout'

BY DONNIE WILKIE

The reason that God made a lot of different kinds of fish, we were told when we were young, was so that there would be lots of different kinds of fish for fishermen to catch.

Huh?

That theory, needless to say, was just thought of, not too long ago — exactly two paragraphs ago. And if it had been tested against the reports of catches made last week in the waters of Jensen Beach and Port St. Lucie, it would have fallen right on its face.

As we all learned last week, there need only be one fish, or should I say lots of one kind of fish — the trout — for the week to be a successful one fishing wise.

Almost everything that was caught and reported last week added up for a week of, as Tom Stewart of a local bait and tackle establishment said, "trout, trout and more trout."

Why?

"Because," said Stewart, "The surf is too dirty due to the high winds that are coming in toward shore. The only place the fishermen can go is into the river."

And, for the most part, that's just what they did. Or they stayed home. We did get one report of a catch in the Jensen Savannas, as Steve and Mark Hazard bagged 20 bream and a pickerel. They were using live worms.

All of the following catches involved trout, in some way or another:

Charlie Areni got five trout, in the Indian River, using touts; Sandy Adair grabbed 36 trout in a two day period, using a Gold Tony spoon; Bill Ditzel got 12 trout, with live shrimp; Floyd Gillam roped six, using a Gold Tony spoon; Ron Haskins caught a six-pounder, using live shrimp; Gary Salisbury and Scott Galliven nailed 18, as well as two snappers, off the Jensen Bridge in the Indian River, using live shrimp; and Ed Wagner got four trout, up to four pounds each, using a Gold Tony spoon.

All of the above catches were made in the Indian River, whether specified or not.

In other catches around the area, Leonard Litster bagged six blues in the surf, using mackerel, while Max Maitland beached three blues, also in the surf, using mackerel.

Willie and Lee Catlett could brag of three pompano, three whiting, and six blues after their day in the surf, using both mackerel and shrimp.

Finally, Tom Hargrave laced 12 whiting, fishing in the surf, using shrimp.

Meanwhile, the area's weather was calm, with almost no rain on the week, except for an outburst of 0.34 inches on Sunday, November 25.

Temperatures, both high and low, as well as the rainfall, for each day last week, as well as the area's tides for the upcoming week, follow:

Army Kettles here nest week

The jingle of bells over the Salvation Army Kettles will be heard soon in the area, according to Lt. Gordon Michaels, head of the S.A. for Fort Pierce, Stuart and Jensen.

The kettle in Jensen will be located at the Winn Dixie Shopping Plaza on the first three Saturdays in December, the 8th, 15th, and 22nd. Members of the Jensen Beach Kiwanis Club and Rotary Club will man the collection station here.

Funds are used to buy food, clothing and toys for needy families referred to the S.A. by various welfare agencies, to be distributed before Christmas.

People wanting to donate items of clothing to the Salvation Army in Jensen Beach are temporarily out of a drop point, Lt. Michaels told the Mirror. The box which had been located at the west end of the Winn Dixie supermarket was ousted on a directive from Winn Dixie headquarters. Any business or shopping center willing to provide a new location should contact him at Fort Pierce 464-4846.

NET-LEASED PROPERTIES

QUESTION: Over the past 20 years, my wife and I have purchased and sold several apartment houses. We have reached the stage where we don't want to be involved in the management of property and are looking for security. We have done well and would like to continue investing in real estate. Do you have any suggestions?

ANSWER: You should consider investing in properties net leased to corporate tenants on a long-term basis.

The owner of a property which is net leased is normally spared the necessity of facing uncertain operating costs because the tenant, under the terms of the lease, agrees to pay the expenses, such as real estate taxes, insurance, utilities, and upkeep.

Occasionally, a lease which may be referred to as a net lease does have some exposure. For example, a lease may be drawn where the owner must pay the fire and liability insurance costs.

The attractiveness of a net-leased property is based on the investor's ability to evaluate the security of the lease. He can check the credit rating and the net worth of the tenant quite easily, and can weigh various net leases using this evaluation.

Investing in net leases is a lot like investing in corporate bonds, in that there is a direct interplay between risk and rates. This is evidenced by the old investing axiom, "The greater the risk, the higher the reward."

Net leases can provide a comfortable investment for the security-minded investor who wants to avoid involvement in management of property. Perhaps you should explore them for your portfolio.

Let's discuss your investment program. Call me at 334-9747, or stop by:

The first step taken

The Martin county Commission has taken the first step in what will become a major development of water for residences in the north county area.

Preparation of a five million dollar bond issue for the development of a well field and the purchase of Southern Gulf Utilities lines should get the ball rolling.

The well field would be located south of Commercial St. between U.S. 1 and Pinecrest Lakes development. It would feed to the lines located on Sewall's Point, and also feed a new line across the Jensen Beach Causeway to Hutchinson Island.

The plan is sound, and does not force residents to hook into the county system. Future growth would possibly dictate that future residents might be forced to tie into the system, with water being made available to developers of the future.

But, too much water

The torrential rains that flooded parts of Jensen Beach showed the county that there is still much to be done in designing drainage for low-lying areas.

That a subdivision was under two feet of water from the rains indicates that the engineering for drainage was faulty. It is inconceivable that a state road would be flooded for days on end, but it happened.

No one seems to understand how SR707 near Stuart would be flooded, with drainage access to the St. Lucie River not too far away.

The county commission should use the inconvenience of the flooding as incentive to find a solution for problem areas, and do it soon. We are just entering the fall rainy season.

The out-patient plan

Efforts of Martin Memorial Hospital to establish an "out-patient facility" in Port St. Lucie should be encouraged by the city. It is a first step in reaching medical help to residents.

Such a facility would not be the end, but a first step. As need grows, facilities can be expanded.

We support the Martin Memorial move because it is a non-profit hospital, highly regarded and operating with the full support of the community. Others interested in hospital facilities for Port St. Lucie are profit oriented.

There is nothing wrong with being profit oriented, but we feel that a hospital can do more with funding if it has both the non-profit status, and the demanding financial support of the community.

They need the votes

St. Pierre was the capital of Martinique, and an important election was planned. Mount Pelee had been grumbling, and even flashed several warnings of a major eruption from its molten center. Some wanted to evacuate the city.

But, the governor needed the votes, and he refused to evacuate the city of 30,000 until the election day.

The mountain had other ideas. It was on May 8, 1902 that Pelee erupted.

Molten streams of lava, huge boulders, hot ash and steam covered the city. All but one, a prisoner in a jail cell below the ground, died.

The governor needed the votes. A museum attests to his folly and the death of a town and its population.

Martinique is a beautiful island, discovered by Columbus in 1502. It is French. Its people are happy, bustling and friendly.

Tourism has just begun coming of age on the island, and adds much to an economy based upon rum, sugar, pineapples, bananas and fruit by-products.

Not too many of the people work, however. Those that do are industrious.

Much of Fort du France, the capital of the 417 square mile island, is still a lovely metropolis, with only small portions ruined by the hawkish tourist traps that build up in the Lesser Antilles islands frequented by tour boats.

Beautiful and quaint outdoor restaurants offer delectable dishes of the Creole, or French delicacies that defy imagination.

The fish stew and grilled conch are excellent. Only in those islands can the delicate Pina Collada be found tasting just right.

We toured the island from our base at Club Mediterranee near the southern tip of Martinique at St. Anne. We saw the fish market at Le Robert, with fishermen cutting steaks from the vicious looking sharks on the concrete pier, selling them to the natives.

The locally produced beer was light and refreshing. We passed through fields of banana trees, coconut groves and stands of sugar in the minimal plains area that separates the mountains of both the south and the north.

The pineapple plantations were vast, and well tended.

As we cut across the northern part of Martinique we passed through rain forests, with giant ferns rising up the mountain cliffs that went streight up and streight down from the narrow road.

Up and up we went, traversing the side of Mount Pelee, part of its crater at 4,656 feet covered by menacing clouds. Then we started down, and soon the black volcanic sand of St. Pierre's beaches came into view, and the homes that lined the sides of the mountain from the Caribbean to about 1,500 up.

There is much poverty, but there seemed to be a proliferation of small cars in front of each shack. Many abandoned autos lined the roads, as if left there following an accident. This was true throughout the island.

The museum tour at St. Pierre chronicled the eruption of Pelee. Photographs and artifacts were displayed in the airconditioned building that overlooked the picturesque black beaches. We passed through many of the ruins still standing along the shoreline.

Lunch in an outdoor cafe featured island specialties, and rum punch that was excellent. We toured a rum factory, saw the giant casks and lines of bottles being labeled by Martinique natives wearing colorful turban headdresses.

I couldn't find an English language newspaper on the whole island, though the European edition of the Herald American was on sale at the airport.

Throughout the tour I kept worrying about the human waste of lives that that governor cost by holding the population in town for an election. It seemed such a waste.

Later, I found that while there is much farming on the island, there is also few who work. It seems, in an oversimplification, I'm sure, that the island has a strong vote in the French parliament. In order to protect that vote, the people receive much welfare, so much that I understand a family with ten children can live comfortably on welfare, and afford a new car every two years.

Thus, the incentive to work is lessened. The governament needs the votes.

Such a gorgeous island. The music, the spirit, and the pleasures of trying to understand and be understood in French, all banded together to make it a memorable visit.

Warning: May be dangerous to sanity and the packaging represents approximately 60 percent of the cost of our product."

These words, coming from the suave management representative of a nationally known firm during an interview over my televisions set, did more than impress me – they turned the thermostat on my blood up from slow boil to burn.

Packaging, more and more these days, it seems, isn't designed so much to keep the germs out as it is to keep us from ever finding out if the stuff inside is any good in the first place. The "truth in packaging" law should include a "truth in opening" amendment.

When the first came out with the concept of packaging or bottling medicines so they'd be "child-proof," I was willing to go along with the gag.

having raised a tribe of bottle-opening snoopies myself, the need for some such precaution appeared necessary.

But with most of the so-called child-proof tops, the designers rapidly passed over the pinnacle of safety into the valley of impossibility. Almost without exception, of late all the "child-proof" tops on medicines I've taken home have been adult-proof – openable only by a deviate child with the soul of an axe-murderer.

A couple of weeks ago, I went home with a bottle of medication I was in particular need of. I did all the things the message on the cap told me to do – I pushed down and turned – I turned and pushed down – I said several unprintable words.

Nothing worked. I went to bed frustrated, and brought the offending bottle into the office with me the next day. Salli Campbell, who knows how to do everything better than most, gave it one adroit turn, and off came the cap. But friend and guardian angel Peg Meissner told me she'd had the same trouble, and solved it by severing the plastic container in two with a carving knife.

Her commiseration helped. So it not just me they're after.

Another packager threatening my sanity is the guy who invented those so-called twist-off metallic caps for soft-drinks. The current frailties of my innards having converted me to a soda-sipper, I have become addicted to a certain lemon-lime drink you can find most of the time only in those beakers bastioned by unscrewable screw-tops.

With my first failure, I thought it was simply muscular weakness. I went down to Ace Hardware and bought a sturdy pair of pliers, which worked great on smaller bottle-tops. But the pliers, like their present owner, haven't yet become friendly with the metric system. The liter bottle bottle-tops were too much for them to handle.

I now have an ice pick, with which I stab the tops to death, and sprinkle-shake the lemon-lime over my ice cubes, like I sprinkle linens for ironing.

I've discovered that most of these impassable package barricades can be overpassered one way or another if you're mad enough. The plastic-and-paper jealously guarding my favorite cereal will give way to a sharp pair of scissors (after an extra dose of vitamin C and iron), and the plastic straight-jackets imprisoning the digestion tablets which I especially need after any given Battle of the Containers can be unleashed with a knife-stab and a quick karatee chop. It's all in learning carefully the printed instructions – and doing exactly the opposite.

I'm down to one final invincible foe. A few weeks ago, someone recommended a particular brand of cleanser as being the answer to the rusty build-up on the walls of my shower. I rushed down and bought a bottle-one of those spray-type whatsises.

Every day since I got it, I have sneaked up on that fiendish flask in attempts to get it open and in working order. I have hammered, twisted, cajoled, and coddled.

Today, it still sits in my kitchen cupboard, obstinate, obdurate and inviolable. And the rust is still eating my shower walls.

I can see what they're working up to. They'll have reached their goal when, along with your load of packages, you have to buy a little man who knows how to open 'em.

Thanksgiving weekend gave me much to be thankful for – mainly that I made it over and I made it home.

It was really a major triumph – my first long-distance solo since I got kayoed by cancer back in February. I was discouraged from the effort by concerned friends on every side, but I was determined to find out if I could, and you don't find out without trying. Too, I really yearned to share the day of thanks with sister Jeanne, over in St. Pete for whom I'm especially thankful. She spent her entire summer nursing me on the road back toward health.

True, I doggie-paddled my way over. In fact, I made so many stops I'm sure the word was out that there was a state rest-room inspector on the loose. And the traffic both Wednesday afternoon and Sunday, was enough to kill off the stoutest of heart.

Coming back, and hitting the Turnpike after countless miles of mushy, nasty rain all the way across the state, I prepared to sit back and relax a little at a good steady 55. But soon both lanes filled up almost bumper to bumper, the left lane unenterable for the speeders hell-bent for home.

Then the right lane traffic got slower and slower, forced down to a crawl by some unseen force (by me) stumbling block ahead.

When I finally found a hole in the left lane and passed the "Blockage," my frustration was eradicated by an all-over grin. There were the culprits – two cars straight out of the '20s, in bright and perfect garb, prissing along at a lady-like 45.

(Happy Birthday, Salli.)

World's most questionable beach

Although there has been a lot of progress on some fronts to require truth in advertising, there are still scads of examples where the truth is being stretched beyond recognition.

Take, for example, Daytona Beach's claim as, "The world's most famous beach."

Granted, in terms of fame, Daytona Beach is more widely known than Jensen Beach, or, for that matter, Pismo Beach.

But world's most famous? I doubt it. Given the fact that a huge proportion of the world's population resides in China and reads or speaks no English, it is doubtful that most of those folks have ever heard of Florida, much less Daytona Beach. The world's most famous beach is probably some beach us American's wouldn't even know how to pronounce. And, if we could say it, we still wouldn't know where to find it on a map.

But there, in blazing neon, were signs proclaiming Daytona Beach as the world's most famous.

I thought that was a little pretentious of them, but figured their Chamber of Commerce had just gotten a little over zealous in boasting about the place. However, when I got there, I began to wonder if perhaps they'd gone a bit too far.

I mean, at what point does a little boasting become downright deceptive?

One would think that in order to proclaim a beach the world's most famous, one must first have a beach. Not so in the case of Daytona Beach. All I found was a sandy parking lot.

Actually, there were only a few cars parked there. Most of the cars were underway, parading back and forth in front of the motels.

There were rusted-out convertibles with sun tanned bearded and bikinied wonders in them. You could tell they were "into" music, because they shared theirs with everyone else within 50 yards.

And, there were Winnebagos with families sealed up inside them. Apparently most of them wanted to "experience" the beach by riding on it, but didn't want to dare pollute their sinuses with un-airconditioned, salty air. Of course, there were a few brave souls in the RV set who ventured out of their motor home for a walk in the sand. You could spot them by the white glare they cast.

In some respects, I guess you could say they had a beach. I mean, what else do you call the strip of sand just west of the Atlantic Ocean?

They had a wide strip of beautiful, white, powdery sand, with the ocean on one side and motels on the other. And they had lifeguards, and even a few seagulls. Both the guards and the birds are to be commended for braving the exhaust fumes.

But they didn't have sand dunes, and you probably never even heard of a coastal construction setback line. And most people who wanted a sun tan remained on the motel patios, where they didn't have to gear getting run over.

In fact, it's even questionable that the body of water they pretended was the Atlantic Ocean was really the ocean. Sure, there were waves. But the foam on the waves was more brown than white, and I didn't dare set foot in the water for fear of contracting some sort of disease.

What really clinched it, though, and made me sure that the place was not a beach was when a local resident was kind enough to tell me and a friend that we'd better find another place to toss our Frisbee. We could be ticketed by the police if our Frisbee crossed the path of the cars, he said.

Now I ask you, are beaches made for tossing Frisbees, taking long walks, and getting suntans, or are they made for motoring?

Depending on your answer, I'll tell you where you can find a nice one.

Hurricane director responds to criticism over David

Once Hrricane David was no longer a threat to the Miami-Fort Lauderdale area, the National Hurricane Center quit paying so much attention to it and let poor Martin and St. Lucie counties fend for themselves.

That seemed to be the consensus of local opinion after the hurricane hit here, and it was common to hear storm victims talking about the eye of the hurricane was passing over them, while the weather reports were locating the storm 30 miles out to sea off Palm Beach.

Residents were outraged at what seemed to be a snubbing of our communities at a time when up to date information was most needed. After the storm, County Commissioner Frank Wacha said he was going to contact weather officials to find out why there was so little information about the hurricane after it missed Miami.

Apparently, Wacha's complaint, as well as those of local civil defense personnel and other citizens, fell on receptive ears.

Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center, recently conducted a brief investigation into the complaints, and issued this letter to news media representatives as an explanation for what occurred during David:

Dear Sir:

Following the passage of Hurricane David, the National Hurricane Center received several complaints from residents who live north of Palm Beach. There was a general feeling we reduced our service after the center of David bypassed the Miami/Ft. Lauderdale area. This misconception puzzled me for several weeks, but I now believe that I understand the reasons for it.

Last week while I was participating in a conference on natural disasters in, Orlando, I had an opportunity to chat with Stephen Wells, and Phillip Rodi, Civil Defense Directors (or officials) of Martin and St. Lucie Counties, respectively. They urged me to spend a day during my return to Miami to conduct a brief fact finding mission in their counties.

The limited time allowed me to visit only one newspaper office, one radio station, and the County Administrators in each county. I apologize to those offices that were not contacted. The newspapers and radio stations selected were chosen by picking a telephone number at random from the yellow pages. Based on the letters and information obtained last week, I have tentatively arrived at the following conclusions. There were communication problems. Starting in my office, we had difficulty in getting messages through our electronic communication system to the user. Our messages are sent to a national center where a computer distributes them to various teletype circuits including UPI and AP. The excessive quantities of weather information generated by Hurricane David swamped the computer and delays of 15 to 20 minutes were common. We will be seeking a solution to this problem next week at a NOAA conference on hurricane services.

Another part of the communication problem occurred within the local area where temporary power failures disrupted the broadcasts of some radio stations. In at least one case, broadcasting was resumed at the transmitter site where no current weather information was available.

I am also convicted the misconception resulted in part from a lack of understanding about the realities of the broadcast activities in Florida. When a hurricane approaches the southeast coast, the three large network T.V. stations in Miami (Channels 4, 7 and 10) pool their resources and set up live broadcasts from our office. The broadcasts are released simultaneously from all three stations. This allows an excellent flow of timely weather information. The rest of the state benefits from this coverage via cable TV.

When David bypassed Miami and Ft. Lauderdale, the pool was disbanded and Channels 4, 7 and 10 resumed normal broadcasting. For cable viewers around the state there was a tremendous drop in hurricane information. Residents north of the Miami/Ft. Lauderdale area were forced to seek weather information from local broadcast sources at a time when some of their stations were experiencing temporary failures. People automatically concluded that service was reduced. Not so, but I can certainly sympathize with this conclusion.

Finally, I found serious misunderstanding of the structure of the hurricane. This is well illustrated by a conversation I had with one key official. He said "I knew you were in trouble when we began experiencing hurricane force winds and your advisories located the center over water northeast of Palm Beach." Hurricanes are not a point, but have size and dimensions. The eye of David was over 30 miles in diameter and partially over land while its geometric center was offshore of Palm Beach. At that time hurricane force winds were indeed occurring in Martin County. "Hurricane winds arrive before the center!" In this case hurricane force winds extended about 25 miles north and west of the geometric center.

We apparently failed to communicate this information properly to residents of Martin and St. Lucie Counties. I regret the misunderstanding and I offer the resources of my offices in the coming months to help alleviate the problems.

I offer two proposals for your consideration:

1. My staff will participate in live radio broadcasts from the Hurricane Center when a hurricane approaches Martin and St. Lucie Counties, if the radio stations can coordinate a simultaneous feed. This would be very important when the TV pool coverage in Miami is terminated.

2. I will commit resources to a hurricane educational program for both counties next spring.

I suggest we have a meeting next January or February to discuss this issue.

Sincerely,
Neil L. Frank

ACE Club for Handicapped Draws interest from IRCC

NEW SHIRTS—Joe Elko, president of the ACE club, a social organization for the handicapped, shows one of the newly-donated club T-shirts to his friend and assistant Sharon Bennion. Miss Bennion is with the vocational rehabilitation department at Indian River Community College.

Indian River Community College is getting excited about the effectiveness of a locally-born club for the physically handicapped, and is keeping an eye on its progress, according to Vocational rehabilitation specialist Sharon Bennion of the IRCC staff.

The club is the ACE, which for the past year has been a social outlet for young people who otherwise might have no motivation in "getting out amongst 'em." Its founder is Joe Elko, a cerebral palsy victim who came to Jensen Beach two years ago with his mother Harriet, and who has made it his mission in life to help others with handicaps.

Before the ACE club became a reality, it was to Sharon whom Joe went for ideas and suggestions on organizing such a group. Her department screens, tests and assesses the handicapped people referred to them, and because of this she knows who the victims are, where they live, and whether or not they would benefit by such social get-togethers.

"I got involved because I'm a friend of Joe's, and agreed to be his assistant because I happen to work in the field," she told The Mirror this week in an interview at the Elko home on South Street.

The club, she said, is "one of a kind." To her knowledge, no project like it has been tried before.

"It is needed," she said, "because most handicapped persons don't have the impetus to get out in society. It takes a motivating factor to get them involved."

Over the past months, Joe's "baby" has proven to be a healthy one, both for the young handicapped themselves and for their parents. In addition to their once-a-month Sunday meetings at Jensen Beach Community Church, there have been picnics and other "extracurricular" gatherings which have proven fun for everyone concerned.

And more are planned, like the Christmas party set for this Sunday at the Elko home, a boat ride, and other outings not yet firmed up.

Sharon Bennion is the perfect helping hand for a project like the ACE club. A native of West Palm Beach, she went on to earn her bachelor of science in psychology and her master's in vocational rehabilitation from the University of Georgia. She did her internship at IRCC, and is now a full member of the staff.

The vocational rehabilitation program at IRCC, she said, is a complete one.

"We test and assess each person," she said, "and we work with them with the goal of getting them into a college course or into some kind of work they can do. We follow-through, and help them get jobs if we can."

The college also has a shelter workshop, where handicapped persons are trained in some craft adaptable to the individual's capacity or limitation.

Through the publicity and education engendered by the ACE club, the community is becoming more aware of the needs, and many have donated financially and otherwise to its support.

"These were donated," she said, proudly holding up a T-shirt bearing the club motto.

Information will be disseminated to a broader audience in March, when the ACE will have a booth at the county fair. Members and parents are now at work preparing items to be sold at the annual event.

The club now has nine members. It is open to all physically handicapped persons between the ages of 15 and 45. Anyone wishing to join may contact Joe Elko at 334-3602.

On Curing yourself and warts

CHAPTER OF AARP

BY ERNIE CURWEN
Tel.334-0756

The seniors, of course were very much concerned about IRAN, but they were so exasperated, they were practically speechless and confined their discussions to the ever present health problem and for a change, there were some positive items.

One senior mantioned the "Wellness" concept that he saw on 60 minutes last Sunday. One of the things that impressed him the most was when a doctor said that 50 to 70 percent of the primary visits to a doctors office could have been handled by the patient, if they had some "Wellness" training. He further went on with the comment, sounds like what our grandmas and the early pioneers did as a regular way-of-life. Then, he asked, "Why can't we get something like that started here?"

This started another senior thinking about an item he read in the Oct. Readers Digest about "Cure-Yourself". The article explained how a person's subconscious mind can handle many body repair jobs. A controlled experiment proved that the subconscious mind was able to remove many warts from one side of the body, as instructed and not from the other. He wanted to know if we couldn't get more information on that subject as it sounded good to him.

Then, still another senior told about an article he had seen recently, that described how all life started when a male cell joins a female cell and subsequentially divides and divides until there billions of cells to make up a living thing. He said, the point of the article was that somewhere in those first two tiny cells was all the information necessary to make legs, arms and brains.

Therefore, he concluded, if each and every cell knows just how to build the living thing, one of these days, through the subconscious mind we will be able to repair any and all defective or damaged parts. So, he felt that there is more reason to hope that sometime in the future, health care can be less expensive, with Do-It-Yourself.

Here is an item in a lighter vein, but with a lot of food for thought. Senator Chiles' Committee on Aging issue frequent reports on the seniors can tell what is being done for the elderly. However, the reports are written in "gobbledegook" for bureaucratic consumption.

For example, Senator Eagleton said in regards to Title III regulations, "Although any number of important issues have been raised, I believe the key resolution of many of these is the question of potential weakening or dismantling of existing network of State and area agencies". What is he saying, the actions of agencies will have to be curtailed or is he afraid they will be?

This goes on for 4 legal pages. It seems as though, if the committee goes to all this work to issue reports, it could go one step further and have an interpreter, change the Washitonian Gobbledegook into standard English of the senior's school days. Who wants to tell Senator Chiles' district representative about it when he is in the area next week?

This is the time of the year when seniors are especially vulnerable to consumer fraud, as they are in a happy, trusting mood. A brochure issued on this subject by Florida Dept. of Health and Reabilitive Services gives some pointers.

First, it mentions that Florida ranks 4th in the nation in the number over 60 years and first in percentage of residents over 60. Then, it goes on list the 4 most common swindles.

Referral selling is where you will get a discount if you refer some friend, but actually it's cheaper in regular stores. Free offers is another; you have just won something on TV, let me bring it to you. Service, etc. then make it cost more.

Then there is Fear selling, an fake inspector finds your home needs immediate attention, and the inspector will help you get it. You pay him and never see him again. And there is the old one, bait and switch. Something is offered at a very low price, but here is something much better. We are familiar with all of these but at times, the professional make us "believers".

Finally, remember: Don't be rushed into a deal; Beware of something for nothing; Be suspicous of gimicks; Read a contract completely, especially the fine print; don't sign what you don't understand; report suspects.

CHAPTER EVENTS

The chapter knows that seniors and AARPers are very much concerned with health problems, as they are trying to do something for them, by having health seminars once a month. The December one will be on diabetes, Dec. 6, 9:30 a.m. at Langford Field. All seniors are invited. It consists of a movie, discussion by an expert on the subject, distribution of pamphlets and a question and answer period. The November seminar was on cardiovascular diseases and was very well received by a group of 33. On Jan. 3, there will be one on mental health. Make note of date.

Frank Edwardson, Chm of the "Do-it-Yourself (with help!)" committee has more requests than can be handled, but he is trying. 56, if you get put off a week or so, please have patience, or better yet, find Frank some helpers. Folks that can do those small repair jobs around the house and yard are in great demand, such as: when the wind blows my awning rattles; shelf bracket is loose; cord on toaster is frayed; that drippy faucet is driving me bats; and even I can not balance my d— check book. So, if you can do any of these things, let Frank know and make a few bucks. 287-0473.

It is getting near income tax preparation time, so AARPers and all seniors will be glad to know, the chapter will again have the Tax Ait assistance with the counsellers at Stuart National Bank and Jensen First Federal S&L, starting by late January. All interested persons should contact Dick Weiser (334-6142) or Marie Martin (286-0790).

Often, AARPers and seniors are asked to contact their elected officials, and some later say, "Oh I would have written, but I didn't have an address." Well, so that excuse will no longer be valid, Leta Keith, Legislatrive Chm. has supplied a list of names, as follows.

Hon. Lawton Chiles, 443 Russell Bldg. Wash. D.C. 20510; Hon. Richard Stone, 1227 Dirksen Bldg. Wash. D.C. 20510; Hon. L.A. Bafalis, 408 Cannon Hse. Office Bldg. Wash. D.C. 20515; Hon. Charles Nergard (Dist. 76), 2300 Virginia Ave. Ft. Pierce, Fla. 33450; Hon. Wm. G. Myers (Dist 77), P.O. Drew 2433, Stuart, Fla. 33494; Hon. Frank Wacha, Martin County Com.

The National AARP News had some items of local interest that may have been overlooked. A "goodie" we all like to hear about. A 76 yr. old president of a Taunton, Mass. firm says that their records show that 55 and over are the most reliable workers and of the 160 employees, 46 are over 55 and 21 over 65, with an 82 yr old'gal' being rewarded for 24 years of service and is still "one of our fastest" workers. Some of us wish we could go back to work and "show 'em".

Then, with tongue in check we comment on National raising the dues another dollar, that is up 100 percent since chapter dues were pegged at $1.00. They say that every effort has been made to reduce expenses, but fail to mention a single instance. Where as, the chapter by using volunteers for many of its services has been able to keep dues unchanged and Bulletin advertising the same as in 1975. National is always telling Congress to cut their spending, maybe they should get their own house in order first. Remember, this is not an offical chapter comment.

Thanksgiving was a happy one

Thanksgiving was a happy one for many here in the Park. The Frank Pico family arranged a group of 13 friends from the northern end of South Bonita. They all enjoyed a dinner at the Wayside. The southern end of South Bonita had their overall dinner at the Rec. Hall. It comprised a party of 14 friends and neighbors of Bob Young's. Ruth Bowes was driven down to Pompano Beach by her great niece Lila Marie to share a turkey dinner at their new home. Her moth June prepared the bird and fixings. After she spent the night there, June drove her back to H Out. We enjoyed the dinner & visit. June will remain here at her trailer for a week or more. Helen Allison traveled to visit her son Hal in Hastings, N.Y. for Thanksgiving. She may be delayed returning to Holiday Out due to snow there.

The Pavilion Church was attended by 98 persons. Martha Lewis led the Lay Services, Rev. Clark Thompson officiated, Irene Hamm was the organist & Dee Brink the pianist. The Hobe Sound Bible Academy (High School) Quartet performed with Mr. Garry Peterson, music director, Ed Hudson, pianist, Darrell Sweeney, tenor, & Richard Hall in the lead, John Engant was the baritone, David Young, the bass, also participated. Three songs were sung and were much appreciated.

George and Lil Bares grandsons, Tim and Phil Senz, along with their parents Pat and John of Mentor, Ohio were visiting in the Park for a week during Thanksgiving. They enjoyed services at the Pavilion Church as well as our great beach and pool. Even the weather cooperated. Now Grandma and Grandpa Bares are very — lonesome.

A crowd numbering 105 attended "Bingo" Friday Nite at the H.Out Rec Hall. Attendance is increasing weekly. Number calling was done by Bob Holden and Sonny Gramstorff with Bill McWhirk, a newcomer to the committee being anchorman. Geo Madaus and Les Ullmann assisted. There were three winners — on the "Winner take all" game: Marge Newman, Wm. Ryotti & Shirley Hamiel. Millie Pisz was in charge of coffee and cookies.

Art Nagy works with the Audubon Society of Miami which scans the beaches from Hutchinson Isle to Tequesta. They walk our beaches in search of fallen, dead and live birds in the early mornings. They take them to Miami for inspection to learn what it is that affects our bird life. They were surprised to find a Great Blue Heron floundering in the sky. It landed in our pool here at Holiday Out. Art picked it up and took it to his trailer. With the help of a friend and neighbor, Gert Long, they finally put it in a bag to transport it to the Wild Bird Refuge Centre at Ft. Lauderdale. It was treated for a week for minor injuries. Art brought the bird back to Hutchinson Isle and let it loose in its natural habitat. The bird had traveled over 200 miles in a car. Art had the feeling that the bird would have preferred using its own wings.

Ginny and Vince Stratford, Mary and Bill Cameron and former Holiday Out lot owners, Maureen and Hal Holmes attended the Thanksgiving weekend convention of the Florida State Association of National Campers and Hikers at Kissimmee. There were three hundred motor homes and trailers registered for the convention with many special events planned for the bi-yearly get-together. Particularly enjoyable was the concert given by the U.S. Navy Band from Orlando.

Twenty-eight good friends in the north end of the Park got together for a traditional Thanksgiving feast again this year and had a wonderful time.

Sharks' White: "These are my kids, and I love them"

BY DONNIE WILKIE

A long time ago, when the Junior Football program was first established, someone must have had Mike White in mind.

White is the Head Coach of the Jensen Beach Sharks, a football team connected partially to the Martin County Junior Football League. If you've never heard of White, or the Sharks, there is a good reason.

Almost no one has– until White came along, anyway.

"These are my boys, and I love them," said White of his team, comprised entirely of 8-9 year-old players. "I feel they are a big part of this program, and they have been neglected in the past."

That is White's main contention. "Where are the Barracudas and Razorbacks going to come from in years ahead?" he asks. "From the Sharks, that's where," he answers.

"They are just as much a part of this program as anyone. They work just as hard. They may be younger, and not as good yet, but they are just as important as the other players."

Perhaps the Sharks have been neglected– or should we say the entire "B" League program in Martin County. Established as a training league a few years ago, with no official standings or emphasis put on scores, only a handful of teams exist. To Jensen Beach's credit, they were one of the first.

In fact, this season the Sharks found themselves without a coach– at least until White came along. The native-Tennessean was only planning to spend a few more weeks in Florida before returning home in September, but when Frank Fitzpatrick, who he was helping with the Barracudas, asked him to take over the Sharks, he accepted.

It may have been the most important decision White ever made.

"I was a little scared at first," said White of his early coaching days. "I do a lot of yelling at the kids, but they all realize now it's just because I'm concerned about them.

"I really hate to see this season end," said White after his team lost 19-0 Sunday in the Jensen Beach

Bond-Tilton future uncertain after crash

BY BOB FRYER

Rusty Bond and Ren Tilton could have had worse luck at Daytona International Speedway Sunday afternoon, but if it had been any worse, Tilton would probably be in Daytona Community Hospital.

The Jensen Beach racing duo had a lot at stake riding on their entry in the International Motor Sports Association's 225-mile race at Daytona Sunday. And, they lost nearly everything.

A sudden rain shower moved over the backstretch of the track shortly after race leader Bill Whittington finished the 47th lap of what was to be a 59 lap race. Before Whittington could finish the 48th lap, the rain produced a massive pile-up, resulting in damage to 14 cars and a trip to the hospital for at least three drivers. One of the damaged cars was the Bond-Tilton Porsche 911.

Tilton could well have been one of the injured, had he remained in his car. Fortunately, however, Tilton got out of his car and was helping drag another driver from a wrecked car when a Porsche Carrera slammed into the driver's side of the Bond-Tilton car. The impact lifted the Porsche off the ground and catapulted the Carrera into the air. The driver of the Carrera got out of his car, then fell over.

In the wake of the crash, race officials declared the race over. As a result, the Bond-Tilton entry finished 10th in the GTU (small engine) class.

That should have given Bond and Tilton one point each in the GTU driver's standings. With one point added to their totals, it should have moved Tilton from a tie for sixth into fifth place in the final standings for the year. And, it should have moved Bond from 11th place into a tie for 10th place in the final IMSA GTU driver's standings. Since about $1,000 goes to 10th place and the 11th ranked driver gets nothing, the one point would have helped. But a quirk in the rules may mean Bond and Tilton won't get a point for their 10th place finish, as they didn't complete 90 percent of the mileage the GTU winner drove in the race.

The Jensen Beach team began the race with high hopes. Their car was running well, and they figured on a solid finish somewhere in the top five of their class.

When the green flag fell on the field of 67 cars, the Bond-Tilton number 60 Porsche was gridded in 47th place. But, more importantly, it was starting in eighth place among the 25 GTU cars which were running their own race within a race.

Before he had completed half a lap, Bond had moved into seventh spot among GTU cars. And before the half-way point when Bond got out and Tilton took over driving duties, he had outdueled two more GTU cars and was closing the gap on another one.

But something happened during the driver change, and Tilton had to visit the pits on each of the first three times around the track. Finally, a problem with a "kill switch," which is designed to shut off the engine, was diagnosed and solved.

By then, the car had dropped down to 10th place. And, before he had a chance to make up lost ground, the rains came and brought the race to its premature and unhappy end.

Bond and Tilton towed their battered car home Sunday night, and on Monday, their future as racers seemed bleak and uncertain. This was their last race with the sponsorship of West Palm bicycle dealer E.J. Pruitt, and until the race, they were hoping to sell their number 60 Porsche and build another, faster race car.

Now, they're not certain what they'll do. It looks like they will have an opportunity to co-drive Terry Wolter's Porsche 911 in the 1980 IMSA season opener, the 24 Hours of Daytona, in February. But the wreck Sunday may have ended their days of campaigning their own car on the IMSA circuit.

"We'll just have to tear into our car and see what it will take to put it back together," Tilton commented.

Bond-Tilton's car after crash tells the story

Tigers, Cobras in new district

BY DONNIE WILKIE

While Martin County and Fort Pierce Central may occupy different parts in the script of the Suncoast Conference Eastern Division this season — the Tigers of a spoiler, the Cobras of a contender — their paths may ultimately collide when it comes time to put up or shut up, in the District playoffs.

For the past four years, the two squads have struggled to escape what has been the state's toughest AAAA district, District 11, and only once (in last year's MCHS march to the state championship) has either managed to do it.

This year, the schools, by order of the Florida High Schools Activities Association, have been moved to another district, District 10, and both may benefit from the shift.

The pre-season feeling seems to be that West Palm Twin Lakes and Lake Worth Leonard will be state powerhouses in District 11, and while they may be able to beat up on the Tigers and Cobras during the relatively meaningless conference season, they won't have either of them to kick around once the playoffs begin.

Martin County and Central rate as the early favorites in the much weaker District 11, with the winner advancing into Regional play in March against the District 9 survivor (the favorite is Daytona Beach Mainland). So it would be of no surprise to anyone to see the super-rivals battling again, probably at a neutral site, in late February, after they have eliminated new district foes Merritt Island, Vero Beach, Eau Gallie, and Satellite.

A Central or Martin County Leonard or Twin Lakes (or whoever) battle would not materialize until the Sectionals, with the winner advancing to Lakeland for the state tournament March 13-15.

Tilton escapes injury in rainy, 14-car pileup

BY BOB FRYER

A light sprinkle fell a few laps before the spectacular pile-up. Pit crews were debating whether to bring cars in for a change to rain tires. However, it appeared the rain might not fall any harder, and with the race less than half an hour from its scheduled conclusion, everybody was holding off, trying to avoid a time-consuming tire change.

The downpour came suddenly, and moved in first over the backstretch, catching the drivers who were unfortunate enough to be there at the time off-guard.

Tilton said he's not sure how the pile-up began, but he said race winner Bill Whittington was unjustified in blaming drivers for not heeding caution flags and lights.

"I backed off when I saw the caution, and so did everybody else. But even with everyone slowing down, Suncoast Conference coaches pick Leonard as favorite - HOWEVER...

BILL WRIGHT
...picked own FPC team 3rd, because "that's where everyone else will pick us"

BY DONNIE WILKIE

There's a saying in life that goes something like "For every surprise, there's a good reason."

So when Lake Worth Leonard won The Mirror's first annual Suncoast East coaches' pre season poll, we went busily searching for a reason. And it was not far from our fingertips.

His name is Alvin Wright, and his game is coaching the Twin Lakes High School Rams. Last year, he quietly tip-toed into the Tiger Den in Stuart and proceeded to throw a mighty scare into the eventual state champions, the Martin County Tigers, before succumbing.

Apparently, he decided quiet and easy-going was the way to go.

In the poll of Suncoast East coaches, Wright picked his own team to finish last. That may sound quite unusual, especially when five of the other seven coaches thought his Rams good enough to be considered the team to beat. Only the ultra-confident Ernie Bell (Leonard) and newcomer Willie Gibson (Forest Hill) picked the Lancers to win the conference. But when Wright insisted on rating his squad at the bottom (and we tried to talk him out of it several times), the Lancers assumed the role of "paper-favorites," and the Rams were a strong second.

The Coaches' Consensus

1. Leonard
2. Twin Lakes
3. FP Central
4. Lake Worth
5. Martin County
6. Boca Raton
7. PB Gardens
8. Forest Hill

If anything, our poll revealed a lot about the personalities of the area's coaches. While Wright could say only "Who, us?" when told that his team was the overwhelming choice of his colleagues, Bell hesitated not a second in proclaiming the Lancers as the Suncoast East champions for a second straight season. He even suggested that they could be rated as one of the early favorites for ALL of the marbles in Lakeland March 13-15.

Meanwhile, in Stuart, Don Wallen was so honest in his assessment of his team's situation that he rated the Tigers tied for last with Palm Beach Gardens and Forest Hill. Wright rated him as the co-favorites, with Leonard.

Apparently, the only firm conclusion that could be drawn from the poll was that Forest Hill should finish last, or tied for last, unless you listen to Wright.

"Do you believe what they tell you?"

At Fort Pierce Central, second-year coach Bill Wright hit the nail on the head in his prediction of the poll's outcome. Since he was the first coach polled, he boldly rated himself third, if only "because that's where everyone else will put us."

Let it be noted that five of the conference's head men tabbed the Cobras as the third-place team, with only Palm Beach Gardens' Warcesur Jakes picking them higher (second, with Leonard third). The Cobras finished third overall, behind Leonard and Lakes.

Fifth graders at JBE color Thanksgiving with a football

JBE TURKEY DAY– It was Turkey Day at Jensen Beach Elementary School last week, and the center of the attraction were the annual Thanksgiving girls and boy football games, with teams of fifth-graders selected by Physical Education teacher Marty Figun squaring off. The Red team won the girls' game 14-13 while the Red took the boys' game 6-0. Here, Joy Zurawski tries to get past Christy Nowayta. Zurawski scored a touchdown for the Yellow team in the girls' game.

The world was spinning around them

In Detroit, the football Lions were busy preparing for their annual Thanksgiving football game. In New York, Santa Claus was riding merrily at the back of the Macy's Parade. And, in Tokyo of all places, the University of Miami and Notre Dame were celebrating the week leading up to something called the "Mirage Bowl."

But for a select group of fifth grade students at Jensen Beach Elementary, the only thing that mattered was that funny-looking brown thing bouncing around the field behind the school.

It might not have been the quality of football so often displayed in your living rooms on Sunday and Monday, but that fact didn't seem to faze the participants in last Wednesday's annual Thanksgiving football games at the school.

The games, one for girls and one for boys, were a constant tunnel of action, with little strategy involved, but an overwhelming amount of enjoyment.

In the girls' game, the Red team defeated the Yellow, 14-13, while in the second game, featuring the boys, the Red triumphed, 6-0.

Each team, consisting of 14 players, seven of which could be on the field of play, was selected in advance by JBE Physical Education teacher Marty Figun, who also served as coach for all four squads.

The girls' game, played in the morning before the student body of the school, was delayed briefly by area showers, but the spirits of the girls involved weren't.

"We had a couple practice games, but none of us really practiced that much," said Jennifer Hunecke, who scored the winning touchdown for the Red team in the girls' contest. "The teams were selected last Friday (five days before the games), so we didn't really have that much time."

Hunecke caught a pass from Laurie Henry for the game's winning touchdown with less than two minutes remaining in the game, and Henry followed with the extra-point run to make it 14-13.

The Yellow had taken an early lead when Susanne Jones ran for the first touchdown of the day, but Tracy Dunne's touchdown moments later tied the score. Amy Workman converted the extra point, and the Red led, 7-6. Joy Zurawski made it 13-7 for the Yellow with a touchdown and an extra point, leading to Hunecke's final TD.

For some, it may have been the start of bigger things ahead, though someone speculated that girls don't usually grow up to become football players.

But Anita Hulsey and Teresa Jones have other ideas.

"We want to play with the boys next year," said Jones.

And it is likely that they will, since the Jensen Beach Optimist Club, which rules junior league football, follows a policy of letting the girls participate in their programs with the boys.

"We'll cream them," she continued. "We'll get up a girls' team, and win everything. We'll go to the World Series, the Rose Bowl, the Orange Bowl!"

Will someone please tell her that the World Series is for baseball players. Thank you.

When Susanne Jones was asked what she liked about the game, she said, "Nothing, because I didn't really know how to play." Yet she was one of the game's biggest offensive threats.

She lived in France," explained Dunn, "and she had never played the game before. But she can run– and everyone would hand the ball to her because of that. She didn't have to know anything!"

"I don't care if we lost," concluded Teresa Jones. "Sometimes you win, and sometimes you lose. That's life. Some of the girls were crying. That isn't right. We were just playing for fun."

Perhaps Hunecke said it best.

"If your're a good loser, you're a winner."

Sometimes you tent to lose sight of the fact that these are fifth graders talking, not college professors.

A 50-yard pass from Bryan Philhemus to John Chancey won the boys' game, played Wednesday afternoon, 6-0. Pete Dursen shared the quarterbacking chores with Polhemus, while Kirk Haynes and Brian Selmon called the signals for the Yellow.

Optimist Youth Football Festival.

"That's all I thought about today was my kids. I really don't know what I'm going to do now without them for a year, but I think I'll be back."

"How in the world can I leave 20 little guys like that?"

White was disappointed in his team's play in the Festival, but emphasized that the importance in the game did not lie in winning or losing.

"They (Fort Lauderdale's Southwest Saints, who they lost to) blocked excellantly, we didn't block at all, explained White. "We got burned But look, the kids forgot about it ten minutes later. They were so caught up in the whole afternoon, they couldn't have cared if they lost the game. They got a chance to participate– to be a part of the whold thing, and that was great.

"This year, I didn't do everything a coach is supposed to do. But I've learned a lot, and next year, it will be different. The kids will be better next year, and so will I."

White said he really had no intention of moving up with the kids he coached this year. Rather, he would like to stay in the age group he's in, and teach kids the basic fundamentals of football.

"If I did that, where would I be in six years time? I'd rather stay where I am. Every year, I'm starting a new group of kids in football, and that's really great.

"When they first asked me to be the coach, I thought I was shafted," he admitted. "But then I thought I thought I was drafted. Now, I don't care. It was the greatest thing that ever happened.

"I made a lot of friends this year," he said. White was originally from Nashville, then lived in Louden, where, when the high school football team went to the state finals, the newspaper headline screamed "Will the last person leaving please turn out the lights?" That's how small Louden is. "They really welcomed me and became friends.

So, it appears the Jensen Beach football program will benefit from White again in 1980. This may, in fact, have found a Sharks coach for a long time to come. Whether that develops or not, White has left his mark on the program. And he has left a good mark on the kids he has dealt with all year.

White's eight words at the start of this article sum it up best.

It was still uncontrollable. It was raining so hard people couldn't see, and when the wrecked cars came into view, it was too late," Tilton said.

The Jensen driver said he ran into what apparently was Bill Whittington's Turbo Porsche. "It was already hit and was in the middle of the track when I ran into it. Bob Bergstrom hit the other (Don) Whittington car," Tilton said.

The collission was minor, causing slight damage to one wheel on Tilton's car. However, the number 60 Porsche rolled to the apron of the track and would not restart.

Tilton got out of his car and was in the process of dragging Bergstrom out of his Datsun Z car when a Porsche Carrera driven by Colombian Honorato Espinosa, "came barreling down the track. I heard him hit one car, I think the (Bill) Whittington car, then I looked up and saw him slam into mine. I was standing about 10 feet away," Tilton said.

Tilton said he could see his car lift off the ground on impact, and he said the Carrera was catapulted into the air. The driver, Espinosa, got out of the car, then fell over. Had Tilton still been in his Porsche when it was hit, he most likely would have been injured, as it was the driver's side of the car that was struck.

Espinosa reportedly suffered a minor heel injury, while the most severe injury was apparently sustained by Richard Small, the driver of a Camera. Small was admitted to Daytona Community Hospital for treatment of possible internal injuries. Bergstrom, whom Tilton helped from his car, was uninjured.

Tilton said by the time he got out of his car, there were at least six cars that had already wrecked. And, he said both the Whittington cars (the Whittingtons were the race leaders) were hit twice before Espinosa's car came through and caused so much damage. He said Bill Whittington's car, a vehicle valued at about $250,000, was destroyed and that Don Whittington's car was damaged, but limped back to the pits under its own power. A turbo Porsche driven by John Paul was demolished and scattered all over the track. Paul was in fourth place at the time.

Just after Tilton had wrecked, a Porsche driven by Terry Wolters came sliding through the pile of cars. Somehow, it made it through unscathed, and when Wolters pulled into the pits, he told Bond that it looked like Tilton has sustained only minor damage. It was only later, when Tilton caught a ride to the pits, that the Jensen Beach race team learned the bad news.

Tilton said the wreck lasted a long time, perhaps three to four minutes. "The cars just kept coming, and nobody could see in time to avoid it. Some were lucky. (Don) Devendorf slid through backwards and didn't touch a thing," he said. Devendorf won the GTU race and finished 10th in overall competition.

Tilton attributed the high number of cars involved in the pile-up to the blinding rain and to the location of the mishap.

"It happened in the middle of the straightaway, and you almost never see a wreck there. They're usually in a turn, but it was in an unexpected place, and even with cars slowing down, they were still going too fast to stop in time," he said.

Some of the faster cars in GT racing run around 200 mph down the backstretch, while the "slower" cars can run better than 175 mph in the straight.

ALAS POOR YORICK—Rod Aderholdt, director of special services at Martin Memorial Hospital, isn't giving a lesson in Shakespeare as he holds the human skull which inhabits the hospital's x-ray laboratory. He's demonstrating the use of the new fast 3M x-ray film which cuts to a minimum the radiation dosage to which patients are exposed, and which is now in use at MMH. (Staff photo)

New x-ray technique at MMH refines patient examinations

After two years of experimentation, Martin Memorial Hospital has contracted for a new and highly refined x-ray system which reduces by two-thirds the patient exposure to radiation, and at the same time gives a more definitive picture of the source of the ailment.

The new system, hospital administrator Guy Cromwell explained last week in a press interview, will not add to the patient's bill. Because the faster speeds of the new film will mean less wear and tear on x-ray equipment, it will yield a savings of approximately $30,000 to the hospital. The x-ray tubes, which cost some $7,000 each, will have to be replaced less frequently, Cromwell said.

The new film was developed by the 3M Company of St. Paul, Minn. Known as the Trimax High Information System, it is the first major breakthrough in reducing radiation exposure in 75 years.

When Wilhelm Roentgen first developed the x-ray in 1895, the administrator said, the patient stood between the beam and the sensitized plate on which the impression was recorded, and the patient took the full dose of radiation. In the early 1900s, Thomas Edison discovered that a calcium tungsate sheet between the beam and the subject intensified the light without increasing the radiation. The latter system with few refinments, has been the basic one used until 1973.

In that year, 3M introduced the Trimax rare earth phosphor imaging system, which reduces radiation exposure up to one eighth of the Edison system. The screens were developed at Lockheed Research Institute.

The use of rare-earth plates is so important to the advance of medicine, the director pointed out, because in the past many physicians have been reluctant to use x-ray more than sparingly, since radiation may cause cell damage, cancers and adverse genetic effects.

"When you drink alcohol in small doses over a prolonged period of time, the effect is not cumulative," he told the press. "X-ray is cumulative — it doesn't go away like alcohol."

Hence, a radiation build-up can occur in the human system, causing sometimes-dangerous side-effects. With the new phosphor film, the patient gets only a minimal dosage, thus reducing the hazards of its use.

Martin Memorial first began experimenting with the new film some two years ago. Rod Aderholdt, director of imaging services [illegible], tested its use in the special procedures department, and his results were so outstanding he was invited to demonstrate them at two major radiology meetings, one of them in Rio de Janiero.

The system has now been [illegible] in four major Florida hospitals, and has been adopted by [illegible] across the country.

"The Trimax High Information System was field-tested in over [illegible] hospitals before introduction," Cromwell said, "and created such interest that 3M reported about 90 percent of the trial users placed repeat purchase orders — and exceptionally high rate for any new medical product.

"The uniform [illegible] of these low radiation systems could reduce the overall exposure of the U.S. population to medical [illegible]," he commented. "In addition, more [illegible] patients might be [illegible] about ordering x-rays [illegible] for repeat and critical exams."

etour should vanish Wednesday

... size of the detour on Savanna ... has been greatly reduced, and by ... Wednesday, Dec. 12, the detour ... be completely lifted.

... is the word from Dickerson Inc. ... president Jim Widmann.

... week county commissioner ... Wacha said it looked like the ... around the strip of Savanna ... from Rosetree Street to ...mercial Street would be lifted on ...day, Dec. 1. Obviously, that ...dule was not met.

... Hess, Dickerson project ...rvisor, said the firm had good ...tions of lifting the detour by ..., but commented that heavy rains ... few weeks ago had caused ...oidable delays.

... Tuesday, Dec. 4, Widmann said the new target date for lifting the detour is Wednesday, Dec. 12.

Already, a good portion of the road has been reopened for traffic. For weeks, only local traffic could use the portion of Savanna Road from Commercial Street to Rosetree Street, the Timberwick development entrance. But on Tuesday, Dec. 4, Savanna was opened from Commercial to a point only about a block away from Rosetree, and a new, shorter detour route was set up for traffic to move around the uncompleted block.

Widmann said that uncompleted portion of Savanna should have a rock base down by this Friday and that by next Wednesday, it should be opened, with a coat of asphalt on it.

A coat of asphalt was installed on the newly opened portion of Savanna on Monday and last Friday, and Widmann said the opening of that section of the road to traffic is actually helping pack down the new pavement.

Once the detour is completely lifted from Savanna, there will still be times when only one lane of the road is open to traffic. Widmann said that's because final coats of asphalt will have to be applied. "But we'll do that like we normally do a resurfacing, with flagmen to let traffic flow in one direction, then the other, over the lane we keep open. It will mean probable one day of inconvenience, two at the most," he said.

Widmann said work on drainage swales and on side-walkes still remains to be done, and he predicted the entire road improvement project should be finished "no later than Jan. 1."

Mirror increases newsstand to 25c

Cost increases have forced The Mirror to increase subscription and newsstand price, according to Dick Campbell, editor.

Effective this week, the newsstand price is increased to 25 cents per copy. News racks will accept a quarter, or two dimes and a nickel.

Effective on January 1, 1980, subscription prices will also increase. The annual subscription rate will go from $8.50 to $9.50. A six month subscription will increase from $4.50 to $7.50. Annual subscription to Canada will increase from $10 to $12.50.

With the change, The Mirror has selected a distinctive orange newsrack. All present white stands will be painted to match the new racks.

With subscription rates remaining the same through December, new subscriptions and extensions of present subscriptions will be accepted at $8.50 per year until January 1. Subscriptions can be extended for as long as the subscriber desires.

Ground is broken for new wing at Elliott Museum

Elliott Museum, the Hutchinson Island historical facility showcasing memorabilia from the area's past, will get its first major addition soon.

Ground was broken Monday for a large new showroom, which when complete will house the fine collection of antique and classic cars and horsedrawn vehicles now kept in the present back wing. It will be built at a cost of $150,000, money which has been accumulated for the porject over the past few years by the Historical Society.

According to Museum director Janet Hutchinson, the new room will be designed as a garage of the early 1900s, providing a more colorful and authentic setting for the vehicles.

The existing wing will then be used for the construction of a boat representative of the era during which the House of Refuge was giving haven to stranded wayfarers of the sea. Ultimately, the boat, to be built by artist Pat Kenney, will be moved to the House of Refuge, and the large gallery will be used to house the museum's ever growing collection.

The expansion, Mrs. Hutchinson pointed out, is being built at no cost to the taxpayers. The Historical Society supports the museum through the nominal admission fees and through special events held throughout the year. Individuals have also been generous in support of the museum — one of the finest of its kind on the east coast.

Kids suspected in brush fire Sunday

Children playing with a cigarette lighter are suspected of starting a brush fire near the Timberwick development off Savanna Road in Jensen Beach Sunday morning.

Jensen Beach Fire Chief Joe Luciano says a lighter was found at the scene and that children were seen in the area around the time the fire started. However, he said the children had not been identified and no direct link has been made between them and the fire.

The department sent four units to the fire, and contained it to an area covering about one acre.

Luciano said the fire came within about 50 to 60 feet from some homes, and he added that drainage ditches made access to the fire difficult. He attributed a damp ground and light winds as causes for the fire not spreading more.

The chief asked anyone seeing children acting suspiciously in wooded areas to call his department.

On Tuesday night, firemen were called to another brush fire in the Timberwick area.

HAPPY EVENT—The groundbreaking for the new Elliott Museum wing this week was followed by a board reception at which the exciting plans for the expansion were discussed. Among them were Mrs. James Rowe and William Connally. (Photo courtesy Chris Parry)

1,150 brave wintery breezes for Lions

STIRRING THINGS UP—The Wilsons, 10-year-old "Charlie Brown" and his father Virgil Wilson were chief batter-beaters at the Sunday Pancake Breakfast given by the Lions Club at Langford Park field house. Virgil Wilson was general chairman for the event, which drew a crowd of 1,150.

GOOD SCOUTS—Area Girl Scouts turned waitress and busgirl on Sunday, for the semi-annual Lions' Pancake breakfast to raise funds for the needy blind and deaf. The girls, from troops 84 and 168, were among the many outside organizations and individuals lending a hand at the pancake and sausage fest.

The Jensen Beach Lions dished up pancakes and sausage for some 1,150 hungry guests on Sunday at the Langford Park field house, with appetites apparently undiminished by the wintery weekend weather.

The event, the first of two held by the club during the winter season, was given to raise funds for the club's sight and hearing programs for which the Lions are world-famous.

For this first one, the Lions got plenty of community support. Some 25 Girl Scouts, under leaders Marlene Feinman, Nancy Marek, and Nancy Novotny, kept busy dishing out extra syrup, butter and coffee, and visiting Lions Walt Gebert of Rochester, Mich., and Wesley Smith of Mexico, N.Y., pitched in both days, helping set up the breakfast on Saturday and serving on Sunday. Other Lions' widows and visiting wives also lent a hand to keep the food lines running smoothly.

Girl Scouts helping out were Kim Polhemus, Melissa Wegler, Stephanie Hudnall, Lillian Figueredo, Anita Hulsey, Amy Munrow, Helane Feinman, Teresa Jones, Gwen Thompson, Rhonda Rhodes, Judy Burner, Lara Marek, Honna Knauf, Kelly Hardy, Cathy Boucher, Keri Desitto, Shelly Bowdish, Shawna Biddle, Annie Gilio, Donna Booker, Julie Novotny, Nicole DesRosiers, and Leanne Shanley.

Virgil Wilson was chairman for the breakfast. His official pancake batter stirrer was his 10-year-old son "Charlie Brown."

Also, David J. McConnell, Robert McKinley, Paul Ness, Calvin Nicholls, Torry A. Olsen, Robert F. Phillips, Donald Redit, Walter Redit, Anthony Reheiser, Arthur E. Riley, Ferdinand Rufo, Albert Schaerer, Harvey Schlimmer, Marshall Speck, albert Theobald, Vincent Vanacore, Frank A. Wachs, Albert Walker, William J. Weiss, Gerry Wilkins, and Robert M. Wilson.

Three who would otherwise have been active in the project were on the sick list: John Crawford, Fred L. Liudemann Jr., and Edwin D. Miller.

Winners at WW1 Party

Eleven people went home with prizes from the card party given Thursday by the World War I Auxiliary at Haug Hall of All-Saints Episcopal Church.

Winning door prizes were June Smith, Ruth Haug and Gladys Foehr. Table prizes went to Alva Scott, Mary Stockwell, Esther Rosser, Bernice Webber, Frieda Schlemm, Margaret Isengard, M. Silvio, and Averil Tillman.

SAUSAGE SERVERS—Dishing up sausage at the Lions' Pancake breakfast Sunday, from left, are Bob Philips, Torry Olsen, Lou Loutzenhiser, and Arley Johnson. They were kept busy from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. with the seemingly endless line of customers who turned out to enjoy the food.

WELCOME COMMITTEE—People attending the Sunday pancake day breakfast given by the Jensen Beach Lions were welcomed at the door by one team of Lions, including, from left, Vince Vanacore, Bob Wilson, Wally Redit and Don Redit. Funds from the event will be used in the club's program for the blind and others with visual problems.

Social Security

BY BRUCE FERGUSON
SSA Field Representative

Thinking of applying for social security benefits? Have a question about Medicare? Need to report a change of address for your supplemental security income checks? Want to request a statement of earnings reported to you?

There's no need in waste gas going down to the social security office and then cooling your heels waiting to talk with someone. Just pick up the phone! Almost all social security business can be handled this way.

Here are a few examples of how people have quickly and conveniently taken care of social security matters by phone:

Roger Johnson will retire in 3 months but has difficulty getting off work to visit the social security office. A social security representative interviewed him by phone, then mailed the completed application for him to sign. Roger returned the signed application, along with his birth certificate and other requested documents (which were returned after photocopying.) His first benefit check should arrive about the time he actually retires.

Mary Gallagher, a 17-year-old high school senior, needs a social security card for a part-time job. She can request an application form by phone. Persons 18 or older must apply for a social security card in person.

Here's one way to stop passing the buck.

Buck-a-gallon gasoline. It's a reality. And they say it's going to get worse. For most of us, this means changing our driving habits. The less you drive, the more you save.

We can help. Our new Gas-Miser Program is a package of services that can eliminate dozens of trips to the bank. The program includes direct deposit of regular payments, such as Social Security and stock dividends; telephone transfers of money from checking to savings, and vice versa; deposits by mail to checking and savings (we pay the postage both ways) and more.

Our trained personnel have all the Gas Miser details. They'll help you stop passing the buck for non-essential driving.

The Gas-Miser Program: fewer trips to the bank; more to where you need or want to go. Become a Gas Miser at any office of Stuart National or Port Salerno National Banks.

Riverside Villagers plan tree trimming

Trucks finally arrived in the park and removed some, but not all, of the trees. It looks a lot better.

Hostesses for the month of November were Evelyn Schoeneberg, Mary Richer, Florence Brynilsen, Ethel Noggle, Thersea Rothy, and Kate Segal.

Hostesses for December are: Gert Hume, Irene Bigham, Slyvia Higgens, Marion Johnson, Fray Johnson, and Betty Frantz.

The Christmas tree will be put up and trimmed on the morning of Tuesday, Dec. 18.

New bikers seen in the Park are Jerry Nawrocki, Marion Johnson and Alma Better.

We are sorry to hear that Al Baumgartner has been in the hospital for some time.

New people in the park are Gorge and Ruth Lewis from Charlestown, Md. They are purchasing the Robinson's trailer on Third Street.

Bernie and Alma Better of Flagstaff, Arizona are also new residents on Third Street.

Sarah Cox is back with us.

Several women from the Park have started meeting at the hall every morning at 9:00 a.m. to form an exercise class. They are having a ball but you should hear them groan as they start the warm ups. It's worth it!

Anti-nuke group to meet

Safe Energy Alliance, a newly-formed organization against nuclear power, will hold a meeting at 10 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 8, at the Community Center on Commerical Street in Jensen Beach.

Jackie Betz, one of the organizers of the group, says the meeting will be an educational workshop, featuring a talk by FIT professor Gary Roderick on the basics of nuclear power, a talk by Jerry Swanson of the Daytona Beach Community College science department on the biological effects of radiation, and a discussion on planning future SEA events to be led by Mike Millington of the Conch Shell Alliance in West Palm Beach.

"Pro and con are encouraged to come. All we ask is that people adhere to a consensus running of our organization. One person speaks at a time and you don't speak until recognized. We're committed to hearing what everyone has to say, but we won't tolerate rudeness," commented Ms. Betz, who added that at the first meeting of the group, some Florida Power and Light Company officials interrupted the session.

Ms. Betz said county commissioners Maggy Hurchalla and Frank Wacha will be invited to attend the meeting. For further information, call 334-1607.

Commerce Chief to talk

Secretary Sid Levin of the Florida Department of Commerce will address the Stuart-Martin County Chamber of Commerce Thursday at the monthly coffee meeting.

The meeting is planned for 7:45 a.m. at the Quality Inn on U.S. No. 1.

The coffee is sponsored by The Communications Group. Doris W. Sheridan. Ms. Sheridan is planning special door prizes and a special guest appearance in celebration of the Christmas season.

Levin, appointed by Gov. Bob Graham in 1979, is in charge of economic development, tourism and administrative services. He will be discussing these topics with the Chamber members and guests.

Also at the meeting, local business persons are asked to pick up Try Martin County First press-on stickers for employees to wear in promoting the shop-at-home program. The Christmas packets have been delivered to more than 300 businesses locally.

Rec head is needed

We are making another effort to have a news column of all activities here each week and if the news is mailed or delivered to B-9, phone 848-2928 or B-2, phone 228-2714, by Saturday evening, it will be a success--otherwise No.

Venture Three

The Recreation meeting is held each Tuesday morning at 10 A.M., and the search is on for someone to head the recreation committee. Many have agreed to help but none have consented to head up the organization. Each and every owner in Venture III should attend and contribute their talent, do this can be an enjoyable year. Bud and Lou Prew did more than their share for two years as did their helpers from each of the three areas in the park. Now the need is to continue what they started with advice and help from them.

Speaking of recreation-Pot luck on Monday nights has started and is going very well attended. Also Bingo on Wed. nights is in full swing and is very successful. Thanksgiving dinner was enjoyed by 100 people and it was a huge success. Now plans are being made for Christmas dinner and helpers are needed.

On Sat. Dec. 1st, the BYOB Cocktail Party was very well attended and each plate of cocktail food was delicious and quickly consumed. Plans are made to have one each month.

The first beer blast of the season will be on Dec. 8th. Get your tickets and be there.

To catch up on some of the news of the last month, we have received some reports. Fran Tener enjoyed the visit of her brother and sister-in-law, Fred and Lil Coulter of Jeckyl Island, Georgia. They were with her during the Thanksgiving holidays.

It is good to see Hank Higgins riding his bicycle all over the park again. He had to spend a few days in the hospital, but is out now and feeling well enough to ride again.

The Shavers made a trip to Miami the weekend of Nov. 16, to attend the wedding of granddaughter, Sharon Branch to Michael Reid.

Virginia and Leonard Shinski returned to V. III on Saturday in time to attend the cocktail party. Said even our sudden cold spell felt warm in comparison to what they left in Detroit. Welcome Back.

The Carribbean Cruise that Bud and Lou Prew and Ernie and Kitty Hufnagel of Indian River were on over Thanksgiving, was like being in a dream world for 7 days. The M-S Song of Norway left Port of Miami on Saturday afternoon and then the fun began--from the lifeboat drill right outside port, to the masquerade ball on the evening before returning. The food, dancing, bands entertainment and the three ports visited were experiences never to be forgotten!!!! The Norwegian registered ship was spotlessly clean in every detail and it seemed like the crew of 400 were all out to please and spoil each and every passenger.

As if the trip weren't enough--the evening the Prew's returned home, saw 28 for dinner at their home--son Darryl's wedding rehearsal group and family. On Sunday, the next day, Darryl and Carol were married at First United Methodist Church in Stuart, followed by the reception, well into the night, at Sons of Italy Hall. WHEW!!!! Tired, but fun.

Bud is now busy gathering info on other cruises--he says Spring or early Fall. By then he will have lost the 7 pounds gained on this trip. Lou says she took on 2 pounds, but has already dropped them, thanks to Yvonne Wiencke's exercise class each morning.

Lou and Wirt Turner are here for a couple of weeks, then they go back to Ky. for Christmas. Lucky Wirt, caught a nice trout last week.

Gail and Frank Lawson and Rock had a fabulous time this summer in their Airstream. Hardly recognized Frank with his beard, but now it is gone.

Heard Morris Pendleton has been quite ill, but he and Doris plan to be here soon. Looks like her yard work is waiting for her.

Jack and Shirley Brittain and company from Ohio, spent a week in the Keys in Jack's motor home.

Harriet Price's aunt and uncle Mr. & Mrs. Carl Carter came by to visit. Mr. Carter is a real old-timer. He was born in Coconut Grove, Fla., 80 years ago.

The Ernie Ravinets and the Lee Prices had a nice evening out at the Barn Theatre last week, to see Lavender and Old Lace.

The Roger Millers are on the way down, will be here soon. Hope they don't bring any more cold weather to us.

Trout and bluefish are active in fishing

BY DONSJE WILKIE

Bluefish and trout were the hot items last week as area fishermen tried to beat the arrival of colder weather.

There were many reports of blues being caught in the surf and at the Crossroads—where the St. Lucie and Indian Rivers meet just before the St. Lucie Inlet.

In addition, waders found the trout to be biting especially hard in the Indian River, where the best trout fishing can usually be found.

Andy Popovich grabbed 18 trout in the river, using both touts and mirrolures, while Irv Fisher claimed 20, also in the river but with the new gold Tony-spoons.

Paul Ruthreser bagged a five-and-three-quarter pound trout, fishing in the St. Lucie River. He used a mirrolure.

Bill and Ray Ditzel caught seven trout, as did Glenn Hauser. Both were in the Indian River, but the Ditzels used live shrimp, whereas Hauser used a Tony-spoon.

Painting, pottery on display at FP Gallery

Painting and pottery will be on exhibit at the Fort Pierce Art Gallery from December 1 through December 20.

The two painters, Bunny Coppe and Sophus Petersen, are well knows to Gallery frequenters.

Coppe, originally from Chicago, came to Florida about ten years ago. Though painting had always been important to her, it was only after marriage and three children that she was able to make painting her career. She uses various media but prefers watercolor, with which she has made some interesting experiments.

Her paintings hang in many private collections in the U.S. and Canada.

Petersen was born in Denmark but came to the U.S. 30 years ago. He always painted as a hobby, but business kept him from serious work until he retired five years ago. He paints only in oil and his landscapes, seascapes, old barns and flower studies have won numerous prizes.

Bill Bennett, still an undergrad at Florida Atlantic University, was born in Fort Pierce. He started working in clay in his high school art classes and has now realized his ambition to become an accomplished potter, working in clay, porcelain and stoneware. His vases, plates and even dinner sets have attracted many buyers.

Gallery hours are 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. daily except Friday. Admission is free, and the public is cordially invited.

DRIVE GETS TRIMMED—The recent visit of St. Lucie County Commission chairman George Price to the Indian River Drive Freeholders' Association began to pay off this week as this big side-winding tree-cutter began its trek northward from the Martin County line. Among the homeowners' requests made to the commissioner was for trimming back the trees along the Drive for better visibility, and Pride obviously lived up to his word to do something about it. The machine, rented by the county, also spends much of its time in the backlands, trimming groves.

Golden South could resume flights

If all goes well, Golden South Airlines will resume flights on Monday, Dec. 17.

The Fort Pierce based commuter airline firm has had its planes grounded for about two weeks, due to financial problems. However, a proposed reorganization of the airline's board of directors and financial support from the airline's proposed new chairman of the board, Dan Darling, is expected to get the Golden South planes in the air again.

Darling is president of Fort Pierce Flying Service. Earlier in the year relations between the two firms were so bad that Golden South filed a suit against Darling. The dispute was over fuel and repair prices Fort Pierce Flying Service was charging, and it resulted in Golden South going elsewhere for those services.

On Monday, Golden South president Steve Alex met with St. Lucie County Commissioners to outline a plan for reorganizing the Golden South board and to seek the commissioner's endorsement of the plan. The commissioners voiced support of the plan, and if all goes well, Darling indicated the Golden South planes could resume flights on Dec. 17.

Before that happens though, Darling's firm will conduct inspections of the aircraft, and of financial records of the airline. If those inspections are satisfactory to him, the reorganization will take effect.

"After being invited by the board of Golden South to provide financial baking, Dan Darling of Fort Pierce Flying Service has offered to supply the needed capital and to put at the disposal of the airline a professionally run fixed base operation," Alex said.

If the reorganization of the board takes effect, Darling will become chairman of the board and have controlling interest in the airline. Kerri Firth, a spokeswoman for Golden South's public relations firm, The Communications Group, said that she did not know yet if Alex would remain president of the airline.

When asked if the suit against Darling would be dropped, she replied, "I presume it would be."

AMBULANCE, HOSPITAL & OBITUARY
A donation was made to the Ambulance Fund by Buster St. Onge and Harriett Hobbard in memory of Warren Strayer.

Lura Merrill, 27 NE 5th Ave had a bad spell right after she arrived the other day and called the ambulance. They were able to handle the situation without any hospitalization (they gladly offer this service).

Gert Gartner, 8 NE 10th St. is back home and Martin Anderson, 33 SE 5th Ave. was due home Sunday.

Helen Tabb, 2 Banyan Dr. and Dave Moore, 5 Mango St. are still in the hospital for tests and treatment.

Tom Clancy, 20 Arborvitas Dr. died last week in the Martin Memorial Hospital.

Pinochle, Dec. 1: Oscar Dishman; Betty MacNab; J. Petrucka; Pete Hillman; bobbie Tucker; Joe Ries.

RAMBLING AROUND
Gladys Baier, 4 Bermuda, also had a Thanksgiving Dinner. She entertained the following eight guests: Mr. and Mrs. Otis Baker of Zepherhills; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Vanhorne of Melbourne; Mr. and Mrs. Mausert of North Adams, Mass., and Mrs. Elinor Martin, of Oak St. There was card playing as well as a lot of good old fashioned eating, so all had a great time.$

Tom and Jennie Clancy, 20 Arborvitae, spent their summers at Fort Austin, Mich. (right in the 'thumb') on a farm which they sublet. There was a bumper crop of corn, wheat and soy beans this year. Both retired from 32 years in the hardware business. Jennie has a daughter and 2 grand children and one grand daughter, Kelley, works for the Stuart National Bank. Although she lives in Stuart, she spends lots of time with grandma.

Gen Garns, 14 Ocean Breeze Dr. spends 4 months in Elmore, Ohio (near Toledo) where she has a home in the rural area. There are 3 daughters within 25 miles; 6 grandchildren and 7 'greats', so she often has plenty of visitors.

Last September she took a trip to Long Beach, Calif. to visit her only sister. Gen did enjoy the trip, but couldn't help remark, "Terribly hot with awful smog in L.A. and the many forest fires covered the place with white ashes." Now, that Gen is back, she has resumed her pink lady duties at the hospital.

Fred and Louise Kalb, 35 SW 5th Ave. also spend their summers in Callicoon, N.Y., had a visitor the other day, Fred's twin sister, Marie Deiette, of St. Pete, Fla. This is a yearly affair to celebrate their birthday, on Nov. 4. They were 76 this year and Fred proudly pointed out that his sister was 15 minutes older. They are originally from Coney Island, N.Y., with Marie's family of 4 children and 7 grandchildren living at Virginia Beach, where she visits each summer.

Dorothy Henderson, of 6 Indian River Dr. has been coming here since 1958, but spends her summers in Hale, Mich. Last July Dorothy had to go to the hospital for treatment and is recovering very well. Her niece and husband, Donald and Louise June of Syracuse, N.Y. drove her down this year. Dorothy's husband Elmer, died in 1966. However, she does have many nieces and nephews in New York state, so isn't too lonely.

Devereux and Margret Cunningham, of 5 Skipper Dr. spend 6 months of the year down Maine in Belfast. However, last year they sold the Maine farm and bought a mobile home in N.H. Myrt Huntington (93 yrs. old) is Devereux's great aunt, so that is how he happened to come to OBP.

They have a daughter and son down Maine and 7 grandchildren, one of the granddaughters was chosen 'broiler queen' of the famous Belfast chicken festival. Another daughter and grandchildren live in Washington and they visit back and forth every two years. This year a son and wife from Portland Oregon are here with his wife's parents. It is their first Florida trip and they are delighted with the area, especially Cypress Gardens; and they do like shuffling.

Dick and Doris Reed of 9 Lil Bit Ln. report on the 'Lil'Bit Regulars.' Wilson Norrises of Ohio and Nestor Ebrights of Pennsylvania are waiting until after the holidays this year, saving themselves "that trip back home for Christmas." Ted and Elsie Landgraf of New Jersey are due any day, as they delayed a bit to attend a grandson's wedding.

THANK YOU!
I wish to thank my many friends of Ocean Breeze Park and Jensen Beach for all those thoughtful sympathy cards and expressions of sympathy that I received when I returned from attending my sister's funeral. In times of sorrow just knowing you have many friends is a great help, for this I thank you all very much.

What is happening to us

The local seniors were flabergasted and frustrated regards to "hostages" last week to a point of having nothing more today. Generally, it was how did we get in this mess and we better go back to "Millions for defense but not one cent for tribute" of the Barbary Coast of Tripoli times.

President Carter asked us to write letters to Iran Ambassador, ring bells at noon and display the flag to show our unity in this situation. So, being a "Johny-on-the-spot" a letter was written. Now, the idea has not been mentioned even once again. What happened, was it a "no good" idea?

However, the seniors continued to be as articulate, as usual, and one senior mentioned an editorial in a current weekly publication, that said, "For the past three years, in every international test, we talk tough, then shrink away from action, leaving image of weakness" Although, no one has said it, it seems that since World War Two, we have done only the wrong and ineffective things (except we did put a man on the moon first), whereas before that time, we were unbeatable. Can this be just a coincidence?

Treasure Coast Senior Services has been having some very interesting and timely programs recently. Last week it was on "Sexual Assault" and many misconceptions were cleared up, such as:

It is not just the young and attractive, who are victims; it is anyone age from 1 to 90 (according to records), and it is not the "Sex-pots" getting what they were looking for. The rapist is an opportunist, taking advantage of any lone victim. Studies show that he is not necessarily interested in the sexual aspects of the crime, but more in overpowering and degrading the victim.

The 20 page booklet, distributed by the Florida Attorney General's Office, is packed full of useful information, but in general, don't allow the potential repist to have an opportunity to get you alone. If caught in a lonely spot try talking, and if you go to physical defense, be sure your actions will completely incapacitate. There was much more and all seniors should take this 'in' when presented to your club, or group.

Although it's not a 'killer' more conversation is spent on the aches and pains of Arthritis than all other health problems put together, and for a darn good reason, according to an article in Now "Senior Consumer"

Arthritis is the greatest crippler of all times, affecting 60 million Americans and costing them 5 billion dollars a year. One in ten Americans suffer from severe arthritis and one in fifty is permanently crippled each year with business and government sustaining losses in the billions. However, worst of all, about 2 billion is wasted each year on quacks and worthless nostrums and a few were mentioned.

There are copper bracelets, honey and vinegar, cod liver oil and orange juice, all fish diets, etc. How about uranium mine cure, moon dust, sea water baths, purolators, energizers and deenergizers, etc. You have heard of most of them, and the real danger of them is that the patient wastes time on them when he might be getting some relief from a qualified physician. So, don't give up hope, there is some help available now, and every day science comes up with something better.

"Hypotherma" is a new one for most seniors, but with energy programs under way, it would be a good thing to learn about. Hypotherma is death from exposure to the cold. It was thought that it was something for the artic explorers to worry about, but no. There is a more insidious and less known hazard: "Accidental hypotherma", which mostly effects the elderly.

It can apply right down here in Florida, as indoor temperatures of 50 to 60 degrees can cause improperly clothed elderly to slowly loose body heat, slip into a coma and die. Recent studies indicate that many elderly deaths, listed as heart or stroke, are in fact caused by hypotherma. So, in our attempt to go without heat for a few days, make sure your body is dipt warm enough. Don't be brave and suffer-it-out, keep warm.

Medicare, deductible goes up to $180 in January 1980, hurts a lot. In our efforts to get help from some form of 'medigap' insurance, watch out as there are 'rip-offs', and be sure you don't get costly and worthless insurances. It has become such a problem that Congressional actions is anticipated. Claude Pepper (D. Fla.) has proposed (H.R. 2802) a bill to regulate this type of insurance. Such things as duplicate coverage, lengthy pre-existing conditions; money back in 30 days and 75 percent of premiums must go for benefits are to be spelled-out. If in doubt get some one to read it over with you. AARP Ins. Chm. Al Cammisa 283-3455 will help.

CHAPTER EVENTS

Don't forget the Diabetes Seminar; movies, expert's remarks, pamphlets, and question and answers period Thur. Dec. 6, 9:30 a.m. Langford Field House. All seniors are invited. Then, stay around and help get Golden Eagle News Bulletin ready for mailing at 10:30, to be followed by a brown-bag lunch at noon and some chapter announcements at 12:30.

This is bulletin exchange time and it is interesting to note what other groups are doing for activities and how they are solving their organizational problems. So, here is what four groups were doing.

North Palm Beach (new exchange) say they are going to have refreshments in December instead of cards. They handle their installation of officers at a dinner meeting. Visit of Live to be given out at next meeting (that is a plastic vial, contain all your pertinent health information, that is kept in refrigerator at all times, so emergency crews can find it). They ask members to save the bulletin and keep it near phone book for the handy phone numbers listed.

The chapter (and MCCA) discount program has been in the doledrums for quite awhile, but Boyd Smith through the Bulletin is trying to get it reestablished. So, far the following have notified the chapter that they will give seniors a discount, when AARP membership card is shown.

Burger King; Pizza Hut and Sambos. Thirsty Whale, Mrs Kerr's Boarding House. Stuart Chrysler-Plymouth; Al Johnson Chrysler-Plymouth; Stuart Lincoln-Mercury; Holiday Inn; Stuart Inn; Sheraton (?) R.H. Pinsky Optician and Schmidt's Optical. Monterey Health Foods; Paint Shed; Eckard Drugs; Ponton's Crafts, The Tiger Touch. Those washing a listing, call 334-2244.

There is so much for seniors and AARPers to do during this holiday season, the 55 Alive and Defensive Driving classes will be omitted during December. Next classes first week of January. For 55 Alive, info. 334-0416 and for D.D. info. 287-6400, Ex 131.

The Chapter Sunshine lady, Betty Edwardsen has been faithfully sending out, "get well", sympathy and anniversary cards as required for years, but can't do a real good job unless she is informed. Let her know of cases, tel 287-0473.

Despite head, Decals ARE Available

The Mirror's typeface who specializes in headlines last week tried their best to scuttle the Coast Guard Auxiliary's current project.

Some people read no further than the headlines in parts of their local newspaper. But those who read on were confused by the discrepancy.

The headline read, "Boat decals for '80 not available." The story disputed the head: it stated that 1980 boat decals are NOW available to boatowners bringing in their craft for examinations and coming up to the required specifications. And Commander Ruth Button urges all owners of boats, including sailers having auxiliary motors, for the free examination.

Qualified examiners manned three test points over the weekend, including the Boathouse in Jensen Beach. Those who did not take advantage of the service may contact Mrs. Button at 283-3654, or W. Scheffler at 283-1738.

"Mimi's League" proves that summer golf can succeed in Florida

Mimi Lamont poses with Joe Garagiola, a few years ago.

Special to The Mirror

The year is 1939, May through November.

It is hot, sticky and very uncomfortable. Air conditioning is like pie in the sky. The few golf resorts have closed for the summer. In the bigger metropolitan areas, public courses welcome a handful of long time residents who like golf enough to push hand carts.

There are no power carts. Nobody talks golf, nobody writes about it, and nobody could ever promote a tournament.

The year is 1949.

Some resorts have prospered by the events of the war years. Advertising budgets include a modest percentage to attract winter golfers — but still, some resorts closed for the summer.

Power carts are only for the infirm. Caddies will not show in the summer heat, with a prospect of no more than one dollar for 18 holes. More efficient air conditioning is beginning to lure tourists, but prominent restaurants closed for the summer.

The year is 1969.

Spectacular changes have created new horizons for summer business, air conditioning and improved highways leading the way. But despite the availability of power carts, there is a deadly lack of interest to promote summer golf. Resorts and pro shops were cool to the investment of advertising money, and golf was confined to the year-long residents who played when they were in the mood.

The year is 1972.

Florida was then on a threshold that later developed into a twelve month, no season golf market, but few entrepreneurs were aware of it. One such was Art Young, owner of the Holiday Country Club chain. He was the first to budget an advertising program for summer golf. By 1974, golf resorts (Naples Beach, Mission Inn & C.C., Ponce de Leon, Breakers Hotel and Doral, to name a few) were offering short term summer golf packages.

The year is no 1979.

Summer golf has, in a period of only a few years, become a potent force in the structure for tourist business. It is now a recognized asset to golf resorts. Groups of golfers are easily sold on traveling this state in search of new courses at special summer rates. Starting times, this year, were de rigueur at all clubs.

But summer heat didn't change and the daily games didn't provide full enjoyment. When temperatures got over 90 degrees, the game has about as much clout as roasting marshmellows over an open fire.

Tournament directors for many years, Mimi and Jim Lamont knew that golfers would have maximum enjoyment under a program of team play.

Mimi had already developed a reputation for tournament details (entries, handicaps, gripes, etc.). It was then up to Jim to capitalize on his relations with golf pros, and work out arrangements at selected clubs that would be profitable as compared to the usual lack of summer volume.

Consequently, a schedule was prepared that included at least one tournament per month — Between May and November. The clubs selected this year were Sandpiper Bay Resort, Frenchman's Creek, Eastpointe CC, Mariner Sands CC, Breakers Hotel and Dodger Pines CC. The selected format for most tournaments was two best net, foursomes allowed to make up their own teams. Handicaps were subject to close examination.

Now that the 1979 season has been completed, with the November 23 tournament at Sandpiper Bay, we can say, without fear of contradiction, that all who have played in "Mimi's League" will testify that team competition in the summertime occupies the mind to such an extent that the hottest temperatures are disregarded.

The results for the November 23 tournament at Sandpiper Bay are as follows. There were 124 contestants from Sandpiper Bay, Yact and CC of STuart, Mid-Rivers Yacht and CC, Mariner Sands CC, Crane Creek CC, Indian River Plantation, Spanish Lakes, Monterey, Turtle Creek and Martin County Golf Club.

JB driver shut out in final race

Bond finishes out of the money

What Jensen Beach race driver Rusty Bond had gloomily predicted would happen is now official.

Bond was afraid he would not be awarded a much needed point in the International Motor Sports Association's driver's standings for his 10th place finish at a recent race at Daytona International Speedway. Unfortunately, he was right.

Normally, points are awarded ot the top 10 finishers of each IMSA race. A first in class finish is good for 20 points and a 10th place finish is good for one point. IMSA sanctioned 15 races this year, and drivers in the various IMSA classes were ranked according to the points they scored.

The final race of the season was Sunday, Nov. 25, and Bond entered the race in 11th place in the driver's standings for IMSA's small engine (GTU) class. He was only one point out of 10th place. Since cash prizes are awarded to the top 10 drivers in each class at the conclusion of the IMSA season, Bond was hoping to collect a point and move into 10th place.

No money at all goes to 11th place, and that's just where Bond wound up when the final driver's standings were released this week.

Why didn't Bond get a one point credit for his 10th place finish at Daytona.

"Because they have a rule that you have to complete at least 90 per cent of the distance the winning car in your class goes before they'll award points. We were about two laps short of the required distance," Bond said.

The race was supposed to be a 225-mile event, and if it had gone the distance, Bond and co-driver Ren Tilton would likely have completed enough laps to get points and probably would have moved up from 10th place to a higher position. But the race ended after 47 of the scheduled 59 laps.

The Bond-Tilton car started the race in eighth place in their class and were in fifth place about midway through the event when Tilton took over driving duties. Electrical problems plagued Tilton on his first few laps, and by the time they were solved they were in 10th place. However, they were gaining on several cars ahead of them when a sudden rain storm moved over the backstretch of the track, causing a spectacular 14-car pile-up.

Tilton initially managed to avoid heavy damage, but his car stalled on the apron of the track and would not start. Tilton got out of the car and was helping a driver out of another car when an out-of-control Porsche slammed into the side of the Bond-Tilton Porsche, causing major damage.

"You know if they pay through the top 10 positions, I'll finish the season 11th," Bond said.

Actually, this was the first time in five years of racing that Bond did not finish the IMSA season ranked in the top 10. He has a fifth, fourth, and third place ranking in the final standings to his credit.

Tilton, who drove in a race Bond did not drive in, finished the season ranked in sixth place in the IMSA standings.

Shuffleboard is this week

About 60 to 75 players from the Ocean Breeze Shuffleboard Club are expected to compete in the park's Men's and Women's singles tournaments, scheduled for tomorrow (Thursday) and Friday.

The shufflers will be competing for a total of 16 trophies — four in the championship bracket and four in the consolation bracket of each division, Men's and Women's — in the two-day event.

"We've got about 150 players in the park," said club member Bill Jones when contacted about the upcoming event last week, "but a lot of them just like to play for fun. But we're expecting a good turnout."

The event, which begins at 9 a.m. tomorrow (Thursday) morning, is for members of the Ocean Breeze club only. Many of the same players will be traveling to Vero Beach next weekend (December 13-16) for the Central East Coast District championships.

"Shuffleboard has been a quite popular thing in the park since the 1940's," add Jones.

The event, which begins at 9 a.m. tomorrow (Thursday) morning, is for members of the Ocean Breeze club only. Many of the same players will be traveling to Vero Beach next weekend (December 13-16) for the Central East Coast District championships.

Up and down Pioneers now up

It was hard to believe that this, the Indian River Community College basketball Pioneer team, was the same squad that had dropped its first three games of this season.

It was also hard to believe that this Indian River team was not blowing lowly Webber College off the hoop map, as the two squads played to a virtual first half standoff Monday night.

But the Pioneers forced numerous turnovers in the second half to preserve its honor somewhat, blasting Webber, 101-82 before a sparse crowd at the IRCC gymnasium.

The lopsided victory was the fifth in a row for the Pioneers, who are now 5-3, with weekend games against Florida Junior College (IRCC gym, Friday night) and Brevard CC (away, Saturday) yet to come.

"We're shooting the ball much better now than we were early in the season," said Leatherwood. "Against Brevard (in the first game) the guys shot so poorly that they lost their confidence. It just took them awhile to get it back. All they needed were a couple of wins.

"And don't forget, we lost Booker

Artis Booker, the Pioneers "big man" at 6'7" has been brought to a standstill by nagging leg and knee injuries, the latest of which, a twisted ankle suffered in Saturday night's 67-64 victory over Daytona Community, benched him for at least a game, Monday's shellacking of Webber.

Then, to only complicate matters, forward Roscoe "Rocky" Bowerson, a 1979 graduate of Fort Pierce-Westwood and just recently making giant strides forward as a Pioneer, also went down, twisting HIS ankle in Monday night's game. Bowerson has a history of ankle problems (he broke both ankles during the 1978-79 prep season), and Leatherwood fears this injury may be far more severe than Booker's.

Booker, said Leatherwood, "should be back in the lineup Friday night."

The Florida Junior College squad that invades the IRCC gym Friday night is the same one that was beaten 73-68, in last Friday's preliminary to Jacksonville University's opener in Jacksonville, by the Pioneers. Harry Kemp (17 points) and Jack Setzler (16) paced FJC, and promise to be even more fired up for the rematch.

"The main reason we beat them the first time was our man-to-man press," commented Leatherwood. "We came out in it at the start of the second half, and their guards just couldn't handle it."

But despite the five-game streak, Leatherwood refuses to be overcome by boastfulness.

"If we beat Brevard Saturday night, then I'll start talking," he said. "We'll stay pretty quiet until then. I was actually disappointed at halftime tonight. We had them by 11 points and let them off the hook just before the half."

IRCC led, 48-44, at the intermission.

"I thought our depth finally paid off. Their guys were gagging for air toward the end of the game. I played everyone in each half, mainly so they would get some experience. In the long run, it will help, but it did make us look a little sloppy tonight."

IRCC bedders first to enter race

The first official entry for the 1st Annual Daytona Intercollegiate Bed Race has been received for the unique event that will be held prior to the start of the 24 Hour Pepsi Challenge on February 2, 1980.

Indian River Community College in Ft. Pierce sent in the first official entry for the event, and several others are expected shortly. The deadline for entries being postmarked is December 9th, 1979.

The Indian River team, captained by Todd Stuart, will be shooting for the first prize of $500 to the winning team, and an additional $500 to the general scholarship fund of the school represented by the winning team.

Second place will be worth $300 to the runner-up team, plus there will be a prize of $200 to the team with the best decorated bed.

The Bed Race will be open to all colleges and universities within the state of Florida, with entries limited to one per school. The five-person teams, four pushing and one reclining, will race against the clock over a flat half-mile course directly in front of the main grandstand.

The race will begin at 3 p.m. on Saturday, February 2nd, followed by the 24 Hour Pepsi Challenge at 4:20 p.m.

Central captures Cobra Invitational, Carroll is third

BY DONNIE WILKIE

Fort Pierce Central basketball coach Bill Wright has been trying to promote his team all summer long—talking to people in the St. Lucie County area, attempting to sell season tickets, and generally trying to create an interest heretofore absent from the Central program.

1) He couldn't get his games on the radio, because no sponsors could be found who were willing to absorb the cost of the broadcasts.

2) Season tickets were a bust. Despite repeated attempts to promote their existence during the team's first three games, no more than a handful of takers were found.

And 3) The best way to solve all of his problems and not have to worry about all these things is to WIN BASKETBALL GAMES.

While steps one and two may take a while longer to complete, step three is off to a roaring start.

So are Wright's Cobras, who swept three straight games last week to capture their own invitational, aptly named the Cobra Invitational, held at the Central gym before a moderate to good crowd.

"I have to feel good about that tournament," said Wright Monday, after his Cobras demolished three area squads (albeit, not your AAAA powerhouse-type teams) in more than convincing fashion. "We were never seriously challenged."

Wilbert Washington, voted by the media to be the tourney's Most Valuable PLayer, scored 69 points in the three games, as Central polished off Jupiter 83-55, John Carroll 69-50 and Vero Beach 78-51. Many thought Vero would pose more of a problem for Wright's squad, but not Wright.

"They have had some problems with injuries, but I think we would have beaten them even with those players in there," he said. "Hey, all I care about is that we started the season 3-0

And they're likely to be 6-0 before week's end, as two of the invitational teams, Melbourne and Carroll, were scheduled to invade the gym on Tuesday and Wednesday before ultra-weak Satellite rolls into the "Cobra Cave" on Friday night. In all, Central plays its first seven games at home.

"We had some problems in the first game that were straightened out before the last two games," commented Wright. "We played the way a quality team is supposed to in those last two."

While Washington controlled the scoring and often the, rebounding, pulling down 25 rebounds against Carroll, point guard Luther Sandifter teamed with Wayne (Super D) Titus, nicknamed such for obvious (defensive) reasons, to apply tremendous defensive pressure on the opposition's backcourt personnel, at one point forcing 45 turnovers against Jupiter.

"They're a class team and I expect they'll be one of our fiercest competitors in the district," said Wright of Vero Beach. All-tourney selections Kirk Dunn and Ron Wilkerson led the way for the Indian's, who scalped Westwood 71-48 in the first round, then mugged Melbourne in the semis, 72-29.

Meanwhile, across the city, John Carroll coach Chuck Hill had just as much reason for optimism. His Rams were 2-1, had topped third in the tourney, and had gotten exactly what they wanted out of the tournament.

"We wanted to get some exposure," said Hill. "We wanted to get the experience against some tough competition. I think we played Central as tough as anyone. They (Central) are a powerful offensive team and they're aggressive on the boards."

"That was the biggest difference," claimed Wright. "I feel we may not have the most skilled team, but we have the best athletes. We try to take advantage of it by playing tough on the boards and play good defense. Actually, we didn't play that well offensively in the three games."

Hill says his team's main goal is to "be a good team at the end of the year, and our tough schedule should help us toward that goal."

Carroll's "tough schedule" gets no rest this week. After Central (at Central, tonight-Wednesday (tomorrow) at home against Clewiston and away at Westwood. With three starters from Port St. Lucie and another player from Jensen Beach, The Mirror will continue its complete coverage of the Rams during the season.

Large crowds make Mariner Sands Fall Doubles a marvelous success

BY DONNIE WILKIE

A large gathering throughout the entire tournament made the 1979 Fall Doubles Classic at Mariner Sands last weekend a "tremendous success," according to Mario Obando, the tennis pro.

"It was a tremendous success, mainly because of the large groups of spectators," he said. "We had people here all the time, enjoying the very good tennis we had."

The tournament, for amateurs only, saw six championships decided. There were also awards for winners in consolation rounds, involving first-round losers.

"We started at 8 a.m. each morning (Saturday and Sunday) and finished at 8 p.m.," said Obando, who had earlier told The Mirror that he did not want to play under the lights if at all possible.

"The weather was pretty cold on Saturday, but it got better as the tournament went along," Obando added.

"I do appreciate the good behavior exhibited by the players (almost 150, in all) during the entire event. I like to see players show good sportsmanship during tournament play. It can really make things run smoothly."

Mariner Sands' next championship event will be held on February 16-17, when the club hosts the First Annual Gold Coast Professional Championships. The Mariner Sands Junior Tennis Classic, originally scheduled for January 26-27, has been postponed until May to avoid a conflict with Sandalwood's Sandy Shoes Classic, part of the Sandy Shoes Festival in Fort Pierce.

Winners in the 1979 Fall Doubles Classic were:

Men's Doubles "A"—Dana DeWindt and Pat Scheurman defeated Ben Richardson and Frank Scutari, 6-2, 6-2; Men's Doubles "B"—Bell Dunne and Lee Carroll defeated Gene Frenette and Mike DeCuba, 6-3, 1-6, 6-4; Mixed Doubles "A"—Dana DeWindt and Kathy DeWindt defeated Gary Thompson and June LaVinge, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2; George Stanislaw and Susan Gould defeated Bill Edwards and Judy Segal, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3; Women's Doubles "A"—Hilde Pate and Sookie Shields defeated Cathy Breeden and Marge Miles, 7-5, 2-6, 7-5; Women's Doubles "B"—Nancy Gillies and Debbie Johnson defeated Nancy Edwards and Judy Segal, 6-4, 7-5.

Consolation bracket winners were:

Men's Doubles "A"—Roy and Steve Shepherd defeated Tim Howard and Ted Houk, 6-4 (5-4), 6-2; Men's Doubles "B"—Bill Bradt and Bill Hawkins defeatedBill Edwards and Jim Dillard, 8-1; Mixed Doubles "A"—Frank and Jennifer Scutari defeated Doug Johnson and Gail Santagata, 8-6; Mixed Doubles "B"—Jim and Carol Hogan defeated Jack Zentz and Gwen Henry, 7-6 (5-4), 1-6, 6-3; Women's Doubles "A"—Sharon Parri and Bonnie Richmond defeated Barabara Romano and Marie Roberts, 6-2, 6-2; and Gloria Humberstone and Noelle defeated Ike Williams and Mary Delevante, 6-1, 6-3.

MCHS soccer team opens with victory, Jayvees also win

David Smith scored with 12 minutes remaining Saturday, giving Martin County a 2-1 victory in their soccer opener at Tiger Stadium, over St. Andrew's of Boca Raton.

Smith, who beat St. Andrew's goalie David Der on the play, was assisted by Danny Killane, who had earlier tied the game 1-1 with a goal of his own.

Despite the moderately cold weather, the crowd was bigger than any of the Martin County officials had thought it might be. The fans, who came to see what is being touted as a contender for the state AAAA soccer championship, were somewhat shocked when St. Andrew's standout Chinsung Cha scored the game's first goal, early in the first half.

But MCHS fought back, playing good enough defensively to limit the Scots to only five shots on goal all evening, and they finally tied the game on Killane's tally with 10 minutes remaining in the half.

First-year coach Pete Navaretta takes his Tigers to Cocoa Beach for a Wednesday (today) match, then returns to the friendly confines of Tiger Stadium for a pair of contests with soccer newcomers Twin Lakes and Lake Worth-Leonard. The sport was introduced into Palm Beach County schools early this fall, but some squads could be respectable.

The MCHS-Twin Lakes match kicks off at 8pm Friday night, and the Leonard tualle is set for Saturday at 2pm.

Sandpiper Bay men to play Thursday

One of the season's more attractive events scheduled by the Sandpiper Bay Men's Golf Association will be on tap Thursday, Dec. 6th.

Labeled as a Partners-Both Balls feature, using the Stableford scoring system, the event will take place on the 18-hole Saints Course with a near-record number of contestants participating.

Net and gross scores were the feature in last Thursday's play which came under the banner of individual scoring in both departments. Sharing the low gross awards were Dolf Ciferi and George Montooth with like scores of 78, Ciferi capturing the First Flight honors while Montooth led the second flight. Other gross winners included Graydon Smith, 3rd Flight with 85 and Bob Heller, fourth flight with 96.

A pair of retired colonels shared the low net first flight winners with like scores of 69 followed by Hal Loveridge, 70.

Jim Doons with a net of 66 led the entire field in also taking the net laurels among the second flighter. Will Ferrara with 66 and Jack Dalton with 68 complemented that group.

Charley McNabb with 81 and Art McDaniel, 82 ranked in line behind the second flight gross scorers while Ed Rombach and durable Archie Gates finished among the leaders in the third flight gross scorers.

Harry Hendron led the third flight net scorers with a 66 followed by Tom Hottle 68 and John Jeffrey, 69.

In fourth flight action Ken Kengedy and Fred Carter ranked behind the leader Heller in gross play while Bill yde led that flight in the net scoring department with 68 trailed by John Ford and Ed Machel.

PSL Women's golf results

Tiger cagers win opener over Glades

Led by a quick, turnover-forcing defense, and a scoring attack that was well-balanced, the Martin County High School Tigers' basketball team opened its defense of the AAAA state championship with a 64-50 victory over Glades Central last Thursday night.

The victory at the Tiger Den, the Tigers 17th in a row at home, was not easily earned. The Raiders, suffering from the loss of several players due to football playoff games, nevertheless played inspired ball, though never actually taking the lead in the opener.

The score was tied 42-42 heading into the final period, but Martin County outscored Glades 22-8 for the win.

Gregg Sprauer led the Tiger scores with 15 points, while Ricky McHardy and Lon Dowling each contributed 11. David Gross followed with nine, and Milton (Bo) Dames had seven.

Martin County plays at Okeechobee Friday night before returning to the Den to face Key West Saturday evening. Game time is 8pm, with a junior varsity game to preceed the action at 6:30 pm.

Mirror Magic Menu

by Lee Hicks of Lucieland

Want to get in the mood for Christmas? Get out some Christmas decorations, especially your candles, and dig out those great favorite holiday records. Now either phone or personally invite some interesting people to join you for a festive evening.

It's call a HOLIDAY COOKIE TASTING EXCHANGE and yum it is an event you can look forward to every year! You'll need to supply the coffee, tea, egg nog or holiday punch and you'll want to get out your pretty china or decorative dishes along with some colorful Christmas napkins. Each couple you invite should bring three dozen of their favorite fancy Christmas cookies. I usually bake extra cookies so everyone will have plenty of varieties to take home after the tasting party!

Send the goodies home in colorful Christmas shopping bags.

This is truly a great evening of friendship and great conversation. Remember now, keep the candles lit, the lights low and the music flowing. Happy Holiday Season my friends!

P.S. It is nice if the recipe accompanies the cookies, as the hostess usually gets requests after the party.

LEE'S ORANGE CANDY COOKIES

Perfect for the Holiday Cookie Tasting Exchange Party

Cream together

¾ cup shortening
¼ cup margarine or butter
1 cup brown sugar
2 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla

Add these sifted together

2 one-third cup flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. baking soda
¼ tsp. salt

Then add

½ cup walnuts
½ cup shredded coconut
1 cup orange candy slices

(note: Cut these in small pieces, sprinkling on a little flour so they won't stick together. I usually place one small orange candy slice on top of each cookie before baking.)

Bake 325 degrees. These cookies always please the crowd.

Christmas mailing early is urged by PO

"By mailing early, the public can be better assured their cards and parcels will reach their destinations in plenty of time for Christmas," said Postmaster L.T. Bly.

"You should take the necessary time to properly prepare your cards and gifts for mailing. Use ZIP codes. Legibly write your own ZIP-coded address and the full ZIP-coded address of the recipient," Postmaster Bly suggested.

"This helps in processing your mail more rapidly and assists in making delivery in case portions of the address become illegible," he said. The Post Office also recommends proper wrapping of gifts to be mailed, including use of strong packaging materials.

"Remember," Postmaster Bly said, "the key to the successful mailing of cards and parcels is to allow adequate time. Shop early, allow enough time to properly prepare cards and parcels for mailing, and mail early. By cooperating with the Post Office in this manner, you will help us help you have a better Christmas."

C of C to install at Friday dinner

Friday is the big night for the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce. The community's advisory body will combine Christmas celebration with the installation of new officers, at a dinner to be held at the Holiday Inn, Stuart.

The evening will begin with a social hour from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Following dinner, the outgoing president Jon Chicky will turn over the gavel to the incoming president, Richard Campbell, editor of The Mirror Newspapers, and honors will be presented to a member of the community who has given outstanding service to Jensen Beach.

Some 80 Chamber members and their guests will attend the gala affair, according to Chamber executive director Helen Richardson.

In addition to Campbell, who will be serving in the top office for the second time, new officers will be: Fred Nettere, vice president; Gene Greenwood, treasurer, and Dr. Stanley Wampler, secretary. Directors include Fred Meeker, William Keel III, Barbara Torow, Ted McClusky, Richard Zurich, Jane Peterson, Art Hansen, and Marg Paris.

No minds changed at anti-nuke meet

BY BOB FRYER

Although it is doubtful that any minds were changed as to the advantages or disadvantages of nuclear power, those opposing and supporting its use seemed to agree that a calm discussion about the nuclear power question is preferable to a boisterous one.

Several weeks ago, the first meeting of the Jensen Beach-based Safe Energy Alliance (SEA) turned into a shouting match between proponents and opponents of nuclear power. At the group's second meeting Saturday, the accent was more on education than argumentation. However, that's not to say all emotionalism was removed from discussion.

The meeting was devoted largely to two educational presentations, one by Jerry Swanson of Daytona Beach Community College on the biological effects of radiation on humans. The second was by FIT professor Garry Roderick on how nuclear energy is created.

Swanson traced the history of man's discovery and use of radioactive materials, and explained the adverse effects of radiation on humans. Alpha, beta and gamma rays of radiation were examined for their relative dangers to humans, and when his talk was over, there were only a handfull of questions and comments.

One Indian River resident expressed fear that the public would not be informed soon enough if there was a radioactive leak from the nuclear power plant across the river on Hutchinson Island.

Chris Farrell, an Ebasco Services employee at the plant, cited figures to support a contention that the dangers of radiation from nuclear plants had been over-dramatized. But before much of a debate could develop over what were safe and unsafe doses of radiation, the discussion fizzled out after SEA organizer Jackie Betz disputed the reliability of Farrell's source of information.

Roderick of FIT explained how nuclear power is made, saying he was not opposed to its creation, so long as it was done safely. And, he outlined the difference between making nuclear energy through fusion and fission.

He pointed out that the half life of radioactive material used in the fusion process was very short when compared to the 24,000 year half life of some nuclear waste from the fission process.

"Instead of saying no nukes, I'd rather say no nukes through fission, yes, through fusion," Roderick commented.

Currently, all nuclear power plants in the nation use the fission process, and Roderick said scientists are predicting that it will take from five to 20 years to develop nuclear plants using the fusion process. One more advantage of the fusion process is that it does not produce nuclear waste that can be used in making nuclear weapons.

Farrell agreed with Roderick that the fusion process is more desirable, but he said fission plants are needed to supply energy demands until fusion plants can replace them.

A memo, handed to members of the audience before the meeting was called to order, stated that the meeting would be conducted by consensus. The memo said consensus "is a commitment to hear what everyone has to say..." The memo also stated that "In consensus decision making we seek to resolve conflicts so that everyone is satisfied--not just the majority."

For the most part, everyone wanting to speak was allowed to do so, and comments on both sides on the issue were politely listened to. However, when an intermission was called in the meeting, a table containing anti-nuclear pamphlets for sale was pointed out. When Farrell carried in a box full of pro-nuclear material though, Betz bared him from distributing it in the room. So, he stood on the steps outside the Community Room of the First Federal Savings and Loan building and handed out the literature as persons left the meeting.

TONGUE ENCOURAGEMENT—As all of us shuffleboarders know the key to the sport is tongue movement. Whenever a shot begins to go slightly off target, one must coax it back into line with a flick of the tongue to the right, a flick of the tongue to the left, AH! Just right! George Dean, of the Ocean Breeze Shuffleboard Club and also apparently from West Virginia University, helps a shot along during last week's club sagles championships at the park. Lenny Laden, creator of Galloping Grannies is dead

Leonard "Lenny" Laden died Sunday, while doing the thing he had done best all his life, entertaining. He was stricken at the finale of the show he and his "Galloping Grannies" were staging for the open house at Indian River Community College.

Laden had originated the troupe several years ago as an avocation and recreation outlet for the area's senior citizens. Through his energetic efforts, the fame of the "Grannies" spread to all parts of this country and overseas.

A native of Elizabeth, N.J., Laden was born Jan. 15, 1919. He was a veteran of World War II, with overseas duty in the African campaign.

For many years, he produced shows that traveled around the world three times. He was well-known in the entertainment industry, and counted many of the all-time greats among his friends. One of them, Johnny Weissmueller, starred in one of his aquacades which toured in this country and in Japan. He also produced the first production of "The Mikado" to be allowed exposure in Tokyo.

The Ladens came to Stuart in 1973, later moving to their home at 825 Corto Blvd., Port St. Lucie.

He was president of the Southside Kiwanis Club; a director of the East Coast Chapter of the March of Dimes; a 30-year member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks; member of the American Association for Retired Persons; a trustee of the Port St. Lucie Community Center; a member of the PSL Yacht Club; an active volunteer of the Council on Aging, and a member of the American Guild of Variety Artists.

Survivors, in addition to his wife Hildy, are a daughter Leslie Jill Laden of Burlington, Vt.; two step-sons, Gary Friedman of Indiana and Lenny Friedman of Miram County, Calif.

Funeral services were scheduled for today (Wednesday) at 11 a.m. at the Haisley-Hobbs Funeral Home on Okeechobee Road. Rabbi Melvin Hecht of Temple Beth El was to officiate. Burial will be in the Beth El cemetery.

Friends who wish to make memorial contributions may send them to the Deborah Foundation, Heart-Lung Center, Brown's Mills, N.J.

Ocean Breeze election is Tuesday

Although few people outside of Ocean Breeze Park may know it, the mobile home community is a municipality unto itself.

And, like Martin County's three other municipalities (Stuart, Sewall's Point and Jupiter Island), its government is run by elected officials.

But that's about where the similarity stops. Because in Ocean Breeze Park, a contested election is about as rare as a snowfall on the town. In fact, it's rarer, as the last snow to land on Ocean Breeze fell on Jan. 19, 1977, and one veteran political observer said he could not recall when there was a contested election at Ocean Breeze Park.

The town election is next Tuesday, Dec. 18, and the poll at the park's community room will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. And, according to a secretary at Town Hall, there will probably be a good turnout of voters. She said there usually is.

You won't have to wait until next Tuesday to know who won though, because the three incumbent aldermen whose two-year terms are up for grabs are running unopposed. The secretary said that's usually the case too.

Those who will be re-elected next Tuesday are Ruth Hoke, Clyde Redinger, and Dorothy Geeben. Mrs. Hoke is the wife of the park's owner and mayor, Gene Hoke.

The three town aldermen meet once a month, and Mayor Hoke characterized the meetings as "routine as far as any town meeting; they bring out ideas to be considered by management."

The town contains 675 mobile home units, and during the winter season, the population is about 1,000 persons.

In addition to being somewhat peculiar as a municipality for the lack of hoop-la raised over town elections, there is one other peculiarity which Ocean Breeze Parkers can lay claim to. They pay absolutely no town taxes.

RIDING THE SURF—Despite the wintery weather southern Florida has had of late, some don't mind braving the cold water in order to catch a wave. These spectators watched as a man tested out his combination surf board/sailboat. The sail of this beauty hit the water several times when the wave action got rough, but it was easily hoisted again and the team of man and board was once again on its way. Santa is coming Saturday

Santa Claus will officially arrive in Jensen Beach this Saturday.

That's the word from the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce, which sponsors Santa's visit each year by making arrangements for the jolly old fat man's transportation through town and by providing candy and coloring books for him to give to all the good little boys and girls.

A Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department truck will be used to carry Santa through town. He'll be leaving the fire department around 11 a.m. and will motor from downtown Jensen Beach to the Jensen Beach Plaza at the corner of Commercial Street and Savanna Road. After a visit to that and other shopping centers in the area, he will travel down Savanna Road to SR 707, then make his way through Rio to Langford Park.

Following his visit to the park, he'll return to the downtown area. As he travels, Christmas carols will be played over a public address system on the fire truck.

Chamber supports bulkhead

Continued erosion has cut away much of the south side of the Jensen Beach Causeway between the two bulkheaded areas on the popular recreation area.

Citing the danger to parking areas and pavilions, the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce Monday asked the county commission for action to complete the bulkhead.

County Commissioner Frank Wache asked the Chamber for support in seeking approval of the bulkheading.

More snowbirds arrive

Three more "snowbirds" have arrived, Karl and Lena McClintlock, Gordon and Vi Gale and the Bill Hays.

Ray and Gert Butler of Michigan and West Palm Beach visited the Henry Johnson's during the week.

Dinner guests last Wednesday night of Ken and Irene were Gert Hume, Joe and Grace White and Joes sister Catherine Dodd of Howell, Mich.

Ken and Irene Bigham spent a few days last week with Irenes sister and brother of Lake Worth.

Ken and Irene, Gert and Millie Knuth enjoyed the pancake breakfast at Langford Park sponsored by the Lions Club.

Ken and Irene entertained this past Sat. night having D.L. and Betty White and Gert Hume over for cards.

Isabel Hay won Jackpot on Nov. 27. Marion Johnson on Nov. 30, Orval Gerdes and Lena McClintlock shared Jackpot on Dec. 4th. Friday night Dec. 7th Katie Segal won.

Be sure you keep your speed under 10 miles per hour in the park. We have both walkers and bike riders in the park and for the safety of all the speed limit must be enforced. Some of us do not move as fast as we did at one time so slow down please.

Our Association Meeting was held last Wed evening. Speeding in the park was again discussed.

A very pleasant way to start New Year's Eve would be to attend the organ recital given by Walter Jensen at Prince of Peace Lutheran Church from 8-9 p.m. and then attend our Party at the Hall.

Community is saddened by death of postal carrier

Brian Daly, one of the best-known and most-respected employees at the Jensen Beach Post Office, died last Tuesday evening, Dec. 4.

"There is not a single person in this Post Office who didn't love him. W. are all saddened and we all miss him greatly," commented Jensen Beach Postmaster Al Knovar.

Daly, who was only 45 years old, is survived by his wife, Jacquelyn, and two children, Kevin and Karen.

He had worked at the Jensen Beach Post Office for the last 13 years, and prior to that, he worked for the postal service in New York. He was a native of Brockport, N.Y.

"You work with somebody every day for years and you get to know him. Then suddenly, he's dead. It's made us all very sad," commented veteran postal clerk Pat Grove.

Kovar said that since he only recently came to Jensen Beach to serve as postmaster, he had not had much time to get to know Daly. But he said that in the short time he knew him, it was evident he was, "a well-liked, well-respected man here."

Since 1975 Daly has been the rural route carrier for the strip of Indian River drive from Walton Road to the Martin County line, for the residences on the Jensen Beach Causeway, and for Hutchinson Island. Mrs. Grove said that Daly was a popular man with the people on his route, and added that over the years, Daly "did just about every job there was around here. He once did the route in Rio, he worked behind the counter, and people all over town knew him."

Willie McClure, superintendent of postal operations at the Jensen office, said Daly "was a very good person, an excellent worker, and an excellent person to work with. He will be very much missed around here."

Bond Chairman reports sales

We must earn respect

BY CONGRESSMAN SKIP BAFALIS

Never in recent years have the American people been more irate — and more frustrated — than they are over the seizure of the American Embassy in Iran and the actions of the Ayatollah Khomeini.

And they have the right to be.

They have to be angry. Their nation, once the strongest and most respected in the world, has been forced to grovel by the actions of a hate-filled, religious fanatic who is determined to insult and blackmail the United States.

And they have the right to be frustrated. As long as the Khomeini regime and its student terrorists hold our embassy personnel captive and threaten their very lives, our options are few.

But, I would hope this extremely disturbing series of events would force a reexamination of our intelligence capabilities, our policies toward the Middle Eastern nations and our attitudes towards all nations around the world.

The fact the Ayatollah came to power so dramatically and so easily means our intelligence community failed. Either the CIA failed to glean the widespread dissatisfaction with the Shah and the shakiness of his government, or those administration officials who evaluate intelligence reports goofed, and goofed badly.

Whatever the case, some wholesale changes are indicated. We can't afford to let such drastic shakeups in governments vital to our well being take place with no advance warning and with no action on our part, either to strengthen the existing, pro-American regime or to improve our credentials with the regime slated to come to power.

Next, we must revamp our attitude and our efforts in the foreign policy field. For years, the thrust of our foreign policy has been to make all the nations of the world like us — and it's gotten us nowhere.

Instead, we need to win their respect, to let them know we are through being patsies for every demagogue and dictator who thinks the way to get our foreign aid is to insult us. In the 35 years since the end of World War II, this nation has done more than any other country to improve living conditions around the globe. Yet, it has won us nothing.

Perhaps, it's time to ask ourselves why such things never happen to the embassies of the Soviet Union. They don't happen because the Soviets are respected, respected and feared. And even the mipple Ayatollah knows better than to insult the Kremlin leadership.

As this is written, the Ayatollah still holds some 49 Americans and is threatening to "try" them as spies. The President has indicated, that such a step would promptly be greeted with "remedies" yet unused.

Let us hope so. Let us hope that our nation is through accepting the insults and terrorist actions of a bandit regime and serves notice that we will no longer sit idly by and watch our citizens harmed, our flag burned and international law flaunted.

And, let us hope our nation at last learned that, in this perilous world in which we live, it is better to be respected than to be liked.

Our actions now and in the days to come will determine the kind of world in which we will live for the rest of this century and the next — a world which terrorists hold sway and no one is safe, or a world in which all official government representatives and all citizens of every nation can travel safely

Letters to the Editor

To the editor:

In a recent opinion poll taken of 477 Dan McCarty seventh graders, 394 students said NO to the question, "Do you want an oil refinery in Fort Pierce?" 93 students answered YES. To the question, "Do you think a refinery will pollute our beaches and waterways?" 435 students answered YES. Only 42 believed a refinery would not pollute our beaches and waterways. 376 students said they, "think large oil tankers loading and unloading oil here will pollute our beaches and waterways."

In a time when all people are concerned with natural resources, perhaps we should pay careful attention to our most critical natural resource, the children. They must live with our decisions.

THE ALIENATION CLAUSE

QUESTION: A friend who invests in real estate quite frequency uses the term "alienation clause" in connection with a mortgage on one of his apartment buildings. I don't want to appear ignorant, so I haven't asked him what this means. Please don't use my name in your column, but can you tell me what an "alienation clause" is?

ANSWER: An "alienation clause" is a provision in a mortgage loan that permits the lender to call the loan and demand payment in the event the property is sold. The "alienation clause" is sometimes known as the "due-on-sale" clause.

When investing in real estate, it is important to check the provisions of any mortgages which you intend to assume. The existence of an alienation clause is a red flag indicating that you must discuss the loan with the lender in an attempt to obtain a waiver of his right to call the loan if the property is sold to you. It is quite possible that the lender will expect you to renegotiate the terms of the loan in connection with the transfer. This gives the lender the ability to review the interest rate and other provisions of the loan in the event the property is transferred.

If the lender is adamant and insists that the loan will be called in the event of a transfer, then you must look elsewhere for replacement financing.

Let's discuss your investment program. Call me at 334-0747, or stop by:

There was just about anything the fisherman could possible want lurking in the local waters.

Even a pelican--Pete Vuraueki reported a catch of three blues, a ribbon fish, a jack and, you guessed it, a pelican. Vuraueki said he released the pelican, though.

There have been a lot of trout, too.

Chris Devine, George Peck and Charlie Areni caught 15 trout and two redfish, in the Indian River, using trout touts; Ted Vanbenn bagged 11 trout, fishing in the river and using gold Tony-spoons.

Any Jorgensen caught 18 whiting, two spots, eight croaker, a bluefish and two jacks--typical of the "everything" week-in the surf at Jensen Beach, using shrimp.

Tom Chambers bragged of a four and a half pound snook which he caught in the surf, using shrimp; John Sawicki leashed 35 blues, two mackerel and 12 jacks, in the surf using a crocodile spoon.

Bill and Ray Ditzel got 17 trout, fishing in the river, using live shrimp; Lloyd Hoberg caught 60 snappers, in the power plant, using live shrimp. Junior Dahman landed 66 and perch in the river, using shrimp; and Glenn Hart got 16 whiting in the surf, using shrimp.

Roy Greenwald and Jack Prell combined to pull in 13 trout, all four or five pounders, in the river near the power plant on Hutchinson Island, using mirrolures.

Andy Popovich lined five trout in the river, with a mirrolure; Bill Gorman tamed 15 blues in the surf, using mackerel; Andy Middleworth got 12 blues in the surf, using mackerel; and lou Smitton claimed eight trout in the river. He was using shrimp.

Don Weber pulled in a drumfish, five pounds, in the river, using live shrimp; Bill Ditzel hooked a seven-pound snook, off the Jensen Bridge, using shrimp; and Morley Leach reeled in 21 blues and a whiting, fishing in the surf and using both mackerel and spoons.

C.B. McCain grabbed a three and three quarter pound trout, in the river, using a mirrolure. Ed and Trudy Hughes got ten blues, in the surf, using pinfish; and Charlie Areni sacked 13 trout and a channel bass, as well as a grouper, in the river, using a gold Tony spoon.

Temperatures, both high and low, as well as the daily rainfall, follow, with the tides for the St. Lucie and Fort Pierce inlets listed as well:

MCHS girls trample cobras

BY DONNIE WILKIE

For two periods, it was a game.

And a good game, at that, making its 27-game Suncoast Conference, Eastern Division winning streak against Fort Pierce Central, sputtered and choked.

But a 31-5 eruption midway through the third period took care of any upsetting thoughts that might have lurked in the minds of the Central Cobras, as Martin County roared to its third win of 1979, 68-43.

But a 31-5 eruption midway through the third period took care of any upsetting thoughts that might have lurked in the minds of the Central Cobras, as Martin County roared to its third win of 1979, 68-43.

It's hard to believe that the game was once tied, 30-30 and that Fort Pierce actually led at various stages previous to that point. But a quick, pressing defensive attack blew the game wide open in the second half.

"That was our best effort of the season defensively," agreed Dan Alley, the Head Coach of the Martin County girls. "We also executed our fast break better than any other time this year, and that helped us to break the game open."

Many observers were puzzled when Alley shelved his zone press for much of the first half, especially after it produced six quick points in the second quarter, giving the Tigers a 20-14 lead.

"They (Central) started to break it," he explained. "So we didn't use it for awhile, and when we did later, we made an adjustment. Veronica (Parks) backed off on Gilma (Mack (Central's Center, who was standing at the center of the court and taking press-breaking passes) a little bit, and our wings closed in. That enabled Veronica to loosen up.

Seniors have the horse sense

This column has been "ribbing" the politicians on their use of bureaucratic gobbledygook, so when something written in clear understandable English comes along, it is only fair to mention it. Last week Senator Stone's "Editor's Briefings" and "Skip" Belahs' Fall Report were received and found very easy to read and understand (first time). And, by the way, Senator Chiles has joined the column fan club, when he wrote and said he found the "senior talk" items interesting and asked to be kept informed. That now makes Senators Chiles and Stone and Representative Sergard who are apparently interested in Senior's problems.

A short while ago, it was mentioned here, "that since WWII, USA has only done the wrong things (except, Man on Moon), whereas before that time she was unbeatable; could it be all coincident?" It was expected that some seniors would want to chew it over", but not a single word was heard. However, the idea won't be dropped that easy, as once before a senior's idea was abandoned too quickly.

Back in the 1972-75 period, seniors were much concerned with Health Cost, Oil Supplies and Inflation and one senior wrote around 700 letters to 'folks in high places', along these lines.

"Although inflation is only 3 or 4 percent not, it is going to get much worse, unless something is done. Why, not have a task force set-up in every industry and government agency to see that policy' is not inflationary". Remember, that was back in '72-'75; seniors were painfully correct, it seems.

When Pres. Nixon took off Price and Wage controls, seniors were asking for some health cost protection, as they were sure the cost would skyrocket. And, so it did, with medicare deductible going from $40 in '69 to $180 in 79 or 450 percent; roughly 45 percent a year. So, here is another time that senior horse sense was painfully right, but no on listened.

When the Oil Embargo went on in '73, seniors were calling the politicians attention to the fact that Sunday supplements of the 50s and 60s were predicting just such oil shortages, and they better start right now paying attention, further more, they were saying, that unless a firm energy conservation policy was quickly established the Arab Nation would be able to dictate our domestic as well as foreign policy. There is no doubt the seniors were very correct in that prediction.

So, here is the point. Seniors by their years of experience have highly developed 'horse sense" and it would be well for those 'folks-in-high-places' to pay them some attention. Therefore, when it is pointed out that USA only does the wrong things, now a days, they should at least look into the idea of having an independant foundation investigate, before we find ourselves the laughing stock of all the world and completely dominated by Russian whims.

This is the year for seniors to make there views felt with letters, as many politicians are up for reelection and they are aware that 24.1 million elderly having a much better than average voter turn out, (at 62 percent), could easily determine the results.

Treasure Coast Senior Services are continuing to have beneficial and entertaining programs at Langford Field (Info. 334-2570). Last week there was a follow-up on the "Sexual Assault" lecture, when Mike Sandy, of "Operations Crime-Fight" told about self-protection equipment. One of interest to the ladies, was a purse size "Body-Guard" spray unit. It was a 20 spray unit, with a non-lethal chemical, that causes no permanent damage, but will be effective for 15 to 30 minutes, giving victim time enough to get away. If interested, call Sandy, 283-0169.

Then there was a truely superb performance by Martin County High School Singers, "Opus 80 Show Case Ensemble" under the direction of Mr. Ronnie Staley. These 23 students gave a real professional rendition of some of the more difficult Christmas carols. Twice a standing ovation showed that the efforts of Mr. Staley and his group were appreciated to the utmost. This attractive group of young folks is a tribute to today's youths, so it is nice to know that a majority of them are well behaved and dedicated to better things in life.

The HCCC (Health Cost Containment Committee) approved a simple questionaire form at its last meeting. The questionaire will ask if you have recently had any health service problems that were hard to cope with (or words to that effect) and the size of your family. Dr. Bush, Chm. (283-5769) hopes to have forms ready for a trial run, Sat. Jan. 19, 9:30 to 4:30, with tables set up in front of Winn Dixie, Jensen Beach and Port Salerno and Publix in Stuart. A couple of dozen volunteers are needed, three card tables, 6 folding chairs and three boxes for questionaire deposit and some appropriate posters. All interested in helping to contain health cost, get in touch with Dr. Bush 283-5769.

CHAPTER EVENTS

The Chapter's health program last week, was on Diabetes and the 41 attending learned that approximately 10 million Americans have diabetes, and the number is increasing rapidly and it is the third leading cause of death in U.S., killing hundreds of thousands each year. Because diabetes can lead a normal life, at first, many are not aware they have it and do not receive proper treatment.

Diabetes can be readily controlled by diet and with insulin, so see your doctor if you have a sudden appearance of the following: frequent urination; adnormal thirst; unusual hunger; rapid loss of weight; irritability, weakness and fatigue or nausea. Also; blurred vision; numbness of extremities, slow healing cuts on the feet. More info. 305-964-6864.

The very effective WMCF 'spot' announcement program had to be dropped awhile ago (no volunteers). Therefore, any requests for senior information must be made directly to the organization concerned, as WMCF can no longer act as a referal agency. It's a "don't call us situation".

The Golden Eagle News Bulletin is 'out' for December and it is noted that Rosa Dahlberg is now associate Editor under Boyd Smith, as Betty Taylor previous Assoc. Ed. was drafted for 1980 recording sec. Also, note that previous Advertizing Mgr. Herb Hiers has resigned to spend more time on his Senior Center Committee problems. Now, who will volunteer for Adv. Mgr.

It is noted that the Board and ExCom will meet at the Quality Inn this month. Now don't be dumb like your correspondent and ask, "Where's Quality Inn"? It's still the same place: was Salem Inn; before that Living Center, Buccaneer Inn and Ramada Inn. But, it is still on So. Federal Hwy. next to Ford Motor.

The chapter Installation of Officials will be at the December 20, meeting and ASDA George Schbert will officiate. This being a party meeting, a plea has gone out for cookie makers (reembursed) so that some of grandma's best will be served. Volunteers, please get in touch with Agnes Berg 334-0350. Agnes, thanks her committee: Verlie Anderson; Annie McGehee; Edith Rohman; Mary Bell; Jo Bell and Kathleen Sprunger for all their fine work serving the hungry crowd since last January.

This is a "Fun" meeting with a surprize program, even so, rules are rules and all members must wear their membership cards as name tags, or else?

Many have asked, where is the Door Prize 'clip-out' form, saying they couldn't find it in usual place in bulletin. Well, I couldn't find it either, but a couple of telephone calls assured me the Door prize drawing is still to be held. Get a slip at the door.

A fun time was had by all 140 of Venture Three at the Beer Blast held at the Rec Hall Saturday afternoon and evening. Grilled hot dogs and rolls were prepared and served by experts Al DeSmith and Floyd Reynolds. Lu and Bud Prew chaired the wingeding.

Selected dishes for the table were brought by all who attended. Drawing the beer were two old hands Joe Huston and Earl Eisenhard. The Basket of Cheer, donated by members of Venture Three, and assembled by Edith Painter, was raffled off with Kitty and Ernie Huffnegel handling the tickets. Virginia Glaze donated a beautiful ceramic Xmas tree and in turn won the basket of cheer. The Xmas tree was won by Love Rawding and Lu Prew walked off with the 50-50 drawing. Many others of the Park donated their services and the food was abundant. Accordian music was by George Bares of Holiday Out and accompanied by Jack Torregrossa on the horn. Regardless of the damp English mist causing us to hold the festivities indoors the camaraderie was contagious.

Firemen busy

Jensen Beach Volunteer firemen have been busy lately, fighting eight fires in the last 15 days, according to fire chief Joe Luciano.

The latest fire was a blaze in a dumpster along N.E. Palmetto Drive Monday evening. A few hours prior to that, the firemen were called to a brush fire at the west end of the Timberwick development. In both cases, Damage was minor.

On Sunday, firemen were called to the home of Les Casaise at 1801 N.E. 24th Terrace in Leilani Heights. A Nativity scene was plugged into a wall outlet, and the fire apparently started at the outlet.

Luciano said the fire had been put out by the time firemen arrived, but he said damage to the home was about $2,000. Also on Sunday, the men were called to a dumpster fire at the Savannas Shopping Plaza, behind Able Carpets. Luciano said damage was minor, but could have been bad, had the fire reached power lines above the dumpster.

In addition to those calls, firemen have fought several brush fires in the Timberwick, Town and Country area.

Planning a long-awaited cruise? Although the cruise season is at its peak, there are several things you will need to consider carefully before making a decision. First, beware of advertisements with unusually low prices. When the price is suspiciously low, the quality of service and accomodation has often been sacrificed. If you have any doubt about the food quality, sanitary conditions, or the size of cabin, your travel agent is the best source of information and advice.

Before making a decision on a cruise, be wise and check with a knowledgeable travel agent. JENSEN BEACH TRAVEL SERVICE 1990 N.E. Commercial St. and SALERNO VILLAGE TRAVEL 5571 S. Federal Highway will use its experience to make sure you have a most enjoyable journey. With no additional cost, you can receive the sound advice of a professional. BEWARE! the "RUST MONSTER"
He works 24 hours a day

QUESTION

If rust can start anywhere, including inside parts, then how can a body repairman detect all the rusted areas?

ANSWER

He can't! He doesn't have X-Ray vision, so it's impossible for him to detect rust that has started in hidden places. A body shop operator can not be held responsible for a rust condition which was undetectable at the time of a repair. Because of this, rust may appear at any time, even within days of when a vehicle was refinished.

Commerce secretary talks about development

State Secretary of Commerce Sid Levin spoke about the Florida economy and its chances for expansion during a recent meeting sponsored by the Stuart-Martin County Chamber of Commerce.

At a recent chamber meeting, Florida Secretary of Commerce Sid Levin spoke about the state's present role in the general economy.

Levin was optimistic about Florida's upward trend, but added that the three major areas directly affecting our economic development were in need of expansion. Southern Florida is dependent upon construction, tourism and agriculture for a large part of its revenue, and unfortunately, "in bad times, we have no stabilizing power" in those areas. What Levin hopes to accomplish in office is to achieve that needed control through a number of different means.

One problem Florida currently faces deals with the "lousy image we have on the industrial development side," he said. Because many northerners think of our state as one giant playground, it's difficult to lure large companies to transfer operations when the board of directors are convinced their employees will be either playing on the first hole or on the beach. Although Florida has more manufacturing jobs than Georgia, it's a hard sell to overcome the image so perpetuated by the airline industry and the like. Though Former Governor Reubin Askew had helped change that image, Levin says that "the statement was made and now its time to attack it with promotion and advertising." Currently, he is trying to lure foreign industry into the state by co-ordinating pertinent information from the different counties in an attempt to match the right area with the right firm.

Although Levin was concerned about the needed influx of new business to the state, he was adament about building existing ones. According to figures, a minimum of 60 percent of all industrial growth in the United States comes from the expansion of existing businesses. "We must pay attention to business in the communities and the government must remain their friend," he said. Levin added that the problem carried over into the area of trade. Although trade this year exceeded one billion dollars, and those in the export business are doing quite will "we can't convince small manufacturers that there is a trade," he said. Levin feels that the Department of Commerce has the where with all to help those interested in breaking into the export business by offering any number of services available through his office.

Levin went on to expose some of the problems faced in the tourism industry. Although Florida has the distinction of being the number one travel destination in the states, and second or third in the world, he felt we must become more aggressive both domestically and internationally. He quoted the governor by saying that "when tourism gets a cold, Florida runs the risk of pneumonia." To further boost last year's 13 billion dollar sales revenue from tourists, Levin has helped initiate a new ad campaign that is currently running east of the Mississippi and Canada. The slogan "when you need it bad, we've got it good" plays background to pictures of frustrated snowbound motorists and work-ladened secretaries. Levin was visably excited about the new campaign and said, "I think we hit summer with innovative ideas."

Another idea he would like to see implemented is the package tour. By creating a transport system similar to that of Europe's, Levin feels we would capture a large, untapped market; one that would be further assured with the present oil situation. He also mentioned that both TWA and United will be running an additional 90 flights per week to Florida beginning in December. This move should further open up channels and possibly raise last year's figure of 34 million tourists who came to the state.

Levin, who admittedly was a little jaundiced towards government when he first took office, says that, "I've learned not to say I'm here from the government and I'm here to help you." He does say however, that the department is basically a good one, although it lacks direction and, as he puts it, needs a swift kick every not and then.

In closing, Levin urged that no business will come into a community unless they know they're welcome, and ultimately, this factor rests with the residents. "The better you are, the better assistance we can be."

Ament addresses PSL Lions Club

County Planner Gary Ament spoke before the Lions Club at their regular meeting on December 4th. Ament described the duties of his office and mentioned that the county did not set up an acceptable planning process until 1973. Since then, Ament said the county has received an award for their planning. By July of 1980, he explained that the county will have to submit a complete comprehensive plan.

Lions Club members reported that they were not aware that St. Lucie County is the fourth fastest growing county in the state. Ament mentioned that the public is invited to attend the county commission meetings, as he did not see too many Lions in regular attendence.

The Port St. Lucie Lions Club will be having their Christmas party on December 18th. Guests are invited. Tickets are available by calling Lion Al Morrow at 878-2735 or they can be picked up at the Ye Old Coin Shoppe by calling 461-1944.

It's time to drive safely

The folks that had to plow throught Lake Warner Creek" as it expanded from Hwy 707 again last week will be glad to know that the 30 day forecast of mid-November, said we should have less than normal amount of rain, (even though they missed this time by a mile), these advanced forecasts generally are quite reliable). However, our many visitors didn't mind the rains too much, as when some had to return to the snow and sleet, they left with, "We envy you lucky people".

There were plenty of holiday visitors, but few returnees, as those who had not 'made-it' yet, will wait until after the holidays The following, did arrive last week: Dean and Rose Murray, Leslie Zimmerman.

This is the time of the year we all have to drive very carefully. First, there is an early dusk, when visibility is poor Second, there are lots of visitors, not used to mobile home park driving, where folks use the streets as sidewalks Third, there are plenty of grandchildren and "greats" joyfully playing in the roadways Fourth, with Christmas lights to "Oh and Ah" about, lots of elderly aren't paying attention to cars

And, finally we must remember, ramp and grandma don't hear or see to jump out of the way as quickly as they did 50 years ago So, cut you speed to even less than the park limit of 15 mph, AT ALL TIMES. Management says, those observed exceeding the speed limit, will first be warned, then there will be other action taken Let's not have any disagreeable events, during the holidays

The polls have closed with Ruth Cooke, Clyde Redinger and Dorothy Beeber running for a 2 year term as Town Alderman. Voting will be at the Clubhouse, Tuesday, Dec 18. Get out and vote, showing the elderly still are interested politics and help maintain their good voting record of a 4 percent turn out

There will be something for everybody over the holidays, starting with the Christmas Dance, Sat. Dec 15 @ 8:30 p.m. in the clubhouse It will be a party with all kinds of dancing, entertaining skits, and Santa (jr.) will distribute the very inexpensive gifts brought in by the dancers (and spectators) There will be cartons under the 'tree' for men's type gifts, toy-like gifts and those that either could use All OBPers invited.

Next Sunday, Dec 23, John Leybeck will have his 'Hi-Fi' PA system set up for a Christmas carol concert, 7 p.m. in the shuffle courts

Then, Mon. Dec 24, there will be a Kids Christmas party, 11:00 at the clubhouse All grandchildren (and "greats" 10 years and under will receive a gift from Santa, if their names are previously registered at the office First, there will be games, then when the kids are agreeably tired, they will be seated at a Christmas trimmed table for sandwiches, cake, goodies and milk, then "here comes Santa" with gifts for all This is a very fine OBP tradition, so all new and oldtimers, be sure to register your kids

Oldtimers know only too well what happens bright and early Christmas morning, but some of the new comers may be a bit surprised to find the park PA system reminding them at day break that it's time to get up for the 8:30 a.m. church service in the clubhouse This is a very fine way to start the Christmas day, so make the slight effort and attend.

Finally, to end the holiday season, there will be a New Year's Eve Dance in the Clubhouse, 9 p.m. While, it isn't a black tie affair, the gals do get a chance to wear their long gowns and the men do oblige, by starting out with ties and jackets It is mixed dancing, round, square and misers, with some skits thrown in for good measure and of course there will be, at 10 p.m sharp, the famous OBP initiation of new members, as originated by Harry Hoke years ago One can't be a true-blue OBPer until initiated on New Years Eve

OBPers have a full holiday season in store for them, so make a note of these events and plan to attend them all, a chance for new comers to get acquainted

CAMERA CLUB

Camera Club members, all 85 of them, were very pleased with the train trip over the rugged Sierra Madre mountains of Mexico, by Ed Pettitt, who again played the organ before the meeting; while Ralph Ortt led those waiting in the singing of Christmas carols

Next week, Thurs. Dec 13 at 7 p.m., Freda Peterkin (Club Sec.) will take the members to the 1970 Oberammergau Passion Play This is very appropriate, as quite a few OBPers are planning on attending it in 1980. This play is only put on every 10 years and all the town works on it during the ten year interval, as they promised the Lord, years ago they would do it, if he answered their prayers, which he did. All OBPers and guests are invited.

SHUFFLERS

Shufflers again did well for themselves and the part, when at the State Amateur tournament in Boynton Beach last week, Pearl Wheelock and Fran Runyan took third in the main event and Ted Witmer and Jack Kline (Ridgeway) were second in consolation.

The OBP Men and Ladies Singles last week had the following winners: Bill Jones; Tom Elliott; Sparky Garside; Clyde Redinger; consol Cyril Mathy and Ray Walker. For the Ladies: Evelyn Hillman, Inez Bailes; Evelyn Grooves, Irma Fair, consol Kit Garside; Mable Stevens.

The league activities will be hardly mentioned Spanish Lakes took OBPers Indian River League, 4-6 and Central League 1-3.

Remember, all shufflers and interested persons Turkey Shoot and Country Store, Friday, Dec 21 All donations of canned goods or money will be accepted by Irma Fait at 36 SW 5th Ave. or can be left at Clement Hall in the carton on the table

Golfers are a sturdy bunch according to Merle Bender, as 32 turned out last Saturday and played away in all that rainy drizzle All interested in joining the OBP golfers league that plays each Sat. morning at Holiday Golf Club, get in touch with Merle on NE 10th or show up ready to play 8:30 a.m. next Saturday morning.

Heart unit offers CPR

The first four minutes after a human stops breathing are the most critical ones, and knowing what to do to help a victim during those minutes may literally mean the difference between life and death.

Because much can be done to save a life, if folks only know what to do, the Martin County Unit of the American Heart Association of Palm Beach is offering free instruction in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CRP).

The unit offers qualified instructors and all the necessary equipment for the courses at any location in Martin County.

Anyone attending the course will be taught the life-saving techniques of providing help for victims of apparent heart attack, stroke, smoke inhalation, choking, drowning and other potential health accidents.

The course lasts six hours and is generally into two sessions.

Any business, condominium complex, mobile home park church or social or fraternal organization can request the course as their choice location by contacting Unit secretary Mrs. Clara Shore at 334-1301. Individuals who would like to join a class should also contact her for assignment to a class in their area. The course if free.

Fans' apathy bothers FPC hoop coach

It wasn't such a long time ago.

When Ernest McIntyre's last-second shot swished through the net, beating Lake Worth-Leonard, 43-41, and sending Martin County on their way to the AAAA high school basketball championship last year, the MCHS "Tiger Den" became a madhouse.

The Den is famous because of its wild fans. The MCHS student section, known as the "Bleacher Bums," is perhaps the wildest group of students this side of Iran. It is because of this breeding ground of sound that opponents dread the task of "having to win" at Martin County. It is almost impossible — the Tigers have won 18 consecutive home games over three years.

Though the Tigers may not be the powerhouse that they were in 1978-79, it has become increasingly obvious that there is a contender in the neighborhood — Fort Pierce Central.

But the Cobras, now 6-0 and rolling merrily along, are the state's best kept secret. In fact, they may be St. Lucie County's best kept secret, and that's what concerns Bill Wright, their Head Coach.

FPC's lack of recognition stretches from much of the news media, who until recently ignored them, to the AAAA state basketball poll, in which they received not a single vote last week, to the fans themselves.

"I don't know which is worse," grunts Wright after a recent home game that drew only 15-200 people — "that no one in the poll thought we were good enough to be in the top ten, or that Fort Pierce doesn't give a (deleted)."

"I don't know what the problem is," said Wright of the poor attendance figures. "I wish the community would support us. We're doing everything we can as far as providing a quality product."

"We had more people come to see us lose last year than we've had this year, and we haven't lost a single game. I would certainly think more people would be showing up."

There have been many theories concerning Central's dilemma. Some say it is because much of the team (everyone but backup center Mark Wilson) is black. But one would think, even if that was the problem, that the large black population in St. Lucie County could support a high school team.

Perhaps it is because the black section is on the north side of town, and Central is on the south. After all, West wood High is much closer to the north side. Someone even suggested that the problem was Indian River Community College — that the basketball crowd was being split in half.

"That's not it," insisted Wright. "We lived with Stetson at Deland (Wright was an assistant at Deland, one of the most successful basketball programs in Florida), and the crowds didn't suffer."

It is getting so bad that Central may end up losing money when the season ends. Their only salvation may be a playoff game in late February-early March, when the Cobras (if they win the District 10-AAAA title) would host the District 9-AAAA champion — probably Daytona Mainland. At that point, a Central-Mainland struggle would be a game of major proportions, and if it doesn't bring in the crowd, nothing will.

Perhaps I have been spoiled. In Martin County, one never worries. When the Tigers play a "big game," a North Shore or a Leonard or a Twin Lakes, the gym is filled to the rafters. Perhaps the Tigers' success prevents the ultimate realization from surfacing —there are only a handfull of schools in Florida that make good money in basketball. Maybe the Delands, Martin Countys, Mainlands, Vanguards and Cocoas are the exception, rather than the rule.

Still, it's a crying shame that virtually no one is willing to pay a couple of dollars to see an undefeated team play basketball.

Was glancing through the newspapers last week, and found a score that should interest diehard prep fans. Tiny Daytona-Warner Christian, an A class school, scared mighty Mainland, rated third in AAAA, losing only 74-70 as Sam Henry scored 23 points for Mainland.

Once a Hatter, always a Hatter...

Former Tiger Otis Johnson enjoys Stetson assistant job

First In A Series
BY DONNIE WILKIE

Before the game, he mills around the gymnasium, talking with coaches, players, and others, as well as attending to his duties in the locker room with his team. During the game, he sits on the bench, occasionally rising to make an adjustment on defense or point out a mistake to one of his team's players. After the game, he talks to virtually anyone that approaches him, whether it be an old friend, a coach from somewhere else, or just a plain, ordinary folk.

Years ago (1968-1971), to be precise) he haunted opposing defenses with his awesome inside play. He was a Martin County High School Tiger then, and now he is a Hatter.

A Stetson Hatter, that is.

Otis Johnson has been a lot of, different places since those MCHS days, and so has Martin County High. A whole team of Johnsons will have passed through the school when young Levi, not yet at MCHS, graduates some years ahead. There has been Otis, Leen, Ivy and Moses. All have made significant contributions to the Tiger program under Don Wallen, but none — in fact, no player at all at MCHS - has been so successful after his prep days as Otis Johnson.

Johnson returned to Stetson, in Deland, this fall, to assume the job as assistant basketball coach under Glenn Wilkes, himself a heavy figure in Florida basketball. For the past two years, he guided Charlton County High in Flokston, Georgia to a state tournament berth and a spot in the regional playoffs, with records of 19-5 and 14-8.

Don Wallen, in explaining why he has stayed at Martin County for as long, has said that "some people consider a college assistant job a step up from a high school head coaching job. I know a lot of successful high school coaches that have taken assistant jobs, thinking that is was a step up, only to be back at the high school level two years later. There aren't that many good assistant jobs- there aren't that many openings around that would interest me."

So why did Johnson, a student of the MCHS program, take that "step up?"

"The purpose of a head coaching job is so that you can build a kingdom," said Johnson last week, after the Stetson Hatters had been stomped by the nationally-ranked Ohio State Buckeyes, 69-50. "At Martin County, Don has that kingdom. There's really almost no better place for him at the moment. For what I'm trying to do, it is a step up. Going up to Georgia gave me an opportunity to deal first hand with all the responsibilities, the entire situation, that a head coach deals with.

"Those two years were well spent- I don't regret a minute of them. I'd do it all again if I was put back in that situation. But I won't be satisfied until I get the opportunity to coach at a major-college level. But this was a job I couldn't refuse. It's an opportunity everyone doesn't get, and I'm just letting nature take its course."

In fact, that seems to be Johnson's strongest personnal asset- knowing when to move on, to let go and drift to the next place. To "let nature take its course," as he says.

From Martin County High, Johnson went to Brevard Community College, ranked number one in the country at the time. For two years, he played on the nation's best JUCO squad, then transferred to Florida State. Despite what most observers would call his worst season, Johnson enjoyed himself, but sensed that it was time to move on. After his junior year, he again packed his bags and went to Stetson, at that time a Division I, but still unrecognized, school.

With Johnson leading the way, the Hatters charged to a 22-4 season, the seventh best winning percentage in the nation, beating such notables along the way as California, Florida State and Jacksonville. Johnson established himself as a top major-college player.

Despite his team's 22-4 record, Stetson was nowhere to be found when the big boys- the Indianas, the UCLAs and the Marquettes- were fighting it out for the NCAA championship. Thus, Johnson failed to get the national exposure necessary to make him a top round pick in the professional drafts.

"I wasn't surprised when Stetson didn't get a bid," said Johnson. "I think at that point in time, a Stetson type team would have had to be 25-1 or 26-0 to be noticed. At our point in time, when Stetson didn't have the reputation of a UCLA, we would have needed a superb record like 25-1 to get an invitation. I was disappointed, but not surprised."

Still, the pros noticed the former Martin County star.

They noticed him enough to make Otis Johnson a third round selection of the world champion Golden State Warriors in 1975. Finally, the people of Martin County said, there would be a Tiger in the NBA.

But it didn't quite work out that way.

Rick Barry, the Warriors' most valuable player, hinted that he might retire. As it turned out, Johnson might have made the team if Barry had retired. But he didn't- he's still playing!!, and Johnson was the last player cut from the squad.

"Professional basketball is just like any other vicious business," says Johnson now. "And it is a vicious business. If there's a position open for you, then it's yours. If there isn't, you are cast aside. At that particular time, there was no position open for Otis Johnson."

"When I got cut, a lot of people thought I was a hurt person," comments Johnson. "The day I got cut, I did some soul searching. I looked at myself and said 'There's not another player in this entire league that has paid the price more than Otis Johnson.' No one has made the kind of sacrifices I made to be a professional basketball player."

"While everyone else was at parties, discos or proms, I was out running. While they were having fun, I would go outside and shoot a basketball."

"The day I got cut, something inside me a gut feeling told me to hang up the sneakers."

Johnson eventually did, but not right away.

He headed for Holland, of all places, where he played in a European basketball league.

"There was nothing I could do at that time," he says, "but play basketball. Going there game me an opportunity to keep playing ball and still get payed for it. It was a chance for me to go abroad and live basically free. It also happened at a time when my wife, kid and I could afford it.

"I don't think anyone can appreciate this country until you've been somewhere else. I was all over Europe - Paris, London, Germany, everywhere.

"It was a fruitful journey."

Johnson's basketball appetite was still strong enough in 1976 to drag him back to the Warriors' NBA camp. He was there for all of three days.

"There is no doubt in my mind that if I had stayed there, I would have made the team. But after the third day, I was informed that my father was in a coma (he was fighting cancer), and so I came home. A couple of days after that, he died."

Johnson then conceded to his gut feeling. He hung up his sneakers.

...Next week: Johnson becomes a High School Head Coach.

Carpet Corner, Aycock's Gang battle to 2-2 tie

Steve Huffaker's two goals, one of which came on a penalty shot, helped Carpet Corner to a 2-2 tie Sunday afternoon with Aycock's Gang, in junior soccer Upper Division play at Langford Park.

It was, perhaps, the early season's most sparkling game, in light of the excellant offensive and defensive play exhibited by both teams throughout the afternoon.

Twice, Huffaker's tallies gave Carpet Corner a one-goal lead, but each time, Aycock's Gang fought back, scoring the final goal with less than two minutes remaining in the game.

Paula Geier tracked down a loose ball in front of the Carpet Corner goal, and booted it past goalie Tresa Gilbert, giving Aycock's the tie, their second in as many games. Carpet Corner is 0-1-1.

An early foul committed inside the penalty area led to Huffaker's first goal, a booming shot past Aycock's goalie Kevin Kinch, making the score 1-0.

But the majority of the first half was spent in the middle of the field, as the teams struggled for supremacy, neither quite capable of another goal. When a shot was taken, it was batted down by the two goalkeepers, Kinch and Gilbert, who enjoyed out standing games.

In the final two minutes of the half, though, the squads exploded. First, Eddie Richardson dribbled around two defenders, then outmaneuvered Gilbert for the equalizer. Moments later, Huffaker took a pass from his brother, Jim, and scored the go ahead goal for Carpet Corner, making it 2-1 at halftime.

The second half had all the ingrediants of an all-out offensive show, except goals. Through the first 33 minutes, each team blew countless scoring oportunities, though the goaltending excellance was primarily responsible for the missed chances.

The one obvious fact was that Aycock's Bruce Tucker, regarded as one of the league's outstanding players, controlled the center of the field from his midfielder position.

Geier's game tying goal came only as a result of a suicidal mistake in front of the Carpet Corner goal, where two players were fighting for control of the ball. Perhaps the most astute remark of the day belonged to one of the spectators, who was heard to say:

"It took a girl (Paula Geier) to do it."

Aycock's will try to shut down the high-scoring attack of Angelo's Plumbing tonight (Wednesday) at Langford Park, when the teams collide at 7:30 p.m. The Upper Division game will be preceeded by a Middle Division tussle between Certified Carpet Cleaning and TNT Appliances, at 6:15 p.m.

Stuart National 2 Clemons 1

Donald Mauldin's second half goal gave Stuart National Banks a 2-1 victory over Clemons Realty, in Lower Division play Saturday.

The teams had battled evenly through the first 20 minutes, with Joey Miller scoring for the Bankers and Eric Butler for the Realtors.

The win gave SNB a 1-0-0 record in the five-team Lower Division, while Clemons is 0-1-1.

Hartman 1 Baum Realty 0

Johnathon Polhemus scored the game's only goal midway through the first half, leading Hartman Real Estate to a 1-0 win over Baum Realty, in Lower Division action Sunday.

The victory gave Hartman the division lead, at 1-0-1, by one point (teams get two for a win, one for a tie) over Stuart National Bank. Due to Saturday's Christmas Parade in Jensen Beach, league officials were not sure when Hartman would play its next scheduled game, against Acteon First Realty.

They will play either next Wednesday night, or early Saturday morning, before the parade.

Fran Con 9 TNT Appliances 0

Brian Polhemus scored three goals for the winners, who were playing their season opener.

Ernco 6 Flacker Olds 3

Tony Baker scored four goals, including the finale, in the wildest game of the weekend, a Middle Division contest.

Ernco jumped to a 2-0 lead on tallies by Baker and Thomas Oliver, then, after Derick Meer cut the gap for Fischer Olds Cadallac, took a 4-1 edge on a pair of goals by Baker.

That margin was reduced just before halftime by Fischer's Chris Strausbaugh, whose goal made it 4-2.

Mark Nager made it 5-2 early in the second half, before Straushaugh's second goal again cut the gap. Finally, Baker iced the game for Ernco with his final goal.

Ernco (1-1-0) trails Fran Con Construction, Certified Auto and Bandy Universal, all undefeated, by a full two points, while Fischer Olds is in last place at 0-2-0.

PW & Sons 10 Winner's Circle 2

PW & Sons trampled Winner's Circle, 10-2, tying Angelo's Plumbing for first place in the Upper Division at 1-0-0. Aycock's Gang, 0-0-2, who had two points in the standings, but has played one more game.

Timmy Oullette and Mac Tawrey scored the goals for Winner's Circle, but the scorers for PW & Sons were not reported.

New coach leads IRCC tennis team

Special to The Mirror

When it comes to hard work and preparation in Indian River Community College Sports, there aren't many varsity teams that can compare to the 1979-80 edition of the men's tennis Pioneers.

With the season opener still two months away, November 5- against Manatee in Fort Pierce (2 p.m.), new coach Charles Cahill has been working with his group for over three months, establishing the tennis players as one of the hardest-working groups on campus.

Cahill claims his team "has shown tremendous desire." The players are averaging about three hours of practice daily, and most team members also work out on a regular basis during weekends. Several, in fact, have paid their own way to pro-am tournaments around the Southeast.

But why is the team practicing so hard early?

"The team has high goals and each individual has high goals," answered Cahill. "Realistically, every person on this team could make tennis their career."

Jan Renthas has experience on the European tennis tour, while teammates Ernst Mohamed and Greg Olson are seriously considering the circuit after graduation. Emile DeCuba, Gerald jan-A-Jon and Jaime Rodriguez have national and international tennis experience. Steve Mayer also is thinking about making tennis a career.

"If we played right now against the team that we were in September, we'd destroy ourselves. In terms of ability, we're that much better. The players' psychological approaches to the game have changed."

Falkenburg wins FPTA

Tom Falkenburg, tennis director at Indian River Plantation, won a title and a half over the weekend in the annual Florida Professional Tennis Association (FPTA) championships in Sarasota.

The Plantation pro scored first in the men's 55 singles division, then, returned with Ernie Spiller of Palm Beach to capture the doubles championship in the same age division.

In doubles, Falkenburg and Spiller, who were top-seeded, easily disposed of Harry Walker of Pompano Beach and J.P. Fiegenbaum of Miami, 6-3, 6-2 for the title after erasing Livingston and Ted Withall of Gulfstream in the semis.

Deakins finishes UM season

Special to The Mirror

Coaches who didn't want to be blatantly crude would often talk to their players about intestinal fortitude.

"Men," the coaches would say, "you have to have intestinal fortitude if you're going to survive out there."

It was a nice way of saying guts.

Don't both telling David Deakins about intestinal fortitude. As a rather small split end for Class AAAA Stuart Martin County, he knew all about it.

Today, as a University of Miami football player, Deakins finds that it takes a little more than guts — at 5'7", it also takes a lot of heart.

College recruiters all along knew that Deakins was good enough to play college football — his high school statistics affirmed that assessment; 51 receptions, 16 TD's and over 1600 total yards offensively as a senior at Martin County. Team MVP, media MVP's, Jai Alai Athlete of the Month. Still, the major college scholarship eluded him.

Deakins had his bags packed and was set to take off for Division 1-AA Jacksonville State (Alabama) when UM coach Howard Schnellenberger saw the 140-pound MCHS graduate in the annual Florida Coaches' All-Star game, in Gainesville. Martin County coach Fred Chase showed the UM coach some game films of Deakins in action, and that was enough to convince Schnellenberger.

So, just two days before fall workouts were to begin, Deakins signed a letter of intent.

On a Miami roster that is blessed with some of the finest receivers in the country in Jim Joiner, Pat Walker and Larry Brodsky, (Walker leads the nation in average yards per catch), young Deakins was assigned to the Hurricane junior varsity squad this year. In four jayvee outings, Deakins caught 12 passes for over 150 yards and one touchdown, a performance that earned the freshman a spot on the varsity roster when Miami flew to Tuscaloosa, Alabama for their match with top-ranked Alabama, a game which the Hurricanes lost, 30-0.

"I just want to prove that small people can play this game," he said. "It's not how big you are, but how much heart you have. In high school people said I was small, but they never said I was TOO small to play," added the receiver, who caught three TD passes and rolled up 325 yards once in a prep game.

You would think a feat like that would require a lot of intestinal fortitude.

For David Deakins, though, it took just a little guts — and a lot of heart.

PSL Shuffle

The Port St. Lucie Shuffleboard Club held a Singles Novice tournament on December 6-7, with a good turnout of membership.

Judd Reading, the tournament director who assisted by Al McDonnell, kept the event moving along nicely.

Four trophies were donated by Al and Ruth McConnell and were won by: First Place: Bob Corcoran; Second Place: Gene Herr; Third Place: James Holmes; and Fourth Place: Sis Corcoran.

Recently, the club brought home three trophies from the Melbourne Men's and Ladies' Doubles Amateur tourney. Al McConnell took first place in the Main Event for Men, along with Ocean Breeze's Ted Witmer. Evonne Tondreau and Ruth Dobler of Port St. Lucie won the third prize in the Ladies' Main Event.

By winning the above prize, Tondreau is now a state amateur by qualification, rather than a district amateur.

The next regular meeting is scheduled for January 8, 1980 at the Northport Marina, at 1:30 p.m.

Plans brewing for allied arts center

The dream of an allied arts center for Martin County has made significant strides toward becoming reality in the past weeks, thanks to the initiative of a Jensen Beach woman.

Mrs. Helen Shea Wells, who moved here from Pompano Beach a few years ago, was impressed by the proliferation of activity in the world of the arts in this area, but "where is the center?" she asked herself.

She took the question to the public schools, and found a receptive ear in Colleen Watts, coordinator for the Martin County Public Schools system. Mrs. Watts agreed that, although art clubs, art classes for adults, music and theatre groups have attracted capacity membership and response, they have no unification and no cohesive center.

WHEEL OF PROGRESS—Art teacher Helen Wells, seated, and Colleen Watts, coordinator of adult education for Martin County Schools, hold the proposed blueprint for the hoped for allied arts center which would serve the entire county in the fields of art, drama, music and the dance. Helen Smith, also of the public schools system, prepared the floor plan, which would include a central 800-seat auditorium.

The idea of establishing one is not new, Mrs. Watts pointed out. A few years ago, the Rotary Club of Martin County tried to get a drive for such a center off the ground, but the effort failed for lack of unification.

Mrs. Watts said she had gone to the school administration with the idea of "plugging in" a center at one of the local schools. It was then that she learned about the potential of state funding.

"The state department has available funds that would pay for half of a center, if we can raise money for the other half," she said.

Encouraged by the knowledge of such available funding, she and Mrs. Wells began an unofficial campaign, contacting businesses and organizations to get their reaction.

"The reaction has been good, almost without fail," Mrs. Wells said.

The two hope to have a solid enough presentation to place before the county school board soon. If it gets the county board's blessing, application can then be made to the state for the available money.

"Before we go to the school board," Mrs. Wells said, "We want everything organized and in clear order."

Part of the organization has been the preparation of a blueprint for the center they want to build. Designed on the "wheel concept," it would have four large studios and rehearsal rooms which could be subdivided into more with sliding wall partitions, an enclosed and secured exhibit room, and a central auditorium with a seating capacity of 800.

The auditorium would be used for plays and concerts, and other large meetings of community interest. Thus far, Martin County has only the Barn Theater, the Stuart band shell, and the auditorium of Florida Institute of Technology for the performing arts.

The need for an adequate central showcase for musical and theatrical performances is great, Mrs. Watts noted.

Last year, she commented, Jerry Simmons put together a weekly music appreciation program at the library, and the response was so great membership had to be cut off almost before it began.

Mrs. Wells said she has contacted most of the major art groups in the county, and "they're all excited," so she feels the project will get the solid backing of people of all age and interest levels.

"I see it as going 12 hours a day," Mrs. Watts said. "Art is weak in the schools, and students could be bused in for art appreciation classes. And the American Association of Retired Persons has suggested that one room be reserved especially for seniors, where they could get their blood pressure checks and while there take advantage of the art classes."

Mrs. Wells, a working artist, has an impressive background to offer the program. A past president of the Stuart Area American Association of University Women, she has taught school for 15 years in Maryland and Florida, and is now teaching art with the Martin County Adult Education program.

She is currently recruiting leaders in business and the arts as directors, to give a comprehensive county wide involvement. People interested in joining the board may contact her by calling 229-1291.

MC Audubon prepares for bird count

Martin County Audubon Society announces that the December program will be held at the Martin County Library in the John Stokes Memorial Room at 1:30 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 14th.

The Program will be presented by Lt. Rehard Roberts, Interpretive Naturalist, of the Florida Park Service. Lt. Roberts will present a slide program on Florida birds. This will be an introduction to Florida birds for newcomers and a review to refresh old hands before the Christmas Bird Count.

On Saturday, Dec. 15th, we will meet by the library at F.I.T. at 8 a.m. for our field trip. This area is one of the best! We will later proceed to other areas for more water birds and land birds. This will be a practice trip also for the bird count. Spotting areas beforehand is an important part of the Christmas Bird Count.

The Christmas Bird Count is an annual affair taking place within a two week period in all fifty states.

This is one of the most important activities of the Audubon Society. If the count drops, scientists can be alerted to some hazard in the environment.

This is an open meeting and guests are welcome.

For further information, call Louise Sheward at 334-2230 or Jean Swift at 334-4764.

BALMY DAY—Winter certainly doesn't keep Floridians away from the beaches as can be witnessed in this balmy Jensen Beach and many residents from surrounding areas came down to enjoy the beach or water sport of their choice. In addition to surfers and sailboaters, fishermen and shell collectors also had a sandy holiday thanks to the mild December temperatures.

Sign up now for Miss Treasure Coast 1980

Applications are now available for the 1980 Miss Treasure Coast Pageant. This is an official sanctioned preliminary to the Miss America Pageant and is open to young ladies who are from 17 to 26 years of age. $2,400 in scholarships and prizes will be awarded as well as the honor of being able to represent the Treasure Coast in the Miss Florida Pageant.

Applications may be picked up at the Chamber of Commerce in Fort Pierce, Port St. Lucie, Stuart, Vero Beach, Jensen Beach and Okeechobee or at the Student Activities Office of Indian River Community College. The deadline for submitting your application is 5:00 PM on Monday, Dec. 17, at the Fort Pierce office of the Chamber of Commerce.

ONE OF THE PRETTIEST birds to be found in these parts is the Great Blue Heron. You can spot them around most any waterway, and they're generally friendly enough to allow you to get fairly close. But once they sense you've invaded their territory, close your ears, because they'll flap away and give out a prehistoric screech that makes you feel like you're a criminal for distrubing them.

Interest exemption planned in Congress

BY CONGRESSMAN SKIP BAFALIS

WASHINGTON – The House just may do the people a favor later this month – and at the same time, give the economy a boost.

The House can do it by granting a $100 per taxpayer exemption for interest earned on savings – or $200 on joint returns.

Not only would this put an end to the ridiculous practice of penalizing those Americans who try to create a little nestegg for the future, it should also serve to encourage more and more citizens to save money.

Just four years ago, Americans saved about 8 per cent of their family disposable income. But, as the pace of inflation outstripped the interest rates, it became less advantageous to practice thrift – particularly since any interest earned was taxed as income.

So, the percentage of family disposable income set aside in savings has declined, from 8 per cent in 1975 to 6.5 per cent in 1978, then to 5.2 per cent early this year, then 4.5 per cent and now finally 4.1 percent.

Yet, while Americans are saving only 4.1 per cent of their disposable income, the British save 13 per cent, the West Germans 15 per cent and even the inflation-riddled Japanese save 25 per cent.

And, why not? Governments in other parts of the world encourage their citizens to save. They know that those savings are vital to a healthy economy.

The dollars that families put in banks, savings and loan associations and other financial institutions then become available for use as loans for business expansions, home mortgages, new equipment purchases – things which are vital if our economy is to grow.

Every expert agrees the low rate of savings is a major factor in the shortage of capital available for business investment in new plants and equipment. And again statistics show the U.S. falling far behind the other industrialized nations. From 1966 to 1976 the U.S. invested 13.5 per cent of its gross national product in plants and equipment, while Japan was investing 26.4 per cent, West Germany, 17.4 per cent, and Great Britain 14.9 per cent.

No wonder they can outproduce us in so many areas.

Would something as simple as a $100 tax exemption per person on interest really mean more money in savings?

Absolutely. One survey showed the $100 per person/$200 per family exemption would mean up to $1.2 billion in increased savings each year, while another study pegged the increase at between $2 billion and $3 billion.

This additional money, when translated into new plants and new equipment, could mean thousands of new jobs.

And, new plants and equipment could make U.S.-produced goods much more attractive overseas, simply by lowering the price to make them more competitive. This, in turn would help our balance of payments situation.

Now, this simple tax break for savers is by no means the solution to all our economic woes. Far from it! But it is a step in the right direction, a step we can take quickly and a step we must take.

We must take it because we must encourage Americans again to practice thrift, because we need to increase the capital available for new housing construction and new business expansion, and because we have a duty to be fair and remove the current tax law bias against savings.

Frim offers free seminars on prevention of crime

It seems we're living in an increasingly violent world, and that muggings, armed robberies and sexual assaults are becoming far too common occurrences even in quiet places like Jensen Beach and Port St. Lucie.

Law enforcement officials are, of course, waging a daily war against violent crimes. But often their time is taken up not with crime prevention, but with after-the-fact investigations of crimes.

A Winter Park businessman saw the need for citizens to learn how to protect themselves better, so they would not become the next victim of a violent crime. So, the businessman, William Brooker, started a company called Operation Crime-Fight.

That was in June, and already, the firm is spread to this area.

The local representative of Operation Crime-Fight is Mike "Sandy" Santagata, a Port St. Lucie resident whose office is at 221 Flagler St., Stuart.

When asked, Santagata will tell you he has crime-prevention devices to sell. But he's quick to add that he has a service to offer the public too. That service is the presentation of crime prevention seminars.

The seminars are open to any group of 10 or more interested citizens. "I'm looking for civic groups, private firms, or any other group of people who are interested in learning how not to become victims of violent crimes," he says. And, he says it's a policy of Santagata says they're based on the use of common-sense precautions to take, rather than the use of heroics that could prove to be more dangerous than effective.

Santagata says he sees a great need in the area for the seminars, and says already there has been a number of requests for them. He recently gave one to a Coegrogate Meals group at Langford Park in Jensen Beach, and he says he is in the process of training another representative to give seminars.

One of the products offered by a firm sponsoring the Operation Crime-Fight program is a small spray container of a non-lethal chemical. Santagata says the spray, called Body Guard, is less dangerous than mace, but just as effective in stopping a would-be attacker. In fact, he says it's also effective on dogs and snakes.

"The seminar is the main thing though. What we're offering is an educational program," Santagata says. He commented that no one attending the seminars is under any obligation to buy anything. And, he says those interested in having a seminar presentation should call him at 283-0188.

Jehovah's Witnesses assembly this weekend

Hundreds of Jehovah's Witnesses from the Treasure Coast area and beyond are attending a two day assembly at the St. Lucie County civic auditorium this weekend.

The theme for the event is titled "Proving Ourselves Faithful Disciples". The program features numerous bible discussions on helping all in attendance remain faithful disciples of Jesus Christ. Highlights of the assembly will be a talk on Sunday titled "Whose Disciples Are You?" The one hour address at 2 p.m. will be delivered by Joseph Sala of The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society. The public is invited and no collection will be taken.

BIG TROUT—Roy Greenwald of Port St. Lucie reeled in this beauty of a trout last week while wading in the Indian River north of Jensen Beach. Greenwald used an artificial plug and caught the fish on 10-pound test line. In recent weeks, the river seems to be as full of fishermen in waders as it is of fish, and Greenwals is proof that some of those fishermen are catching some of those fish.

Investigation of fatal wreck is continuing

Florida Highway Patrol officers are continuing an investigation into circumstances surrounding a fatal accident in Jensen Beach last Friday, but by Tuesday no decision had been made as to whether or a charge would be filed in the case.

Alviedia Borrack, 69, of 4231 N.E. Cheri Drive, Jensen Beach, was killed last Friday when her 1971 Buick stationwagon ran into the rear of a sod truck which had been parked on Sandra Drive.

According to a nearby resident, the car ran under the flatbed trailer of the sod truck.

Florida Highway Patrol troopers Hal Murphy and Lou Erickson report the accident occurred shortly after 6 p.m.

Mrs. Borrack was driving north on Sandra, toward Skyline Drive, and ran into the truck a short time after passing over a dip in the road.

Jon Chicky, who lives nearby, speculated that the woman may not have seen the parked truck until after negotiating the dip, when her car's headlights would swing up onto the portion of the road the truck was parked on. Chicky further stated that he had noticed the truck was parked there around 3 p.m. Friday. Apparently, the truck got stuck, with the trailer portion on the roadway.

The accident report states that the truck was unoccupied at the time of the wreck, but lists the person who had been driving it as Preston Gore of Fort Pierce. The truck owner was listed as Cornelius Albury of Fort Pierce. A spokeswoman for the FHP said the space on the report for the insurance firm covering the truck had "unknown" written in it.

Both FHP troopers who are investigating the accident were off duty and unavailable for comment Tuesday. The accident marks the 26th traffic fatality on Martin County roads this year.

Campbell is C-C president; Warner Tilton is honored

The renovation of the Commercial Street community center was cited as one of the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce goals for the coming year by incoming president Richard E. Campbell, at the C of C installation banquet held Friday evening at the Holiday Inn in Stuart.

The affair brought together 87 Chamber members and guests. Serving as master of ceremonies was Dr. Richard Penick, long-time Jensen resident and close friend of the new president. Penick's humorous introduction of the new president was one of the high points of the evening.

David Deci, another long-time Jensen resident, served as the installing officer. Sworn in along with Campbell were Fred Nettere, vice president; Dr. Stanley Wampler, secretary; and Helen Richardson, executive director. Also taking office, in absentia, were Gene Greenwood, treasurer and past president Jon Chicky.

To serve as directors for the coming year are Arthur Hansen, David Lamb, Ted McCloskey, Marg Paris, Barbara Torow, William Keele III, Fred Meeker, Ron Mitchell, Jayne Petersen, and Richard Zurich.

The invocation was given by Father Jonathan B. Coffey of All Saints' Episcopal Church, who along with his wife Mary were guests for the evening.

A special award was given by the Chamber to Warner Tilton, pioneer builder and business leader in the Jensen community and one of the founders of Martin County.

Campbell, in making the presentation, pointed out that Tilton organized the first Boy Scout troop in the county, and was a front-runner in giving the identity it has today. It was he who, with a group of other area businessmen, built the community center for all organizations wishing to use it, with the stipulation that it always be available for weekly meetings of the Boy Scouts. Tilton was also one of the major proponents in incorporation for Jensen as a municipality.

Campbell capped off the program with a light touch by presenting Dr. Penick with an "award" of a monkey dressed in doctor's garb.

Entertainment for the evening was provided by Magician Don Lea and his wife, who kept the audience amazed with a rapid fire succession of prestidigitation. Lea, a teacher, has been president of the National Association of Magicians.

Christmas issue to be out on Christmas day

The Christmas issue of The Jensen Beach Mirror will be distributed on Christmas day and will carry a Tuesday, Dec. 25 dateline, rather than our normal Wednesday dateline.

The offices of The Mirror will be closed on Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 24 and 25 to allow The Mirror family to spend time with their families. We will reopen for business on Wednesday, Dec. 26.

PICK A PET—Every boy needs a pet, and a lot of grown men do, too. Here are some of the "little people" now available at the Animal Rescue League.

Need a last-minute gift? Try shelter

Have you been scratching your brains for that meaningful last minute gift for your child or pet loving friend? There are bargains galore at the Martin County Animal Shelter.

And thanks to the Animal Birth Control league, that cute pup or pretty kitty can be obtained at bargain prices. All during December, the ABC is paying for the neutering and spaying of pets adopted through the shelter's kennels.

Normally, the adoption fee for a dog is $25, and $15 for a cat. With the ABC's help, the price this month is $15 per dog and $10 for a cat. The animals will be all neutered and spayed and ready for shots at the vet's.

The current crop is a beautiful one – an adorable fawn-colored weimaraner, age 2; several "near pure" breeds, ranging from six months and up, and among the feline populace a snow ball pure white cat with blue eyes. There are pups and grown dogs of every age, all wearing that wistful take-me-home look in their eyes.

For details, give the Animal Rescue League a call. They're open until 4 every afternoon.

Beach renourishment could be too cost prohibitive

Unless the federal government agrees to bear a greater share of the cost for renourishing beaches in Martin County, it appears fewer beaches will be renourished than local officials had once hoped for.

In the early 1970s, a Save Our Beaches fund drive was conducted by scores of local citizens in order to raise money to buy about 10 beach access strips, each about 100 feet wide, along the Martin County portion of Hutchinson Island.

At the time of the fund drive, SOB organizers decided to obtain narrow beach access strips every half mile or so along the beach, rather than spend the money on one or two much wider beach strips. The reasoning behind the decision was that if enough narrow strips were bought, the public would effectively have access to all beaches on the Martin County portion of Hutchinson Island. And, the organizers felt if that were accomplished, the county would be in a good position to qualify for a federal beach renourishment program for the entire county portion of the island.

Recently, however, local officials learned that the amount of local funds required to participate in such a federal program may be too prohibitive.

County Commissioner Frank Wacha said that federal Corps of Engineers officials explained at a recent meeting the the cost of renourishing the martin County portion of the island would be around $10 million. Wacha said the Corps officials told him that if the project is done, the county would be expected to pick up half the tab, and that's a figure which Wacha says is just "too cost prohibitive."

Wacha said the meeting with the Corps officials was just an informational meeting, and that no firm decisions on the project were made. However, he said that the discussions also included a proposal to renourish only the wide Jensen Beach and Stuart Beach strips on the island.

In about six months, there will be a public hearing on beach renourishment proposals, and Wacha said at that time the county will have to decide what course to take. In the meantime, he said, county officials will be studying the proposals to see if a cheaper supply of fill for the beaches can be obtained and to see if the figures can be adjusted to have the federal government pay a larger share of the bill for beach renourishment. "We feel it should be funded as 70 per cent federal and 30 per cent local, rather than 50-50," he said.

The SOB campaign netted a little more than $200,000 in local funds. This was matched by about $280,000 in state funds, then the federal government chipped in a figure equal to the total of the state and local funds. In addition to purchases of beach land, some condominium developers agreed to deed some land to the public while negotiating county commission approvals for their projects.

Others received gift certificates from merchants and meals for two at local restaurants.

Prizes were awarded Saturday night at a cocktail party held by the Freeholders' Association.

Seniors 'got a problem'

BY ERNIE CURWEN

The seniors were talking this week at cardset, and it was mostly about the 5¢ per gal tax on gasoline, and here what some were saying.

"I'm in an awful bind", complained Pete, the owner of a 1972 mini-motor home. "I only get 9 miles per gallon with my wagon, bought it new when there was no gas problem in sight as it was the only way we could afford a trip north each year to visit our family. Now with prices and allowances the way they are, I can't afford to trade, but would like to even if it meant giving up the visit with our family each year, I got a problem".

"You got a problem, well so have I", adds Joe, who also has a mini motor home. "I didn't trade when I had a chance, not the bottom has dropped out of sight on these little gas guzzlers, but soon I will have to trade or give up my senior meals".

"What's meals got to do with gas", asks grungy Fred, "I'd say if gas goes to $2.00 per gallon, you'd need those low cost meals to make both ends meet; that makes more sense, what?"

Joe, then explains, "If gas goes to 2.00, it will cost me .22 cents a mile 'out of pocket' and it is 6 miles each way, so it will cost me $2.64 just to get to the meals. That I can't afford."

"Here's what we should do", contributes Pete, "We should ask to have the rules changed on qualifications to use Treasure Coast Bus, to include those who have to keep their old gas guzzlers".

One of the gals at Congregate meals was overheard saying that she had only received 2 Christmas cards so far and last year at this time she had received over a dozen and wanted to know if others had had the same experience. A little eavesdropping disclosed that 2 or 3 others had had the same experience and found sending cards this year was very expensive.

One told of getting a special brother card, the cheapest was .75 cents and with a .15 cent stamp, came to .90 cents or the price of a decent present a few years ago.

However, they all agreed that, they had cout down a lot this year and not like other years, say they would and then send as many or more than the year before. But, most did say that they were making good use of the cards that could be sent for .10 cents and cost less than .5 cents each, as it was a nice holiday gesture and a good way to keep in touch with old friends.

Treasure Coast Senior Services has a bus in service not to transpore those without cars to the daily congregate meals. It will be in service 5 days a week from 1 to 6 p.m. and when not used for meals, it will be available for trips to doctor's office, etc. Trips must be arranged for (or cancelled) 24 hours in advance by calling the driver.

CHAPTER 10 AARP

BY ERNIE CURWEN
Tel.334-0756

Geraldine Rosier between 1:15 and 2:00 p.m. at 334-1954. Also, weekend trips are planned.

MCCA (Martin County Council on Aging) is to have a new Executive Director January First to take the place of Russ Concern who recently had to resign for problems of health. Mr. George Jacobi will be the new director who has had similar experience working with Gulf Stream Council for the past five years. While on this subject, it is often asked, "Where is that Log Cabin Senior Center?" All that can be said at this time is, "the foundation is in" and 10 log cabins have been moved into place.

CHAPTER EVENTS

Sorry, but your chapter news will be a bit skimpy this week. Your correspondent had a moving problem to another mobile home that interfered with his attendance at most of the local seniors doings. Then, planning to 'catch up' by telephone, he was stymed by telephone bureaucracy, equal to that of Federal Government (request phone transfer by phone a month ahead, told couldn't be done by phone, had to come into office. Came into office, made arrangements, but couldn't give exact date, so made deal to telephone in the exact date a week before move; phoned in and again told, must come to office; went to office and no records could be found, so phone transfer now delayed until Dec. 20.) Therefore, by next week there will be a better coverage of AARP chapter events.

AARP will hold it's annual Installation of Officers, Thur. Dec. 20, 1:30 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church, North River Shores. After the installation by Ass't. State Director, George Schbert, there will be a special fun program and a Christmas Carol sing-a-long. Also, there will be home made cookies for the refreshments.

Membership Chm. Al Tucker and committee of Henrietta Johnson and Nels Johnson report that 14 members joined during November making the total 715 (up from about 600 last summer when the deliquints were dropped). Chapter dues are from Jan 1 to Dec 31, so send your $1.00 per person for your 1980 dues to Treasurer Doris Cass, P.O. Box 1336, Stuart Fla. 33494.

Some folks have encountered burglars recently, that luckily didn't result in any physical harm. When contacted, the Sheriff stressed that bolt locking doors and windows will help and above all don't combat the burglar, goods can be replaced but body injury can lead to permanent injury or death.

If you have Medicare problems, remember there is a new toll free number to use; 1-800-342-7586 (have info. handy when making the call).

A letter was received recently from Expresident of Laconia, N.H. AARP Chapter (one Ex. to another Ex.). Joe Patterson is his name and he has been keeping informed of Martin County doings by Bulletin and News Paper Clipping exchanges, and here are some of his comments.

He says, "Congratulations on your accomplishments" and that we like, as he goes on to say, "Laconia Area Chapter can not report anything like the success you have had".

Theirs is a much older chapter and sounds as though it had run out of steam, as does happen and they realize it, for Joe remarks that the State Director has threatened to cancel their charter and establish a chapter in nearby Bristol where all the action is (Joe lives in Bristol). So, let that be a warning to us, don't drift into the doledrums or some other nearby area will take over.

They are much concerned about inflation, energy, hostages and Joe feels that "National" could do more for the folks back in the 'grass roots' if it would fight inflation on the home front instead of contributing to it by raising prices beyond Presidents guide lines, and sponsoring expensive health programs. Although, Joe does give National credit for its legislation questionnaire to find out at chapter level, what problems the members feel are the most important. Joe was disgruntled when he wrote and said so. But, he always does write an interesting letter, so we hope for one, when skies are brighter up New Hampshire way.

A dream coming true

I stood there, the hot noontide sun beating down on my head and the Peter P. Cobb bridge forming a graceful arch in the background, and I suddenly became engulfed in a great wave of pride for these people surrounding me.

Finally, I told myself, they're arriving.

The occasion was the groundbreaking for the St. Lucie Community Theatre, at long last readying the foundations for a home of its own.

I'd made the trip up to Fort Pierce for the occasion for two reasons: first, because for years I've harbored a maternal feeling for the struggling yet ever-growing group since it was the spawn, in the eye of two young dreamers, back in 1967, and second, because I know that one of SLCT's primary aims is to become a hub (hotbed?) for talents from Jensen and Stuart to Vero Beach. Ultimately it will benefit us all in the cultural and entertainment department.

There was a third reason, unstinted in sheer vanity. A few years back, they made me the only lifetime member and I have an exclusive gold membership card to prove it.

As I let my eyes stray over the faces at the groundbreaking, I saw several more worthy of that gold membership card than I: Wilma Cowles, who has devoted her all, over the years in the Fort Pierce area, to promoting the arts; Bob Tabor, active in the theatre group almost since its inception and one of its most relentless workers; Rene Skripak, beautiful blonde wife of Dr. Richard Skripak, whose artistic talents are equaled by her zeal in making the SLCT grow; banker Bill Brinen, actor-director and practical adviser to the group—just to name a few.

And over there, under the clump of palms—Fred Ferrara, another vintage actor whose son and daughter-in-law were the young dreamers who walked into the News Tribune office, nearly ten years ago, and told me timidly, "We want to start a theatre..."

At first my reaction was "not again." I knew that, over many years, Wilma Cowles and a few other old-timers had been making abortive attempts to organize a little theatre group in Fort Pierce, and with the exception of one, most of them had died on the vine from lack of nourishing interest.

Much as I—lover "regional" theatre, and much as I sought out such ventures everywhere I'd gone, I had developed more of a defeatist attitude toward any dramatic attempts in the little city to the north. True, I told myself, there will always be some who want to patronize it, but you'll never get the moneyed backland people out of their exclusive setting in adequate numbers to support it.

But what the heck, I was a newspaper writer and it was my job to tell the story, however many dead ends it leads us. I took the story of the young Fort Pierce dreamers' original human meeting, reported it, and sat back to wait.

That first meeting drew a crowd of 38, among them the indomitable Wilma Cowles. Before long, I was getting the gossip word about a planned series of performances for the next season.

At first, the community reaction was subject as I had anticipated. If I recall correctly, the infant group opened its first production in a vast auditorium at St. Lucie grew as, parents to stage the plays became harder to come by. As they hung on, and grew, grew.

There was a brief hiatus when Dr. Herriman Beese at Indian River Community College gave them an assured showcase in the Kensinger Student Union, and one of the SLCT members, Bunt Mintz, built an ingenious portable stage which was used in many of the high school productions.

The auditorium now grows and grows. There are talks when we're ready to take it over. But we begin to realize at last.

Plans for the new building were outlined by Tucker of the Thursday groundbreaking ceremony held at the Elsewhere House. When the building is completed, he said, I will be out and a member of the executive group. I will also take Chairman Theatre's research productions, and work in training communities, with the aim training the general Fort Pierce community in the theatre arts.

Other facets of the operation include the community backing and endorsement. I see now several former leaders who gave a large boost to the theatre's Wilma Wheeler Hutchinson, Kent Russel Brewer, city commissioner Dr. Ed Evans, T. T. Lowe and Dorothy Swain. Mann Bell, Dixie Sheppard and Dr. Evans, I'll never end forgetting their interest in what will become the area's cultural showcase.

Congratulations, SLCT, and may your group have a very young and very vibrant perspective 2000 on.

P.S.

Many years ago, Mrs. Cowles named the new auditorium Theatre Wilma Boyd in Fort Pierce, in one of the theatre's seasons, and said it was finally an auditorium she could call her own. There were several Philharmonic. There were several Philharmonic. There were several Philharmonic

Ouch! Quit hitting me

If you have driven through downtown Jensen Beach lately, you've probably noticed a small, slightly crumpled sign in the middle of the road asking motorist to stop for pedestrians.

Each day the portable sign is posted in the middle of the road in front of a crosswalk leading to the Jensen Beach Bank.

The sign is posted to aid pedestrians, many of them from Ocean Breeze Park, in crossing the busy road. And, Jensen Beach Bank officials have said they'd put the sign out in the morning and remove it in the evening.

But so far, the sign isn't working too well. Sometimes motorists just aren't stopping for pedestrians, and on at least two occasions, motorists have run into the sign. So, next time you're passing through, watch for the sign, so you won't hit it—and, while you're at it, please observe it's message.

FIT grads find job market good

The task of matching Florida Institute of Technology graduates with jobs has become a "relaxing" endeavor, according to Hoh Heidinger, the university's director of placement.

Part of the reason is a steady climb nationwide in demand for college graduates with engineering, scientific and business backgrounds, confirmed recently by a college Placement Council survey of employers.

F I T.'s solid technical training and a growing national reputation add to the demand for graduates, Heidinger said.

"It's just so relaxing to know the companies are going to be impressed by the quality of our students," Heidinger said.

The Pennsylvania-based Placement Council recently reported that hiring of graduates would increase 13 percent this spring, based on interviews with 534 private employers. Technical field students would have an easier time finding jobs, the council reported, while liberal arts majors would see a decline in job opportunities from a year earlier.

"Companies need all the engineers on the market, and then some," Heidinger said of F I T.'s recent experience.

Heidinger said increasing employment opportunities follow several years of relatively low demand for technical program graduates that led to a decline in popularity for the programs, and resulted in a shortage of potential employees. "The demand is about two years out of phase with the supply," he explained.

"As an example of the demand, one particularly outstanding engineering student had 31 different interviews and 17 solid offers with an average salary offer of $17,339."

PYRAMIDING

QUESTION: In a course I recently took the term "pyramiding" was used, and I found the discussion quite fascinating. Unfortunately, the notes I took don't indicate specifically what "pyramiding" is. Could you refresh my memory by briefly defining the term "pyramiding?"

ANSWER: "Pyramiding" is a system of investing in real estate wherein the investor constantly reviews his leverages position and in doing so, evaluates the relationship between the equity he has in the property and its total value. An investor who is pyramiding attempts to keep his leverage at the highest safe level which, short of a severe downturn in the market, should produce the highest effective yield on his invested capital.

The investor who is pyramiding will change his investment position once the degree of leverage sinks below an acceptable level. He can do this in one of several ways. He can sell his property and acquire another property with a higher degree of leverage. He can refinance the existing property to restore the leverage to the desired level (converting part of his equity to tax-free cash for reinvestment in another property or properties). Finally, he can utilize a tax-deferred exchange and exchange his equity for another property in a more highly leveraged position.

"Pyramiding" is not for the faint of heart. However, if effectively and correctly used, it can help to produce the highest yield on an investor's capital.

Pickles tourney nets $1,300 for hospital fund

The Martin Memorial Hospital Fund grew by another $1,300 over the weekend, thanks to the "Pickles Golf Tournament" held at Mariner Sands.

Announcement of the gift was made by Dr. and Mrs. Duane Stemle and Dr. and Mrs. Fred Carter, co-chairmen of the Fund Raising Drive and Hospital Ball, to be climaxed in March.

Chuck Nevels, pro at Mariner Sands, worked with the Carters and the Stemles in staging the golf tourney, the 10th annual Pickles event.

Winners were Carl Alfrey of Stuart and Jim Clute of Fort Pierce.

The tournament committee included Lee Nichols, Ed McGavock, Robert Hobson, Walter Hagen Jr., Dr. Richard Skripak, and Dr. Wilford Caldwell. The tourney is named in honor of Lee Nichols, a Naples, Fla. real estate executive whose nickname is, "Pickles." Nichols and the golf committee allotted the entire proceeds of the event to the Hospital Fund.

The funds from the drive will be used to purchase two pieces of medical equipment for the hospital, one a blood pressure Doppler device which measures blood pressure by Doppler soundwave effect. It is particularly useful when the blood pressure of a patient is difficult to obtain, as in the case of shock. The second to be purchased is a Dygamap blood pressure monitoring device, which uses soundwaves to give a continuous readout on a display screen. The latter will be used for anesthesia in surgery and for emergency room use, so that monitoring can be done quickly and accurately while giving medication.

People wishing to donate to the Martin Memorial Hospital Fund Drive may do so by mailing contributions to P.O. Box 627, Stuart, Fla. All donations are tax deductible.

DOROTHY ELLIOTT, right, is a talented painter. However, in recent weeks, it seems she's become known as "the pine needle lady" for her skill in weaving the needles. During an art show staged by the Jensen Beach Art League Sunday, she had a number of weavings on display, and was in the process of making even more. Shown with her is a friend, Leona Karcher.

Jensen Girl Scouts are service-minded

Christmas time shows Junior Girl Scout Troop 84 to be quite service minded.

All the girls are busy making toys for poor children. These toys are little stuffed animals, about 10 inches high. All of them are made by hand, and will be distributed by the Health and Rehabilitation Service Friday, Dec. 21.

Next on the agenda, a group of girls from Troop 84, Jensen Beach, will be singing carols at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 19 at the Stuart Convalescent Center.

Many of the girls also represented the troop at the Stuart Christmas parade last Saturday, and sang many Christmas and Girl Scout songs while marching with all other Girl Scout and Brownie Troops in the area.

Want a tax break today on your retirement savings for tomorrow?

Retirement may seem a long way off. It's never too soon to save for years when you'll be able to enjoy all the things you never had time for.

If your employer doesn't have a pension plan, a Community Federal Individual Retirement Account (I.R.A.) permits you to save $1,500 or 15% of your annual earnings, whichever is less. And this money is tax deductible.

If your spouse is not a wage earner, you can assure your family's future security by depositing an additional $250 per year in your I.R.A. and deduct it from your taxable income.

If you're self-employed, you can contribute to a Community Federal KEOGH plan. This will enable you to save and deduct up to 15% or $7,500 of your annual net earnings, whichever is less.

Your savings build up fast at Community Federal. We pay top interest, up to 8% per year on I.R.A. and KEOGH accounts, then compound interest daily to increase your earnings even more. And you'll pay no taxes on your savings or earnings until retirement — when you're likely to be in a lower tax bracket.

Start today to increase your savings for tomorrow. The sooner you get started, the easier it will be to save the maximum amount and take your full 1979 tax deduction. Visit a convenient Community Federal Savings office for further information.

Blood bank reports donations are needed

The Palm Beach Blood Bank, which is the sole source of blood for the 15 hospitals in Palm Beach, Martin, Hendry and Okeechobee counties, reports that it is experiencing daily shortages in the face of a 15 percent increase in the demand for blood.

A major reason for the increase, says the bank's executive director, Joseph L. Faletra, is the holiday surge of tourists, some of whom require sudden medical treatment which includes blood transfusions. Another factor is the seasonal rise in accidents.

Bank officials are concerned that the calendar will be an added complication this year because the eves of Christmas and New Year's both fall on Monday. The back-to-back long weekends are expected to reduce donor levels even more.

"We're living from day to day," says Faletra. "If it weren't for the repeat donors — three of every four of our donors have given previously — we'd have a constant emergency."

The donation process takes about 30 minutes and may be repeated every eight weeks. Donors can, if they wish, earmark their blood for a particular person or group account.

The spokesman said that under the bank's Family Plan, volunteers who donate a single pint (the body contains an average of 12 pints) can insure that part of any future transfusion costs for themselves and their immediate families will be covered for one year.

Similar plans exist for companies and other organized activities.

Organizations with 30 or more volunteers can also schedule a visit by the bank's bloodmobile, a completely self-contained unit which travels throughout the four-county region as part of the bank's Operation Big Wheel program.

The Martin County blood bank branch is located at 915 East Ocean Blvd. in Stuart. Hours are noon to 9 p.m. Monday and Wednesday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday and Friday, and 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Thursday.

Shareholders approve sale of six banks

Shareholders of First Bancshares of Florida, Inc., approved the sale of six company banks, including Jensen Beach Bank, to Southeast Banking Corporation at a special meeting in Boca Raton last week.

It is expected that the transaction will be completed by the end of the calendar year, Foy B. Fleming, chairman of First Bancshares stated.

In the transaction approved today, the six banks, representing 35 percent of the company's total assets, will become wholly-owned subsidiaries of Southeast. First Bancshares, its three remaining banks and three non-banking affiliates will continue under the name of Gulfstream Banks, Inc. The three remaining banks include the two largest banks in the First Bancshares Group.

The six banks which will join Southeast are First National Bank and Trust Company of Riviera Beach, Citizens Bank ofPalm Beach County, Jensen Beach Bank, First National Bank of Fort Pierce, First National Bank of Palm Beach Gardens and Vero Beach National Bank. These six banks had total assets of $244,985,000, as of Sept. 30.

The three banks which will comprise Gulfstream will be First Bank and Trust Company of Boca Raton, N.A., American National Bank and Trust Company of Fort Lauderdale and Boynton Beach National Bank. These banks had total assets of $457,377,000 of Sept. 30.

Under the terms of the agreement, each shareholder will receive, in exchange for each share of First Bancshares, one share of Gulfstream common stock and approximately one tenth of a share of Southeast preferred stock.

The Southeast preferred provides for annual cumulative dividends at the rate of $4.06 per share and a liquidation preference of $55 per share. It may be redeemed, at the option of Southeast, at any time after five years at a redemption price of $55 per share and will be immediately convertible at the option of the shareholder into 3.75 shares of Southeast common stock at any time prior to redemption.

Southeast is the state's largest bankhold organization, with total assets of $4.4 billion and 60 banking center locations throughout Florida.

Sewall's Point residents have two hours to clean boats

BY CATHERINE FARAGO

The Sewall's Point Town Commissioners, in an effort to soften town regulations while continuing to promote what they feel is the aesthete appeal of the town, have approved revisions of an ordinance that has already been revised seven times since it was originally approved in April, 1963.

The ordinance is comprehensive in its coverage of everything from boats to vans, and specific in its limitations to property owners in exposing them outside their homes.

As defined in the newest proposed revision, boats, vans, trucks and nearly every vehicle that isn't a standard passenger car must be totally concealed from view of any abutting property or street, with a few exceptions. There is a two-hour time period given to property owners in which to clean their boats. Additionally, travel trailers may be left in the driveway three hours before sundown and kept overnight. Visitors of residents may keep their trailer parked for 72 hours within a 30-day period. The latter clause was recently inserted to prevent the almost continuous parked stay of travelling guests. Additionally, a change was made allowing owners to keep their trucks outside if they are being used for some service.

A few additions, such as the inclusion of mopeds, motorcycles, riding lawn mowers and golf carts into the non-passenger category were dispelled by the commissioners, most of whom agreed with Earl Crawford in his belief that to leave them in the ordinance proposal would be a case of overregulation.

A proposed amendment requiring garage doors to be shut to conceal non-passenger vehicles was removed when a resident expressed his concern for asphyxiation when having to work in his garage with the door closed. Discussion arose in an attempt to get around the problem, until Commissioner Clinton Towl said, "I think we're getting overzealous trying to tell people what they can do on their property." Shortly thereafter, that section was stricken from the ordinance.

The mention of the ordinance brought varied comments from Sewall's Point residents. One property owner felt that the regulations were of benefit to the community, and added that people know before they buy what they are getting into. "That's what makes this area nice. If they can afford a boat, they can afford a dock."

Yet another resident wasn't familiar with the ordinance but thought she'd look into it, since she was contemplating buying a boat.

Other residents held a different point of view. One resident complained that it was like playing musical cars when she and her husband had to forever rotate spots everytime he came home with the truck. Feeling that because of the high-priced homes in the area, it's not going to be a case of derelict cars in the driveways. "We won't make a ghetto out of Sewall's Point."

The resident conceded that the regulations may cause a loss of freedom, commenting that "Next, they'll be telling us what Christmas ornaments to use." However, the same resident added, "We've got a good group of commissioners, good intelligent men who are getting a rough time from neighbors who want these ridiculous things."

One home owner simply said "If people move in and don't find anything out about the town, that's their fault."

Others felt that no one was looking to degrade the neighborhood, and if left alone, residents would keep it up.

Concern was expressed about property values falling if ordinances such as this weren't initiated.

Perhaps more interesting than the comments is the fact that no resident would attach their names to any of them. And few, if any, faces seem to be at the town meetings.

Jensen Beach Kiwanis Club hears about electric cars

Bob Scott, owner of Electric City in Stuart, was the guest speaker of the Jensen Beach Kiwanis Club on Monday.

Scott told about the electric car, which has been around longer than most people realize. He helped to organize the Sebring-Vangard Company in Sebring, Florida ten years ago.

The company still manufactures the quiet little cars today. Scott said the cars today are not made for travel on I-95 or the Florida Turnpike but for travel to and from work, to the grocery, laundermat, etc. The maximum range for the cars is about 40 miles with a maximum speed of 38 mph. Many may say the cars are ugly but one half cent per mile to operate makes the car very attractive, he added.

The speakers for the remainder of December will be: on Dec. 24 John Rasmussen, a past Lt. Governor of Kiwanis, will speak about Kiwanian participation during the Christmas season; on Dec. 31, G. Wade Aycock of Aycock Funeral Homes in Stuart and Jensen Beach, will be the guest speaker.

Aycock will speak on the Hospice program that is developing in the Martin and St. Lucie area. He just returned from a week long training seminar in California with six other Martin County residents.

The Jensen Beach Kiwanis Club meets each Monday noon at Poor Bob's Restaurant, Jensen Beach.

Hyline residents seek drainage

Residents of the Hyline Drive area which was flooded severly last month during a torrential downpour got assurances from the Martin County Commission Tuesday that a pump will be reinstalled to drain off more water.

"Last month the heavy rains caused a pond behind Hyline Drive to overflow, flooding a large portion of the road and seeping into at least seven homes. The flooding was so severe that some residents had to move out of their homes and had to boil water from their wells until they were approved for use again by the county Health Department. Septic tanks also backed up.

A pump was installed to pump water from the area over Skyline Drive and into an unpopulated area. That pump removed enough water to clear the road and lawns of water, but Hyline resident Jim Weisberger said it was removed before the pond was restored to its normal level.

Weisberger said he and about 20 other area residents went to the county commission Tuesday to seek a permanent solution to the drainage problem and to seek a temporary resumption of the pumping operation. He said the water in the pond has been rising each day lately and that the water table is now only about six inches below the ground. He noted that a dock he built over the pond was normally about three feet above the pond's water level, but is now covered by water.

"They're working on a long range plan, but they said they're a little lost as to what to do," Weisberger said.

Weisberger said 18 letters from area residents were presented to the commission, asking the commission to solve their problem. He said the commission seemed receptive to their pleas for help, and said he has asked state Representative Chuck Nergard to aid in seeking a solution.

Although Weisberger said some persons complained that resuming the pumping operation would mean a resumption of noise from the pump and a resumption of an obstacle (the hose) across their driveways, he said the commission was asked to resume the pumping for three or four weeks. He said the commission agreed to resume the pumping for awhile.

Question of the week

RAY SWARTLING

"People are getting more nasty with one another. I would hope that we may have a Christmas where peace would be all over the world."

BOB BEVERSTOCK

"I would hope we could trust the people we have governing. We'd go a long way towards solving the problems then. We all feel we have a bunch of crooks in Washington."

DAVID BEAM

"My hope would be that kids have more in the future. The way things are going now, they won't be able to afford anything."

ROSE DiBELLE

"If there weren't so much greed, there wouldn't be nearly the problems. It has to give somewhere."

One more link to bike path

One more tiny link in what is hoped will eventually be a full-scale network of bicycle paths in the Jensen Beach area has recently been completed.

A sidewalk/bikepath was built along Palmer Street from Indian River Drive up the hill to the parking lot entrance to Florida Institute of Technology dormitories.

County commissioner Frank Wacha said that in conjunction with the new section of bikepath, a third lane of Palmer, extending from a point near the college to SR 707 opposite Jensen Lanes, will be restriped to reinforce its designation as a bikepath. Wacha said bicyclists "can go from the college to the Langford Park area now," and expressed hope that eventually the bike system will be much longer.

FTI officials have said they'll donate right-of-way for a bike path in front of the college, along Indian River Drive. But for bikers to get into the downtown Jensen Beach area or to the beach, the county will either have to buy or receive donations of right-of-way in numerous other spots.

County Administrator Ed Strube said at a recent Jensen Beach Kiwanis meeting that he has posted a map of bike path proposals for the county in a conference room at the County Administrative Center.

When planning a trip, there are some vital questions to verify with your travel agent. If you are planning a trip which is part of a package deal, one that includes hotel, transportation, restaurants, etc., be sure to ask whether the price includes all costs of transportation and transfers. Ask whether you will be taking a bus, ship, plane, or train. Ask if the cost entitles you to travel tourist or first class. Ask if assistance will be provided if help is needed with your luggage. It is important to fully understand what you are paying for to preclude being shortchanged and inconvenienced.

Cadette scouts add international flavor to social graces

BETH NEWMAN displays a pienata she constructed for the Girl Scout Cadette Troop 255 international banquet last Thursday. Beth studied Mexico as her assignment for the banquet, and made the pienata as a centerpiece. After the dinner, the girls blindfolded each other and took turns trying to break open the pienata. It proved to be quite a task.

CARRIE JONES displays a Chinese garden she made as a centerpiece for an international banquet she participated in last Thursday. She and other members of Girl Scout Cadette Troop 256 cooked and served foods from a variety of nations.

WHACK—Michelle Prekup unleashes a mighty whack against a pienata during an international banquet hosted by Girl Scout Cadette Troop 255 last week. It took a number of direct hits to break open the paper mache donkey and unleash the candy inside.

Members of Girl Scout Cadette Troop 256 faced and met several social challenges with flying colors last week.

As part of their work on an International merit badge, Cadette members hosted an International Banquet at the Langford Park clubhouse last Thursday. And, the girls showed their parents and invited guests that they know the meaning of being a "perfect hostess."

Each girl was on her best behavior during the banquet, remembering to extend an invitation to this reporter to join them for dinner, remembering to serve their guests and parents first, and remembering at all times to be polite and cheerful as they conducted a program for the entertainment of the parents and guests.

"The girls have to pass four challenges as Cadettes before going on to become senior scouts, and this banquet was one of them. As a part of the banquet, the girls have several social challenges to meet," explained assistant troop leader Annabel Bower. The troop is for girls in grades seven through nine from the Jensen Beach, North River Shores area.

As a part of their assignment, each girl selected a foreign country to study. The girls each cooked a dish native to the country they selected, and also made table centerpieces representing the nation selected. For example, Carrie Jones, who selected China, cooked chop suey and made a Chinese garden for a centerpiece. Leslie Lyon cooked up a delicious lasagna, and Beth Newman made a Mexican pienata.

Parents and guests could hardly find room on their plates for all the scrumptious food, and when dinner was over, each girl displayed their centerpiece and spoke briefly about some of the customs on the country they selected.

Beth Ann Bower, Michelle Prekup and Leslie Lyon, all members of the Stuart Middle School band, gave an instrumental performance of several tunes, including a medley of Christmas songs.

Then, the pienata was strung up and the girls, as well as several younger guests, took blindfolded swats at the donkey full of candy. The pinnata proved to be well constructed, and gave up its sweettooth treasures only after the girls removed blindfolds and did some serious batting.

Story and photos by Bob Fryer

For parents and guests, the eveing was delightful, and for the girls, the banquet proved to be as much educational as it was fun.

A BIT OF WALES—Beth Ann Bower displays a centerpiece she made for the Cadette Troop 255 International banquet last week. Beth made a model of two Welsh homes in a field, and added a babbling brook just for good measure. For the banquet, she prepared a delicious Welsh rarebit.

INTERNATIONAL MENU—Food from various countries was featured during a Girl Scout Cadette Troop 255 banquet last week. There was lasagna, Swedish meatballs, Welsh rarebit, sauerdraut and kielbasa, Polish golumpki, and chop suey on the menu, and it was all delicious. Cadettes shown above, serving their guests, are Heidi DeMers and Nancy Wright.

the first half for Angelo's tied the game at 1-1, and Chad Backer's score kept Angelo's deficit at one, 3-2, at halftime. But the winners outscored Angelo's, 4-0 in the final thirty minutes to insure the runaway victory.

Another lopsided Upper Division winner was PW & Sons, who stomped Carpet Corner, 7-1. William Massey was the only player that scored for Carpet Corner — PW & Sons' goal scorers were not reported.

Ken Gary provided a hat trick for Certified in their Middle Division victory over TNT Appliances, 3-1. Gary was responsible for all three netted shots for Certified, while Kirk Haynes' goal in the first half prevented a shutout, and, for seven minutes, at least, tied the score, 1-1.

Mark Dieffenbach shocked everyone with a goal in the early moments of the Bandy-Fran Con game, giving Bandy a 1-0 lead. It was the first goal scored against Fran Con this year, but the lead didn't last long.

Laurie Henry scored twice before halftime to regain the advantage for Fran Con, and Brian Polhemius and Clark Collins provided the three-goal cushion for the winners with their second-half goals.

Rinaldi in Junior Orange

BY DONNIE WILKIE

Jensen Beach junior tennis phenom Kathy Rinaldi will make her second major 14-under appearance of the 1980 season this weekend, playing in the Junior Orange Bowl Tournament in Coral Gables, Florida.

Rinaldi, still only 12 but forced by USTA rules to play in the 14-under catagory, is the tourney's top-seeded American, third overall behind number one Lillian Drescher of Venezuela and second-seeded Irena Petru, of Czechoslovakia. Niege Diaz is fourth.

It was not clear at press time who Rinaldi would be paired against in her first match, but her father, Dennis, told The Mirror that he had received word from tournament officials that Kathy would not play until Wednesday afternoon's second round, receiving a bye in the morning opening round.

Rinaldi, sporting a strong baseline game, advanced to the semi-finals in her first tournament this season, the United States 14-under Indoor Championships, before losing in three sets to Lisa Bonder. Bonder will not play in the South Florida event this weekend.

The Orange Bowl final will be played next Monday, December 24, with the semis scheduled for the previous day, Sunday. Coral Gables' Salvador Park is playing host to the tournament, which in all junior divisions annually draws some of the world's top players.

Volleyball

for tremendous showdown of super-powers for a crack at some AAAA district competition.

"There was too much pressure in those (Central-Carroll) games. When we played this year, it was like the world championship was at stake. That's too much to ask."

Both Nixon and MCHS' Robins were upset at the All-Sun East selections, made by the conference's coaches. Since six of the eight schools are in the West Palm area, some of the Connection's players were overlooked, whether by accident or choice.

"It hurt me," said Nixon. "They (Central's girls) worked so hard, especially Dedra Burgess. I thought she deserved it as much as Anita (Pratt)."

Instead, both Pratts (Anita and Priscilla) were selected for the second team, while Werner was left out of everything. Jessica Nye of Martin County was voted to the first team.

"Jessica thought it was nice, but when she saw what happened to Susan she thought it was meaningless," remarked Robins. "Hey, the kids know who's good. They realize that, and she knew Susan was a better player."

Robins also agreed coaching was a factor in the Connection's success, saying "Toler and Nixon do a super job up there."

"I didn't vote in the Post's All-Area, because after the way we were treated in All-Conference, I didn't think it would matter," added Robins. "In the conference, I picked Julia (Nixon) as Coach of the Year."

It was Nixon's only vote. Robins also received a vote from Nixon. Lake Worth-Leonard's coach received the conference award.

"I think they (the six PBC coaches) get together before we get there and decide," said Nixon. "That's alright, though. I've got my motivation for next year. I don't want to just beat them. I want blood on the court."

The Connection is ready for war.

Central escapes the Keys with their perfect mark still intact

Wilbert Washington scored 23 points and grabbed 16 rebounds while teammate Mike Tommer popped in 19 and snagged 19 rebounds, but it took a last-period stand by the visiting Fort Pierce Central Cobras to preserve a 64-55 victory over Key West.

The undefeated Cobras controled the game's tempo from the opening tap, running their lead to as high as 13 points before the Conchs caught fire in the fourth quarter.

"We were able to set the pace of the game," remarked Central head coach Bill Wright after his team's eighth win. "That's just what we wanted to do. We didn't want them to run on us. When they did, they were scoring points."

Key West boasted the strongest reputation of a Central opponent thus far, having ripped Martin County, 86-73, a week earlier in Stuart.

Washington scored eight points in the first period, and tallied 14 in the first half, as the Cobras took a 14-11 lead after the first eight minutes and expanded it to 30-25 at the intermission.

But with 5:38 remaining, the Central leading 47-36, things began to happen.

Elliot Bacon, who led Key West scorers with 21 points, hit a shot to make it 47-38. Then, after a missed shot and a turnover by the Cobras, he drove through the lane for a layup, making it 47-40.

Washington came back with a 10-foot jump shot, but Kevin Lewis' layup kept the Conch deficit at seven, with 3:57 to go. Lewis connected on a free throw after Washington was assessed a technical foul, and Peterson added two more freebies after the Cobras' Luther Sandifer fouled out, with 3:45 left.

Now showing signs of panic, Central failed to get the ball inbounds in the alloted five seconds, giving Key West the ball with 3:16 remaining. Bacon missed a 20-footer, but after Toomer missed a one-and-one free throw at the other end, Bacon scored on a layup, making it 49-47.

Then, suddenly, as quickly and unpredictably as the Conch rally began, it faded. Washington threw one in to give Central some air, 51-47, and Redden restored the Cobras' normal heartbeats with a pair of clutch foul shots.

"It's time for a rest. This has been our goal from day one, to go 8-0 until the tournament, and we've done that. Now we can sit back for a few days...before setting a new goal."

—Bill Wright

"It's time for a rest," declared Wright after the game. "This has been our goal from day one, to go 8-0 up until the tournament, and we've done that. Now we can sit back for a few days and rest before setting a new goal for ourselves."

Martin County 84 Glades 79

The Tigers overcame a combined 51-point performance by Glades Central's Sam Anderson (30) and Ernest Bussie (21), opening up a 24-point lead in the third quarter, then coasting in from there.

Gregg Sprauer's turn-around jumpers and strong inside play highlighted a 24-point night, especially encouraging after the 6-3 senior's poor showing against Key West.

Martin County, carrying a 13-point edge into the second half, scored 15 of the first 19 third quarter points, leading 64-40 with 2:39 remaining in the period, before the 0-4 Raiders began their comeback attempt.

The Tigers began to substitute freely midway through the final canto, but were forced to send the starting five back into the game with 16 seconds left. Glades scored 18 of the game's final 22 points.

"We were concerned with how we would play after a loss," said Martin County coach Don Wallen, "but they responded real well. It was an intense physical game, but we didn't back away. Our reserves loused things up toward the end when they started giving the ball away — some of that can be expected (because of inexperience), but we don't expect a total collapse."

olden South remains grounded

South Airline of Fort Pierce ...d and may remain that ...ssible. ...s it was announced that the financially-troubled airline may be reorganized, with Fort Pierce businessman Dan Darling taking over the airline.

...RIBBEAN CRUISE—Terry Tealey of Adventures Unlimited Travel in Stuart ...d Ben Martinelli of Jensen Beach Travel recently sailed out of the Port of ...tal aboard Holland America's ship, S.S. Volendam on a Caribbean ...ellarization cruise.

SL Lucie County commissioners were presented with plans for the reorganization and expressed hope that the fledgling airline could resume flights. Golden South began commuter flights to several large airports last February, but its planes have been grounded since November as a result of financial problems.

When Darling's offer was made to take over the airline and get it back in the air, it was explained that the offer was contingent on an examination of Golden South's fiscal condition. That examination was recently completed, and a public relations firm working for Darling announced late last week that based on the examination, the offer to take over the airline was being withdrawn.

Two stockholder lawsuits were cited as specific reasons for the offer being withdrawn.

Darling himself filed a suit against Golden South earlier this year, seeking payment for work one of his firms did on the Golden South planes. It was presumed he would withdraw that suit if he took over the airline.

A spokeswoman for The Communications Group, which is handling publicity for Darling, said that it appears Darlings offer to acquire Golden South will remain withdrawn as long as there are legal problems, but she said if those are resolved, Darling would still be interested in taking over Golden South.

A call was placed to Golden South Tuesday and a recorded message stated that the phone number had been disconnected. Attempts were made to reach Golden South's president, Steve Alex, and the airline's chairman of the board, Dr. Ron Gruber, on Tuesday, but those efforts were unsuccessful.

Warmer weathers encourage anglers

BY DONNIE WILKIE

As the cool breeze moves in, the fishermen move out. As the warm air moves in so do the fishermen.

So naturally, when the semi-cold spell moved through the Jensen Beach and Port St. Lucie areas last week, area anglers either bundled up, or took refuge in their warm homes.

The diehards that stayed out watched helplesly as the excellent trout fishing near the St. Lucie Nuclear Plant slowly died off. But the waders, at last check (The Mirror had an early Christmas deadline), were beginning to get back out on the river, and near the four spots that were the hottest just two weeks ago - Little Mud Creek, Big Mud Creek, Herman's Bay and the area on the west bank of the river, just north of Walton Road. Both "creeks" are just north of the plant, near the island, and the Herman's Bay is south of the plant, also near Hutchinson Island.

"We're still getting some trout," said local fishing expert Tom Stewart. "But it's nothing like it was a couple weeks ago. And now we've got some blues beginning to show up in the surf. I don't know, it's very hard to tell right now what will happen in the next week or so."

Ed Wagner, Sandy Adair and Pete Baker certainly didn't feel that the trout fishing was off. They brought back 17 trout from their spot near the power plant, after using a gold Tony-spoon.

Ed Ahrens wasn't complaining, either. He bagged seven trout while wading in the river, using a 7-m-Gold mirrolure. Ted Van Buren wasn't quite as lucky, but he still managed a couple of trout catches, one of which weighed in at 5½ pounds, at Herman's Bay. He was using trout touts.

Some people expected an all-out local war when the Tony-spoon first became popular. Though it costs more, most of the anglers will tell you they like it better than touts. But instead of choosing between the two, many of them are using both- and getting good results both ways. Don Weber did that last week, netting a trout and an eight-pound snook, off the Jensen Bridge on touts and the Tony.

Back in the river, Bob Haines and Ray Dittel added six trout to their collections, using live shrimp; Charlie Kessler claimed a trout and a channel bass, fishing with touts in the river.

L.M. Roberts sacked a four-pound bluefish, as well as a two-and-a-half pound croaker, off mackerel in the St. Lucie Inlet. His partner throughout the day's fishing was George Hindman. Mike Kalafut scooped up four weakfish, casting off the Jensen Bridge with live shrimp. And Roy Pope and Art Ryan combined for a nine-trout day in back of a local bait shop in Jensen Beach, in the Indian River. They used live shrimp.

Bob Emens robbed the river of 15 trout, near Herman's Bay, using a Tony-spoon. Tiny Lofgren landed two snook and a trout at the same location, using a 7-m-18 series mirrolure. Meanwhile, Jack Prell and John Germano were busy bringing in eight trout, from the Indian River. They also used the gold Tony-spoon.

Lance Winner and Scott Gallivan matched the Prell-Germano output with eight trout of their own, nabbed in the river on the gold Tony. Roy Greenwald fooled four trout, one of which weighed in at four pounds, fishing in the river on the west bank near Walton. He used a mirrolure.

Jack and brother Frank Eiler pulled in a six-and-a-half pound snook, 20 snappers, a trout and two weakfish, all in a day's fishing in the river, with live shrimp.

On the blue front, Vi Terpening caught a four-and-a-half pounder loitering in the surf. She used cut mackerel. Rock Hill got four blues, Jim Cale turned up three and John Bowman topped them all with nine, they were all in the surf, all using mackerel.

Finally, there was a whopping offshore catch reported last week.

Fed Sanders, who along with Captain Hal Siegel and Fred Moller were manning "The Six Pack," nailed a 52-pound wahoo while using a ballyho with a red and white skirt.

Temperatures (highs, lows and rainfall) for this shortened-by-deadline week follow, as well as the tides for the St. Lucie and Fort Pierce Inlets for the upcoming week.

[illegible] the Constitution [illegible] 85 percent value [illegible] tax purposes [illegible] the counties with [illegible] lower valuations are [illegible] in the backs of all other [illegible]

We feel that the state should begin at the bottom of the list, forcing the under assessed counties to do the job before going to those who are already above the norm.

While we do not like to see any county resist a state law, we do feel that Malfregeot has a proper complaint.

Perhaps it would be just to have the Florida Legislature address the problem in its next term, devising a fair and just formulae to bring all the counties into compliance with the Constitution.

Looking into the cost

No one seems to remember the impact phase of passing [illegible] in the Florida Legislature or in Congress. It is a viable and important thing.

Impact is what happens after a bill is passed.

More than half the cost of an automobile now is the result of Congress requiring auto makers to put this or that on a car.

Much of the cost of building a home is tied into what is required to build that home. The present energy code passed by the Port St. Lucie City Council should increase the cost of a house.

If the city wants it that way, that is fine, but all should realize that the cost of the home is going up.

We have mentioned before that everyone should realize that gaining the preservation of the Jensen Savannas would cost money. It is estimated that it will cost each Martin County taxpayer one dollar to make up the $50,000 lost in tax revenues for just the portion of the Savannas in that county.

We feel that it is a good investment, and so do most of the taxpayers. But, it is important that the people know what the effect of such an acquisition for the public is going to be in dollars.

People can be protected too much.

Sally Latham

Christmas memories

What does Christmas mean to me? When I was a child, for as far back as I can remember, Christmas meant a fireplace.

I thought everyone had to have a fireplace to have Christmas. Otherwise, how could you hang up your stocking — decorate the Adam mantel with the Nativity scene — or throw that powdery stuff on the fat pine logs to make them magic with sparks of every Christmassy hue?

Christmas was awakening before dawn to the crusse of the Sugar Plum [illegible] dancing her way through the Nutcracker Suite. It was tippy-toe-ing down the stairs with its curved bannister and into the big living room dwarfed by the giant, twinkling tree sitting protectively like a mother hen over a burgeoning brood of presents.

Christmas was taking down our stockings, mysteriously filled over night with lovely lumpy things like apples and grapes and candies into candy before breakfast" and ankle socks and chestnuts. And always a silver dollar in the toe.

After breakfast came the opening of gifts. We had to take turns, each unwrapping a gift, neatly folding the pretty paper, and writing down who it was from. So many of them emerged from big brown wrapped boxes [illegible] aunts and uncles from afar, and we had to have the list in order to write those thank you letters.

Christmas then meant [illegible] putting on that new dress, the new pair of skates, of dragging out the sled from Santa, to run around and show all the other kids in the neighborhood our newly acquired loot. And if snow was on the ground, as it usually was, Christmas meant [illegible] over, on the Green and building a Snowman, so we could deck him out in a suit of Christmas ribbons.

Of such stuff are childhood Christmases made — the singing of carols, and of welcoming [illegible] carol groups containing many of the [illegible] that had bedevilled us on Halloween; such a short time ago! — of attending services at the little St. Paul's Episcopal Church across the corner to worship the Babe with a Happy Birthday to Jesus.

Childhood Christmases are forever.

As I grew older, married and had my first born son only three months old, Christmas took on a new dimension. The tree wasn't quite a big, and the presents underneath vastly reduced in number. But in many ways it was the richer by far because I had begun to learn that Christmas is more for giving than for receiving.

And around the tree, I learned in the first time, there's supposed to be a toy train running at full clip. Billy daddy liked to pretend the train was his present to his son, but I learned early on that its sole function was for Daddy's entertainment. All through the day, and until the tree came down after New Year, Daddy could be found on his hands and knees, unscrambling train wrecks and re-setting track. I shouldn't have been surprised. Daddy came from a railroading family, and trains ran through his bloodstream.

There were happy Christmases, hectic Christmases, and sad times. The hardest one to keep in a cheerful mood was the one which son Robin somberly viewed the scene from his place on the couch. Two months before, he'd come within an ace of losing a leg in a bare accident. There were still tears dampening our smiles. But our thanks to God were most profound that year that our son still had two legs — a Christmas present from the Almighty.

Some Christmases have been sad, but never lonely. Like the one at Chautauqua when I got home from work to find myself snowed in. My tree and I shared our Christmas cookies with a backyard full of squirrels, birds, and a raccoon or two.

Whatever your circumstances wherever you are, you are always remembered in good company, as long as you have the Newborn Babe in your heart.

God's blessings. Merry Christmas and Happy Hanukkah to every one of you.

One of my nicest Christmas greetings comes from an unexpected source. Eileen Rice of the Lodge on the Green out on U.S. 1, responds to my last column about the sad demise of my beloved brother-in-law:

"I read with a great deal of interest your column of your brother-in-law's death, and I mourn with you his loss," she writes. "We often shopped at the Davis Department Store in Addison, N.Y. We owned a 118 acre farm between Risingville and Addison, and our shopping sprees in Addison were something special.

"My husband was an architect, and ill health during the 40s moved us to New York State from Michigan, and as his roots were Pennsylvania and New York State, it was a natural to buy in that area. His great-great grandfather, Samuel Rice, started the first sawmill in Addison after the Revolutionary War.

"Your love for the vineyard country of Lake Keuka is shared by me. It is a beautiful country up there. I do miss the hills and trees, but we must count our blessings — rather the sunshine than the cold, cold north.

Bless you, Eileen. Our hearts — and heating systems — are on the same beam.

A Christmas gift list

Here it is — just four shopping days before Christmas and all I have is three presents that I packed out in panic as I was delivering newspapers. Now the real panic begins.

However, my typewriter is poised, and I will give some presents to my friends through this column.

To Dr. Penick, a Joe Miller joke book that will give him material newer than the stuff he used on me at the Chamber of Commerce banquet.

To Ransom Tilton, a promise that I will play tennis on Wednesday nights after the season is over.

To Jack Sheridan, my plaid sportcoat that he liked so much, and the pair of socks he plans to give me.

To Ed Kepp, a name tag to wear at cocktail parties.

To Donald "The Fox" St. Onge, a set of stilts to lessen the weight when I carry him on the tennis court.

To R. K. "Giraffe" Jones, an evaluation of what sport he really would be good at.

To Bill "Animal" Robson, a sewing eye dog.

To Jim "Possum" Rowe, a new pair of legs that will last beyond six sets.

To Joe "Snake" Taylor, dark glasses to reduce the glow at night.

To Roger "Spider" Garramore, a razor and shave cream.

To Roger "Llama" Butler, a mental calendar that would remind him to return things he borrows.

To Bill "Cat" Hawkins, a set of steel drums and a weekend in Freeport.

To Tom "Gorilla" Burns, a forehand.

To Tom "Rabbit" Thurlow, wrist bands to match his tennis hats.

To Bud "Road Runner" Jordan, a backhand.

To John Jorhem, one set of tennis that he can win.

To Tom Fallenburg, lights aplenty for the rest of the tennis courts at Indian River Plantation.

To Salli, a right arm that doesn't hurt.

To Bob Fryer, patience.

To Michelle Naspinsky, humility.

To Sall Latham, continued improvement.

To Peg Meissner, a halo for being nearly a saint.

To Ralph and Fran Evinrude, the grateful thanks of an entire community for their many good works on behalf of our town and college.

To Al Martin, health and happiness.

To Allen Holley, a large jar of Maalox.

To Tim, and Muncho, the strength to continue what they have been doing.

To Art Hansen, someone to help him carry newspapers.

To Marj Paris, a four-foot telescope.

To Matt Butera, a shirt like mine.

To Barbara Toros, the time to do all the things she is trying to do.

To Frank Wacha, a bulkhead for the causeway.

To Bud Bagwell, the resolve not to cheat on his diet.

To Maggie Hurchalla, a bouquet for being a good chairperson of the commission.

To Tom Higgins, a short speech on the inlet.

To John Holt, an extra finger to hold in the dike.

To John Santarsiero, Sr., the patience to enjoy what he has earned.

To Bob Coy, a revolution somewhere for him to fight.

To Ed Glackler, a chicken coop.

To Marvin DeBolt, an extra ton of newsprint.

To Chuck Nergard, passage of a millage rollback bill.

To Norris Tilton, two hours of ringing the Salvation Army bell.

To Charlie Porter, a wall to keep The Mirror on the ball.

To Al Hendry, contracts signed for the new shopping center.

To Helen Richardson, the patience to work with me in the new Chamber of Commerce year.

To Fred Nettere, a morning announcer who stays.

To Joe Lacuano, a new fire house on South Savanna Road.

To Roland Merrell, four new crab traps and a story on how he cleans crabs.

To Bill "Farmer" Taylor, another cap for his collection.

To Travis Campbell, renewed resolved to fight the system.

To Ernie Curwin, completion of his book.

To my sister, Pat, a visit to Jensen Beach.

And, to everyone, everywhere a very merry Christmas.

Bob Fryer

If Thursday is Monday, this must be Jensen Beach

Dick Campbell looked at me smugly on Thursday and reminded me that it's really a Monday.

At least this Thursday, Dec. 20, and next Thursday are Mondays.

That's because we're putting together our Christmas and New Year's issues together on Friday — a task normally reserved for Tuesdays. So, in terms of putting out the paper, the two Thursdays are Mondays.

Normally, by Mondays, our columns have to be in. And just as I'd know he expected the normal schedule to be kept, Dick pointed to his typewriter and casually mentioned that his column was nearly completed.

I'm giving Christmas gifts in my column. You can do anything with yours this week, but just be sure you get it in today," he said.

Now, some of you careful column readers may have gleaned the obscure fact from a few of my previous columns that I hate writing them — at least on the weeks when I'm at a loss for things to write about. So far, there have only been 51 of those type weeks this year.

My first inclination was to copy Dick by composing a list of gifts I'd like to give for Christmas. Of course, I wouldn't think of stealing his idea. But the notion of doing just that spawned a few Christmas thoughts.

A set of bike paths for Jensen Beach, freedom for the hostages in Iran, blizzards for the North and warm tropical breezes all winter long for us Floridians came to mind as gifts I could omnipotently bestow.

And, I figured if I did give gifts, I could give humorous ones, like a season ticket to the Georgia Tech football games for my friend Louise at Susie's Ice Cream Parlor, who lives under the delusion that just because the Georgia Bulldogs have outscored the Yellow Jackets for the past two years, they have a better team.

Or, I could give Dick Campbell an honorary membership in the Stuart Martin County Chamber of Commerce.

Salli Campbell, our bookkeeper and Dick's wife, would get a set of right arm barbells, and an interior decoration manual, so she won't have to have such drab colors in her new home when it's built.

I could give Peg Meissner, our general manager, a quadraphonic tape recording of Sports Editor Donnie Wilkie's sniffings, and give Donnie a similar recording of Peg's Tuesday night "constructive criticisms," just so he'll have something besides his radio to listen to on cold winter nights.

Mary Meissner, one of our ad salespersons, could have a tape recording of me chewing the entire contents of a 10 pound bag of ice cubes, or a recording of her son, Aaron, running his fingernails over a blackboard. Both sounds produce the same joyful response from Mary.

Michelle Naspinski, our Port St. Lucie reporter, could have an exclusive interview with Jimmy Hoffa on the threat of organized crime in Port St. Lucie.

Sally Latham would get an "Introduction to Journalism" text, as we all know she's just a novice in the profession, and needs all the help she can get in learning how to write.

Jean Morgan, who keeps the files on our subscribers, would get a list of 10,000 new ones, each with special requests for delivery.

Rose Washburn, our soft-spoken classified ad manager, would get a megaphone so we could hear her better around the office. And, as a bonus, she'd get a copy of Steve Mitchell's "How to Speak Southern." Michelle would get one of those too.

John Jamison, head typesetter, would get a year's supply of Wilkie's box scores, all to be set in six point type.

Of course, my list, were I to stoop so low as to copy Campbell and write one, should have gifts for all members of our staff. But we've got so many new ones around this place that I'm at a loss for ideas of gifts to them. Perhaps our newcomers, Karen Hand, Elaine Young, Ann Conklin, Liz Brothers, Lisa Brutell, John Urban, and Charlie Fracapane, should all have straight jackets, because if they were sane when they got here, it won't last for long.

Though they're not on our staff, there are a few others I would give gifts to. For Jos Chicky, I'd give a year's supply of ERA bumper stickers, while Frank Wacha would get a full head of hair, as he can remove his "Bald is Beautiful" bumper sticker from his van. And, for all you folks who never return my phone calls, a busy signal every time you dial.

Merry Christmas.

Letter to the editor

To the Editor:

I sometimes wonder if area residents realize how fortunate we are to have the services of "911."

This fact was brought to bear when my wife and I a short time ago, about 3:15 a.m. our telephone rang. It was a call from our next door neighbor. She had been ill for a few days, had gotten up, felt faint and had fallen. We rushed over to help. Telephoned "911" and within 5 minutes two medics arrived. Almost immediately diagnosed the injury as a broken ankle. Within minutes the patient was on her way to hospital.

In addition to the speed and efficiency with which the men worked, I was greatly impressed with the considerate treatment and bedside manner exhibited.

I'm extremely glad to know that we have the advantages of "911" in this area.

Sincerely,
Cy Edwards

Martin Co. United Way goes well over goal

Martin County United Way had reason to celebrate at its ...y dinner held Wednesday ...g at the Holiday Inn Oceanside. ...al of $145,000 was overshot by ...than $15,000.

...l total announced Wednesday by ...ign chairman Dick Harman, ...ant administrator of Martin Memorial Hospital, was $157,282, but it's still coming in," he said Thursday. He anticipates a total of nearly $60,000.

The United Way supports 12 agencies which serve the people of Martin County, including such ones as the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, the Visiting Nurses, the Jensen Area Samaritans, Tri-County Rehabilitation Center, and several others.

The budget committee had already alloted funds to each agency on the basis of the $145,000 goal.

"Since we did exceed the goal," Harman said, "it means we will have a couple of the agencies back in to review their requests. One may mean the establishment of a local office for the Children's Home."

The adoption agency now has headquarters in Palm Beach, which means that applicants must go there to make contacts. Harman hopes that the extra money will make this no longer a necessity.

Some 60 people attended the victory banquet, which was emceed by Hamp Elliott and Jay Norman of WSTU.

Guest speaker was Bill Wallace, president of First Federal of Martin County. He commented on the growth and potential of the county, and related them to the projected expanding needs.

...TA came to town last Saturday, and rode on a Jensen ...h Fire Department truck instead of a sleigh. He's ...n above greeting three children who came out to tell ...their Christmas wishes. Pictured above, from the left, are, Lisa Collins, Kathy Mulligan, and Pat Mulligan. Hoss Hand did duty Santa, and his daughter-in-law, Karen, was his helper.

Dear Santa,

How are you doing? I am doing good. Will you come to my house on Christmas? I want a pair of red, white and blue skates. Will you bring me a barby doll set? And a sleeping bag? Guess what! I am going on a trip on Christmas it is going to be fun, because we can ride a sled down the big snowy hill's. It will be fun but cold. If you come to my house on Christmas, I will give you some cookies and milk and my Christmas list.

Solar film, talk on January 2

Designing your home to take advantage of solar energy is the topic of a new film to be shown for the first time in the area at the January 2 presentation of "First Wednesday" at 8 p.m. in the Environmental Studies Center auditorium.

"Sun Builders" describes how best to design, build and site your home to capitalize on so-called "passive" solar energy as opposed to expensive mechanical heating and cooling systems. The film was released by the Department of Energy earlier this month.

Comments on local applications of the techniques shown in the film will be made by Jon Hillen, who will be teaching an adult education course entitled "Energy Conservation in the Home" starting the following week. Hillen is a member of the board of directors of Free Energy, Inc., a local educational group furthering alternative energy systems.

The public is invited to attend. There is no admission charge.

Bait available during holidays

BY DONNIE WILKIE

If you're looking for a way to rid ...rself of all the wrapping that's ...ttered about the floor, all the mess ...t's left after Christmas breakfast, ...all the needles underneath the ...ristmas tree, then fishing may be ...answer. And don't fear, if you look ...und, there's sure to be a Bait and ...kle shop open for business.

The Mirror took a survey of the ...e major outlets for bait in Jensen ...ach, and found that, surprisingly, the only days that bring the slightest blink of the eye to them are Christmas Day and New Year's Day.

THE BAIT BOX will be open on Christmas Day, in all probability, but exactly when is not decided.

"The only day that we won't be open our regular hours is Christmas Day," said Chuck Shepard. "But we will be open sometime during Christmas Day--probably in the morning."

Regular hours (6am to 6pm) will prevail for Wednesday and Thursday, while regular weekend hours (5:30am to 8pm) will apply to Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Then, on Monday and Tuesday (New Year's Day), it's back to 6am to 8pm.

JENSEN BAIT AND TACKLE will adjust its hours on Christmas Eve (Monday-24), opening at 6am and closing at 5pm. The store will be closed on Christmas Day, but open from 6am to 7pm (regular hours) on New Year's Day. Regular hours also apply on Wednesday through Monday of this week.

THE SNOOK NOOK, meanwhile, will be open regular hours on Christmas Eve (6am to 7pm), but will close for all of Christmas Day. On Wednesday, it's back to normal with 6am to 7pm hours, and that will not change until New Year's Day, when the shop will once again be closed for the entire day. Regular hours resume once again on Wednesday, January 2. On the days that the store is open, gas is available, and according to Tom Stewart, "we've got more than enough for everybody."

FISHING SCENE-- The tagged trout contest at Jensen Bait and Tackle is still going strong, with, at last count, twelve trout in the Indian River, the same number that started.

However, since the beginning of the contest, which offers $300 to the first CONTEST fisherman that brings one in, began, one tagged trout has been brought in by a commercial fisherman, and another by a non-contest customer. The business is sure that others are being swiped by innocent fisherman just trying to catch anything, so about two a week are being added.

Also continuing are the weekly $5 contests for the largest catches in each of the following species-- bluefish, trout, black drum, snook and sheepshead. A seasonal prize of $50 will be awarded for the biggest overall catch will be awarded on April 30.

Entry fee for both contests is a combined one dollar.

ASSORTED CATCHES-- Charlie Arenz hooked five trout, up to two pounds, in the Indian River, using live shrimp, and Stan Korsak bagged four trout, up to seven and three quarter pounds, also in the Indian River, using shrimp.

Ten-year-old Eric Bennett, of West Broomfield, Michigan brought in an eight-pound snook using (Are you ready?) frozen shrimp!

The Wolverine hooked it two weekends ago, and it took a good while to bring in. When asked what time his catch was made, Bennett said, "from 1 to 2pm."

Cheryle Bowie also got into the action, claiming a 12½-pound drum on the west side of the catwalk beneath the Jensen Bridge. Bowie caught the beauty on live shrimp, and also bagged "four or five other drums."

Freeport is one of the fine cities of the Bahamas. When visiting, you will find its shopping based in the International Bazaar in the downtown area. The Bazaar is a simulacrum of market streets found in countries such as France, Spain, Mexico, Japan, and the Scandinavian nations and displays goods from these countries at bargain prices. Interspersed with the shops are cafes and restaurants serving various national cuisines. In addition, branches of Nassau stores are scattered throughout the Bazaar and a small straw market is located at one end for last minute souvenirs.

Freeport and the Bahamas is a very exciting and interesting spot to visit. Call JENSEN BEACH TRAVEL SERVICE, 1990 N.E. Commercial St., Tel. 334-1300 or SALERNO VILLAGE TRAVEL, 5571 S. eniors up in arms olidays greetings to all the seniors read this column and all those talk freely about problems of the ly. This is a happy time of the and we should put all our bles to one side, but darned if a ie of things didn't come up that d have immediate attention and seniors sure chewed'em over last : about like this.

pt. Joe a spry and salty old senior ked his friend Sam into a corner demanded, "What is the House of resentatives trying to do now, get the seniors up in arms. I thought said, they realized they better der the 24 million seniors in tion year and not vote down 'bills' ssing them?"

am backs away, to get finger king room, and replies as he shakes finger under Capt. Joe's nose, n't blame me for anything that the e does and before you blow your k, slow down enough to tell me what they did now, that's got you upset."

"Here's what they did, according to ember AARP National News letin. After, all the the letters n seniors and lobbing by AARP and r National Senior Organizations," tters Capt. Joe, "They voted 223 to 7 against FTC making regulation to trol exorbitant funeral expenses, they voted 234 to 166 against ting up mandatory hospital cost tainment; that's all they did".

"All right, all right", agrees Sam, u sure got cause to complain, I just 't understand it, what reason was en for this turn down?"

"That's one of the troubles", replied ittle calmer Capt. Joe.. "after they e us a slap in the faces they never m to bother with an explanation. If knew the reason behind the n-down' it wouldn't be so hard to ke"

Then, Ralph, who had been taking it in, added, "All I could find out from ding the article, was that the ntinental Association of Funeral d Memorial Societies, who support the FTC Regs, asked, "How do ese representatives explain to the ople back home that they voted to y them of this helpful regulation." nd, it looks as though when the merican Hospital Association came t against hospital cost containment, e representatives felt they better go ong with them, or else. It would be a od idea to tell them right now, that e don't like it and they better reconsider, what say"?

Emily the avid reader of weekly agazines, could hardly wait to add er two cents worth and as soon as there was a break, butted in with, "I st saw in a magazine, where Congress has expanded its bureaucracy from 5000 to 23,000 and increased its cost 16 times to 1.1 billion a year and in that time they have gotten us into our worse mess ever at home and abroad, maybe if they had less helpers, they could think for themselves".

Then, Alice who also reads everything in sight, with a bright smile, said, "You know, us seniors must be something, either dumb as a yew or just plain 'happy go-lucky' for that same magazine, had an article on the "Happiest Americans", and it turns out to be the elderly. And, further more a survey showed that we were the least happy group in 1957. Good for us seniors, crisis after crisis and we still can laugh about it. It may not be the right way to live, but it's a way to survive and like it".

Treasure Coast Senior Services have their bus in service, even to taking a group to the Lantana Big Tree on Saturday. Also, they had a wonderful Christmas party, Tues. Dec. 18. Doris Walker, Site Mgt. and helpers had trimmed the hall and tables with santas, green ferns, red candles, and at each place there was a candy cane and a calender greeting card.

Promptly at 3 p.m. the band started to play its foot twichin' music. The band is composed of Connie Betsch, piano; Allen Betsch, drums; Dick Aumiller, Guiar; Pat Taylor, harmonica and program director Elliott Arluck on the sax. The members danced every number and perhaps the most fun was the 'gals' tag dance. At frequent intervals there would be a break and the members would be entertained by the singing of Fred Schmitz and Clarence Smith, both of Spanish Lakes; both were just great. Also, Pat Taylor gave a mouth organ solo, so it was a very exciting party. Then, of course santa had some gifts: the members gave Dorris some nice things and she in turn baked many batches of home made cookies, plenty for all and supplied many gift prizes that were drawn by numbers.

It could be heard, as they enjoyed their meal, "This was the best party we have ever had", anyway it was a great one.

CHAPTER EVENTS

Because of the holidays, the printing and publishing schedules have to be changed, making it necessary to have the 'copy' submitted a week ahead, so the coverage of some events has to be postponed.

The regular monthly AARP Health Porgram and Picnic will be held Thurs. Jan 3 at Langford Field. The Health Movie and discussion will be on Mental Health, starting promptly at 9:30. The 2 previous health programs have been excellent (Cardiovascular and Diabetes). They consisted of a commentated movie, a talk on the subject by local expert, distribution of pamphlets and a question and answer period. All those with Mental Health probs or know of those needing this type of help, please make it a point to attend.

Then, after the program all willing hands will get busy on folding and addressing the Golden Eagle News Bulletin for mailing to members. After that it will be 'brown-bag' lunch time and time for chapter announcements and informal discussion of projects. All AARPers and interested seniors are urged to attend.

Classes that were omitted during the holiday season will be resumed in January with the '55 Alive/Mature Driving' to start Mon. Jan. 7. This is that new course that is being tried out in California, Florida, Illinois and Virginia by the US Dept. of Transportation. More than 10,000 older drivers have participated so far in this program designed for the special needs of those over 55, whose sight, hearing and reflexes may not be quite what they were 50 years ago, but with information of this program can safely 'cope' with problems of modern everyday driving.

Those interested in enrolling for the next class, contact Leon LaRoche, 334-0416. Also, those interested in the regular Defensive Driving class, that has been a favorite for years, contact: Colleen Watts, Adult Education Dept. 287-6400 Ex. 131. By the way, both courses will earn the 10 percent discount on Colonia Penn Ins.

Some 'snow birds' (Winter Residents) don't have 3rd. class mail forwarded, so miss the AARP News and Modern Maturity, therefore, from time to time items of interest will be mentioned, here are a few for this week.

National dues will go up to $4.00 per year starting Jan 1, 1980 (Chapter dues remain the same non inflationary $1.00). AARPers now can get a 30 percent discount on Avis car rental, by showing their membership card. Also, AMTRAK hopes to offer the elderly and handicapped a reduced fare similar to the air lines program. Write to Chm. of Committee on Aging, Florida's Claude Pepper, to help speed up this Amtrak legislation.

Homemade Nativity scene

Joseph Cullen's Christmas this year won't be as happy as it has in the past, but he's maintaining a tradition that should add a touch of cheer for others.

Earlier this year, Cullen's wife, Evelyn, died. This Christmas will be the first one in nearly half a century that he hasn't shared with her.

So, for Cullen, this Christmas will understandably be a bit sadder than past ones. But you could never tell it from standing in front of his home during the holiday season. In his front yard is a large nativity scene which Cullen built about 10 years ago. He cut each of the figures out of plywood with a small jigsaw, then carefully applied a sort of wallpaper to the figures to give them their identity. Over the years the paper fades, and he says maybe next Christmas he'll have to apply new paper for the third time.

After his wife died, and Cullen was faced with the prospect of celebrating Christmas day with his son's family in Pompano, his first inclination was to chop up the figures and use them for firewood. But the Christmas spirit still burns too brightly in him for that, so he saved them and once again has them on display at his Beau Rivage East home on 2221 Sunset Boulevard.

In addition to the lighted nativity scene, Cullen has attached speakers and plays Christmas music over them.

Cullen's hobby is woodworking. It's something he has done since converting an old horse barn into a large residence years ago. "I dug the cellar for it myself, with just a shovel," he said proudly as he described all the work he put into the project.

Cullen built a lighted cross for that home, and even before that, when he was a renter, he always had some sort of Christmas display for passersby.

"We always felt strongly about Christmas. We always had a display," he said. And this Christmas is no exception.

THE PREPAYMENT PENALTY

QUESTION: I recently applied for a loan on my ten-unit apartment building. The bank agreed to lend an amount which was acceptable to me, and the interest rate and repayment terms were also acceptable. My problem is this: part of the loan commitment indicates that I cannot pay off the loan for five years even if I want to. It also indicates that I will have to pay a significant charge in the sixth year if I want to pay off the loan. Though the charge diminishes each year, I will be faced with an additional payment to the bank in the event I want to prepay the loan until the tenth year. Could you comment on this loan provision for me?

ANSWER: The bank has offered you a loan which includes a provision referred to as a "prepayment penalty." As a borrower, it would be most desirable for you to retain the right to repay the loan without charge. However, lending institutions prefer to withhold the prepayment option, because normally a borrower will exercise that option only under circumstances which would be unfavorable to the lender. For example, if interest rates were to decline, you as the borrower might be tempted to obtain a new loan at a significantly lower rate and pay off the original loan. This obviously works to the disadvantage of the lender.

The question you must resolve is how much you're willing to give up for the right to repay that loan. Perhaps the lender will review his commitment and, in return for an increase in the interest rate or some other consideration, remove the prohibition against prepaying the loan. Should the leader be unwilling to do this, it is possible that another leader might.

In any event, you must decide whether to proceed with the loan under these circumstances or attempt to renegotiate.

Be sure to check with your adviser regarding this and other technical mortgage loan questions.

DOUBLE HEADER—The Holiday Out Christmas party was a double celebration for Mr. and Mrs. Frank Paz, who were also marking their 25th wedding anniversary. They were among the revelers enjoying dancing to live music and sharing the arrival of Santa Claus.

Christmas card for boat people at Prince of Peace

A giant Christmas card, created as a reminder of the plight of the boat people in the South China Seas and of the starving people in Cambodia, is on display in the narthex of the Prince of Peach Lutheran church.

The card, 44 by 28 inches, was made by Peg Smith, church school superintendent and local art teacher. A white dove is shown against a field of deep blue. The dove symbolizes peace, which members of the congregation are praying for.

According to church member Trudi Ward, the card is more than a symbol. She explains that the congregation is working toward the peace they seek by signing their names to papers reserved for Christmas greetings to other members of the congregation. The money saved that would have been spent on cards and stamps is donated through the Lutheran World Hunger Appeal to alleviate the sufferings of the Cambodians and the boat people.

Mrs. Smith's husband, John, made an easel for the card, and the Junior Luther League is in charge of the project.

The card was made by Peg Smith. Members of the congregation are donating money they would normally spend on Christmas cards to each other to a fund for the boat people and Cambodians. A BIG DAY- Last Thursday was a big moment for the St. Lucie Community Theatre, when ground was broken for a home of its own on the riverside park of Fort Pierce. Many civic leaders attended to congratulate the membership, including, from left, banker Whitey Hallstrom, Fort Pierce Mayor Buell Brown, and City Commissioner Grover Leslie. At right is Joan (Mrs. Bert) Andrews, who has headed the finance drive committee. The theatre, when complete, will be a center for tri-county lively arts of all kinds.

Sick Santa Claus makes deliveries anyway

...but he had to cancel Sandpiper Bay tee-off

BY DONNIE WILKIE

If only the kids knew...

Santa Claus is very sick this morning (Tuesday). He has been sick since last week, in bed with the flu, and there is no indication yet as to just when he will recover.

"I haven't felt good all week," he said this morning, just minutes after completing his world-wide trip of love in record time, just under eight hours.

Santa Claus was supposed to appear at the weekly round of the Sandpiper Bay Men's Golf Association last Thursday, but at the last minute, had to cancel. The reason was a severe case of the flu.

"I regret to announce that Santa called Tuesday night from the North Pole and told me he couldn't make it," said Publicity Direcotr Charlie Helmer in announcing the cancellation. "He says, though, that if he stays in bed and gets a lot of rest, he may be able to make his Christmas Eve rounds."

Still feeling the effects of a 103 temperature, Santa pulled himself away from his chair (pictured at the right) long enough to do his work last night.

"It hasn't been easy," he said this morning. "I wasn't feeling too good, but I just can't disappoint all those millions of people that are waiting for my arrival. So I had to do it."

Helmer was disappointed, but said he could understand why Santa Claus, with a 103 temperature and a sleigh to guide in just four nights, would cancel his appearance.

"We're hoping he can make it next year," he told The Mirror. "We haven't officially invited him yet, but we're sure he can make it—unless he gets sick again."

Santa was scheduled to arrive in Port St. Lucie from the Pole on last Thursday morning, when he was to play an entire round of golf with club President Bob Wilson, Tournament Chairman Jim Healy and Fergy Ferguson.

"He's a golfer, you know," added Helmer. "And a pretty good one at that."

But how would Santa Claus, living in the colds of the North Pole, and with all that work to do making everyone's gifts, find time to practice, or even play ONE ROUND of golf?

"I think he takes periodic vacations and comes to Sandpiper Bay," chuckled Helmer.

The club's publicity chairman said that only the members of the committee knew about Santa's visit until the cancellation.

"The President was devastated," said Helmer of Wilson, "when he heard Santa couldn't come."

"I don't know how long it will take to recover," said Santa this morning. "I think the best thing for me now is to get some rest, and then I might be alright in a couple of days. I'm just happy that I was able to make so many people happy last night with the presents I delivered. There was a lot of big stuff, too. May reindeer had to struggle just to get off the ground."

"I was really looking fdrward to playing down there (at Sandpiper)," he remarked. "The weather is so nice, and so are all the people. But I was really sick. Next year, though, next year I'd like to go down there and play a coupld rounds of golf!"

The Search begins for a New Head Coach

BY DONNIE WILKIE

Martin County High School Head ootball Coach Fred Chase resigned ednesday.

Now the search begins for a new oach.

Chase held the post for two seasons ust under two years in time), ompiling an impressive 14-7 record, ncluding an 8-2 season in 1978 and District 11-AAAA runner-up honors behind undefeated Lake Worth.

The strangest part about this coaching change (Martin County will, when the new coach is hired, have had four in just over four years) is that the detractors of Fred Chase have suddenly disappeared. It's almost as if they have retreated, satisfied that their mission — getting rid of Chase — has been accomplished. There is nothing but compliment after compliment coming from virtually every direction.

"I was very impressed with Fred as both a coach and a person," said Martin County Principal Dale Cryan Friday. "He was extremely knowledgeable in the game of football, and he also had a great feeling for the kids. He was concerned with the total product. He cared about a kid's performance on the field, in the classroom and in life."

Then, basically, Martin County High is looking for "another Fred Chase?"

"We're looking for an individual with the same outlook. A coach that will keep the football program in perspective. In that sense, yes, we are looking for another Fred Chase."

Rumors have filled the wintery air around the school, suggesting who will take over the Tiger post. Many have pointed to either of Chase's two closest assistants — Bud Beakes and Gary Jones.

"Some members of the coaching staff have notified me that they are interested in the job," confirmed Cryan. "Gary Jones has said that he is interested."

"But Coach Beakes has been out of town for a couple days, so I haven't really been able to talk with him yet," added the Principal.

"I would like to see the position filled by mid-January, but we won't do anything until after we get back from the holidays." I wouldn't want to get in a situation where we were hiring someone in August or September. He would need the opportunity to meet with the players and get to know them."

Asked if he felt a new coach might have a problem because the existing players are so loyal to Chase, Cryan replied, "I don't think so. Anyone that would accept the responsibility of taking over a program at a school where we place so much emphasis on athletic and academic excellence would have to be able to deal with kids. Otherwise he wouldn't be the coach."

Fran Con wins showdown

Fran Con Construction shut down he normally dangerous Certified arpet Cleaning offense, taking over ole possession of first place in the iddle Division with a 4-0 victory in splimist soccer at Langford Park ednesday night.

Four different players registered oals for the winners, who upped their ecord to 5-0-0, good for six points, in he division. Coach Fran Zaccheo's quad has scored impressive victories over TNT Appliances (9-0), Bandy Universal (4-1) and Certified.

The game was fierce throughout the entire 60 minutes, with each side fighting for the edge until Fran Con widened its lead in the final 15 minutes of the second half.

Richard Billings notched the contest's first goal, and Brian Polhemus, who scored three times in the lopsided win over TNT, soon followed with a second.

Later tallies by Laurie Henry, who has proven deadly as a shooter, and Sean McGlynn capped Fran Con's third consecutive win.

Certified dropped to 2-1-0, still good enough for second place behind their conquerors.

Ken Gary, Certified's biggest goal-scoring threat, was stymied by the rugged Fran Con defenders, who have given up just one goal— a boot by Bandy's Mark Dieffenbach a week ago— in their three matches.

IN OTHER ACTIONlast week, Timmy Ouelette scored three times, while teammates Mac Lowry and Tom Beert each getting two goals, as a much-improved Winner's Circle team smacked Angelo's Plumbing, 7-4, in an Upper Division game.

"I'm trying to make the teams balanced," said Soccer Director Ted Bretas. "Winner's Circle wasn't doing too well, so I took a good player off PW & Sons (a team that was plastering every squad in sight) and gave him to Winner's Circle."

Beert was the lucky player, and it seemed obvious from the start that he was blending into the flow of the Winner's Circle offense with ease.

Another player that helped Winner's

Better than a Heisman: "The Wilk"

Ah, yes, it is Christmas again

You know what they say about the Christmas season- It is always better to give than to receive. So, in that spirit, I take you back to some of the heretofore unrecognized and never-to-be recognized again accomplishments of the 1979 sports seasons

One thing is for sure. After this, the people named below will certainly be more in the mood for giving than receiving.

THE "WHY DON'T WE MAKE A THOUSAND COPIES OF THAT?" AWARD: To Ed Wagner and Charlie Arens, who make a weekly appearance in The Mirror's fishing column.

Did I tell you that this thing starts off slow?

THE "DO WE HAVE A 1848-D YET" AWARD: To Martin County High School Head football Coach Fred Chase, for his uncanny ability to catch the hundreds of pennies thrown at him by Martin County fans this season

THE "NIFTY PIECE OF SCHEDULING" AWARD: To Fort Pierce Central basketball coach Bill Wright, who managed to play all of his team's first seven games at home

THE "NIFTIER PIECE OF SCHEDULING" AWARD: Also to Bill Wright, for establishing his freshman team in 1978-79 with a grueling, four-game schedule. The opponents were, in order, Martin County, Martin County, Martin County and Martin County.

THE "LOYAL AND THE SLEEPY" AWARD: To anyone who does either of the following-- A) Follows Martin County High's basketball team to St. Petersburg for their 10pm game this Thursday night, or B) Falls asleep beside his or her radio waiting for the game to begin

Donnie Wilkie

THE "SUCKER OF THE YEAR" AWARD: To Ernie Bell, the coach of the defending District 11-AAAA runners-up. John L. Leonard. It is estimated that the Leonard coach has consumed a total of 1,483,592 lollipops during his team's games

THE "WHAT DID I DO WRONG" AWARD: To Coach Herb Seal and the Jensen Beach Razorbacks junior football team, who, despite rating an odds-on favorite to win their conference championship, posted an 0-7 record during the regular season

THE "WHAT DID I DO RIGHT" AWARD: Also to Herb Seal, whose Razorbacks then defeated the Fort Lauderdale Southwest Saints in the local football festival, 12-0.

THE "I DON'T REMEMBER YOU" AWARD: To everyone in the Ocean Breeze Shuffleboard Club who told me they remembered me from when I was "this high" (They hold their hand two inches off the ground)

THE "ANYTHING TO MEET THE QUOTA" AWARD: To the Jensen-Rio Fire Department's softball team, and that includes myself, who, faced with a slow summer for fires, solved their excess water problem by drowning it on the field, en route to an 0-7 record.

THE "I'M NOT COVERING THAT ONE, IT WAS YOUR IDEA" AWARD: To the guy that now proposes a softball-football game between the Razorbacks and the Firemen

THE "FOREVER THE QUOTE OF THE YEAR" AWARD: To Jensen Beach Optimist Club Manager Bill Mang, who, assessing his aging softball team's chances before a Civic League game with junior squad First Federal, said- "They've got the youth, the speed and the quickness, but we've got the experience, the Gerrtol and the Ben-Gay."

The Gerrtol and the Ben-Gay lost, 11-4

THE "WHERE'S THE RAMP, MARTHA?" AWARD: To the various area boaters who attempted to set sail on "Lake Langford," the permanent body of water on the football field at Langford Park, left after Hurricane David and other heavy rains

THE "STOP RUNNING WHILE WE FLIP A COIN" AWARD: To the participants in the Sunday night Port St. Lucie Slo-Pitch softball league, who, for the season's first ten weeks, played on an unlined (no foul lines) field. Not to worry, the problem was recently solved

Youth Soccer

Ray Wooley scored twice in a losing cause for Angelo's Plumbing, while Chad Barker and Jeff Van Curen each added tallies throughout the action

The results of the weekend games in both Jensen Beach and Port St. Lucie could not be printed in this week's editions of The Mirror, due to an early sports deadline. Complete coverage of those games will appear in next week's editions. There are no games scheduled for tomorrow night (December 26), but play will resume on Saturday afternoon, with three games slated for Langford Park.

At 1:30pm, Fischer-Olds (0-2-0 at press time) faces TNT Appliances (0-2-0) in a battle of the winless; At 2pm, Stuart National Bank (1-1-0) squares off with Action First Realty (0-1-1) in a Lower Division game; and at 3pm, or immediately following the Fischer-TNT Middle game, will be the matchup featuring PW & Sons (2-0-0) and Angelo's Plumbing (1-2-0), an Upper Division tilt.

On Sunday, Bandy Universal (1-1-0) takes on Certified (2-1-0) in a Middle game at 1:30pm; Hartman Real Estate (2-0-1) accepts the challenge of Clemons Realty (0 1-1) in a Lower struggle; and at 3pm, Winner's Circle (1-1-1) takes the field against Carpet Corner (0-2-1).

BEWARE! the "RUST MONSTER"

QUESTION

What can I do about rust in my car?

ANSWER

Take care of your car. Dirt holds moisture — a dangerous rust agent. Wash your car thoroughly ... including those "hard to reach" spots. If you see rust forming, act fast. Rust may be removed from metal by the use of a polishing powder provided the rust has not been forming for too long a time. A thick coat of rust will require the use of an emery wheel, a grindstone, or a file for its removal. If you have a severly rusted section, it may be necessary to replace the rusted section with new material.

The ultimate Christmas story; an interview with Santa Claus

MIRROR: Santa, many people are convinced that you are a myth. This must be difficult for you to deal with.

SANTA: Well, you have to consider the purpose of Santa Claus. I represent all the good will and charity and love that people associate with Christmastime. You know, it's very easy for people to accept and believe in the evils of the world. We watch them on television, read about them in the newspapers. They surround us, and sometimes we lose sight of the beauty and goodness that really does exist.

MIRROR: But children believe in you.

SANTA: Ah yes, children. You have to realize that children can find beauty in anything. A big appliance box is a thing of beauty to the child who pictures it converted into a secret hiding place. Children have wonderful imaginations and they have no problem accepting the fact a man dressed in a red suit delivers toys to children all over the world once a year just because he loves them.

MIRROR: What about the department store Santas with their pillow stuffed bellies and cotton beards?

SANTA: Well, cheap labor, you know how it is. But even Santa Claus can't be everywhere at once and my local help really does aid in promoting the Christmas spirit. As a matter of fact, they make all those little children so happy.

MIRROR: But Santa, hasn't it really gotten too commercial, what with the Christmas advertising campaigns starting right after Thanksgiving and Artificial Christmas trees?

SANTA: Like the department store santas, the ads and decorations help to remind people that the Christmas season is a time of joy and cheer. Admittedly, too many people think of Christmas only in terms of extra work, presents to buy, cards to send. It becomes nothing more than a giant, tinsel-covered headache. But at some point--either by the warmth of the fireside, or by the splendor of a softly lit Christmas tree, or in the company of those you love, the real meaning of Christmas comes out.

MIRROR: What is the real meaning of Christmas?

SANTA: Now, that is the question of the hour. As I see it, the real meaning of Christmas is hope. Christmas offers people the chance to lay down their burdens and responsibilities for a while and express the love for others that they forget to show during the rest of the year.

MIRROR: But Santa, Christmas is snow and pine trees and Jack Frost nipping at your nose. Is it possible to celebrate Christmas in Florida with palm trees and 80 degree temperatures?

SANTA: Oh my dear, you're confusing Christmas with a Currier and Ives painting. Christmas is the 80 degree temperature of the heart--didn't I explain that? All the decorations and atmosphere in the world will not make Christmas happen if you don't feel it in your heart.

MIRROR: Santa, you must receive all kinds of requests for Christmas presents. What is the most frequent one for 1979?

SANTA: Well, I've gotten quite a few regarding the hostages in Iran.

MIRROR: Will you be able to bring them home?

SANTA: (sigh) I don't know about that. You know, even Santa Claus gets frustrated sometimes. I deliver Barbie dolls and boxes of crayolas and people think it's wonderful, but the really important things I have to leave up to someone else. All I can do is hope that the love and peace I inspire brings the hostages home safely.

MIRROR: Santa, you don't seem to be as plump as you used to. Aren't you supposed to keep up the image of a fat and jolly old man?

SANTA: I know, I know. I took up jogging in the off-season and Mrs. Claus is trying her best to fatten me up for Christmas.

MIRROR: Well Santa, the Mirror would like to thank you for speaking to us. Is there anything you have to say to the people of Indian River County?

SANTA: Why, exactly what I'm saying right now. Merry Christmas.

MIRROR: The Mirror was in search of the ultimate Christmas story and we figured that you were it.

SANTA: Ho Ho Ho. Well, thank you for the compliment, but I'm afraid you're too late. The ultimate Christmas story was written 2,000 years ago.

O Come All Ye Faithful

May all enjoy the beauty of this Holy Season
